FOREWORD

THE ORGANIZING COMMITTEE of the Games of the Xth Olympiad fulfils its final obligation by presenting this Official Report of its organization of the Games. To allow an event of such permanent interest to remain only in the memories of participants and observers would be to impair the achievement; and it is therefore wise that the preparation and circulation of a permanent record are prescribed as part of the work of the Committee in connection with the Games.

The Committee takes pleasure in the performance of this duty, and in presenting the result to the International Olympic Committee, the National Olympic Committees, the International Sports Federations, and to the State of California, whose people bonded themselves for the support of the Games. To all these the Committee expresses its gratitude for helpful co-operation.

In order that the combined magnitude and beauty of the Games of 1932 may be faithfully represented, it is necessary that the Report be comprehensive and pictorial; and in order that the experience gained in the organization of these Games may be of value hereafter, it is necessary that the Report be particular. It has been the purpose of the Committee to omit nothing which is pertinent and to add nothing which is superfluous. It ventures the hope that the Report may be found to approach as nearly as possible the ideal thus proposed.

XTH OLYMPIADE COMMITTEE OF THE GAMES OF
LOS ANGELES, U. S. A. 1932, LTD.

HONORABLE HERBERT HOOVER

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
HONORARY PRESIDENT OF THE GAMES OF THE XTH OLYMPIAD

FOUNDING OF THE MODERN GAMES

THE revival of the modern Olympic Games, the first of which were celebrated in Athens, in 1896, was due to the idealism and enterprise of Baron Pierre de Coubertin, who forsook a political career to devote his energies to the introduction of sport into the educational life of the youth of his native country, France. To this end, he traveled widely in America and England to study the organization of sport and its importance in the activities of the people of those countries.

It was in 1892 that he first propounded his desire for a new era in international sport. At a meeting that year of the Union des Sports Athletiques in France, he made his first public announcement as follows:

“Let us export our oarsmen, our runners, our fencers, into other lands. That is the true Free Trade of the future; and the day it is introduced into Europe the cause of Peace will have received a new and strong ally. It inspires me to touch upon the further step I now propose, and in it I shall ask that the help you have given me hitherto you will extend again, so that together we may attempt to realize, upon a basis suitable to the conditions of our modern life, the splendid and beneficent task of reviving the Olympic Games.”

For a time there was no perceptible result, but two years later, a circular to all Athletic Associations, pointing out “the necessity to preserve in sport those characteristics of nobility and chivalry which have distinguished it in the past, so that it may continue to play the same part in the education of the peoples of today as it played so admirably in the days of Ancient Greece,” brought together in the Amphitheatre of the Sorbonne, in June, 1894, enough delegates from various countries to organize the International Olympic Committee. At this meeting Baron de Coubertin proposed that the first Games of the new era be celebrated in Athens, which met with the unanimous approval of the newly-formed Committee, thus launching the series of Modern Olympiads the Xth of which was celebrated in Los Angeles.

BARON PIERRE DE COUBERTIN

FOUNDER AND LIFE HONORARY PRESIDENT OF THE OLYMPIC GAMES

An Expression

By Baron Pierre de Coubertin, Founder of Modern Olympism

“THE main issue in life is not the victory but the fight ; the essential is not to have won but to have fought well. To spread these precepts is to pave the way for a more valiant humanity, stronger, and consequently more scrupulous and more generous. These words extend across whole domains and form the basis of a healthy and happy philosophy.

“The Olympic movement gives the world an ideal which reckons with the reality of life, and includes a possibility to guide this reality toward the great Olympic Idea : ‘Joie des muscles, culte de la beauté, travail pour le service de la famille et de la société ; ces trois éléments unis en un faisceau indissoluble.’

“May joy and good fellowship reign, and in this manner, may the Olympic Torch pursue its way through the ages, increasing friendly understanding among nations, for the good of a humanity always more enthusiastic, more courageous and more pure.”

COUNT DE BAILLET-LATOIR
PRESIDENT OF THE INTERNATIONAL OLYMPIC COMMITTEE

COUNT DE BAILLET-LATOIR

Organizer of the Modern Games

“I PROMISED at Prague to discuss this matter and I keep my word so that henceforth no one can ignore it.” The speaker was Count de Baillet-Latour, and the meeting referred to was the Olympic Congress held in Prague in 1925, at which time he was elected President of the International Olympic Committee.

The quoted words constitute the opening paragraph of a remarkable document by the hand and over the signature of Count de Baillet-Latour, a pronouncement which makes its author and modern Olympic history inseparable, because it marked the beginning of the first orderly arrangement and organic control of the Olympic movement throughout the world.

In a few hundred words, simply phrased but thoughtfully constructed, embracing all of the fundamentals, this document has provided the foundation for what may properly be termed the Constitution and Laws governing modern Olympism. By its tenets are the Olympic Games organized and administered. Under its sound principles will the ideals and purposes of the Games be fostered and protected for the future. If the written word is fated to survive the human frailties, then this document and the Games will live as do the stones of the mountains.

Count de Baillet-Latour, President of the International Olympic Committee, carries a great weight of responsibility and personifies the self-sacrifice and unselfish devotion to the Olympic principles manifested by all members of the International Olympic Committee, the many National Olympic Committees, the International Sports Federations and the Organizing Committees, on the administrative side of the Olympic movement, and of the athletes and other entrants on the competitive side of the movement.

THE OLYMPIC STRUCTURE

THE INTERNATIONAL OLYMPIC COMMITTEE is the central world-governing body to the extent that it "directs the rules of the Games, draws up the general programme and decides the qualifications of the amateur athletes chosen to take part ; settles the place where each Olympiad is to be celebrated, its Executive Committee constituting the Jury of Honor during the Games."

In each Olympic country there is a National Olympic Committee which joins the Sports Associations of that country in qualifying its competitors for the Games. These committees enforce the decisions of the Jury of Honor and organize the financing, transport, housing, and general management of the teams. The National Olympic Committee of a country also has the responsibility, when the Games are awarded to its country, of providing the facilities and of organizing and managing the Games (except for technical administration) or it may delegate its duties and authorities so to do to a special Organizing Committee, which shall thereupon assume these responsibilities, thus eliminating the National Olympic Committee from such matters.

Each of the authorized Olympic sports is governed by an International Federation. These Federations have branches for their sport in all Olympic countries, and they make the rules for their sport (in keeping with the amateur definition as prescribed by the International Olympic Committee), decide the programme of their sport jointly with the Executive Committee of the International Olympic Committee, control all sports equipment, and administer the technical side of the events, appoint the Ground Judges (officials) and the Judges of Appeal, and deal finally with all complaints.

Thus, we have the International Olympic Committee surrounded by the National Olympic Committees and the International Sports Federations, the three groups constituting the self-perpetuating structure of world-wide control of the Olympic movement. These groups meet periodically in what is known as the Olympic Congress to settle questions put in the Agenda by the International Olympic Committee for improvement of the procedures. These Congresses afford the opportunity of hearing from the Organizing Committee of the country in which the Games are being held as to the adequacy of its plans and preparations.

The Olympic Congresses, by means of their representatives among the nations, in collaboration with the National Olympic Committees, strive to play their part by urging in every possible way the physical development of youth and the culture of sport, so that respective discipline and the spirit of sportsmanship will lead to peace, unity and happiness among the different groups, as among the different peoples.

THE GAMES OF THE XTH OLYMPIAD

THE GAMES of the Xth Olympiad have come and gone. They are now a page of history. To us who were participants in their activities, their memories are still very real and vivid, memories of a splendid spectacle, splendidly staged, splendidly acted.

But in a very short while these memories will lose their sharpness. They will be softened, and as time passes they will gradually become merged into a recollection almost dreamlike, as of a ship that passes in the night. And as this dreamlike picture recurs to us in future times, proudly shall we participants recall our participation and as proudly shall we say, "Of all this was I a part."

This volume is prepared by, and primarily for, the participants in this quadrennial celebration of the modern prototype of the ancient Grecian festival. These are not alone the young men and young women who actually competed in the events. Among the participants in the Olympiad are the members of the National Olympic Committee of each entered country, the representatives of the International Federations governing the technical administration of the fourteen Sports, the members of the International Olympic Committee, which is the central world-governing body of modern Olympism, and the Organizing Committee with its managerial personnel.

These are the members of the modern Olympic family, whose influence is spreading over the five continents and affecting the sentiments of millions. Not all the members of the named groups could be here for the celebration of the Games but all had their share in bringing about the celebration. Forty nations actually sent their representatives, to sustain the flame of the Olympic Torch and to carve again in imperishable form the inspiring Olympic doctrine of good sportsmanship and peace and better understanding among the peoples of the earth.

To us the matter is one of reverential sentiment. We make this statement without fear of those who may scoff at such an idea in this materialistic age. Sentiment, moulded from the finest of human emotions, rests at the very foundation of the Olympic movement. Sentiment achieved the glorious success of the Games of the Xth Olympiad. Sentiment sustained the whole Olympic family in carrying on, in a period of world-wide economic depression and political strife, and even at the cost of extreme self-sacrifice, in the determination to make the Games of the Xth Olympiad an outstanding success.

It must be remembered that the Olympic movement has no form of established financial subsidy. The talents of competitors, the labor of officials, and the efforts of all are given without hope of reward other than the honor which they may bring to their country, to their sport, and to themselves.

The story of the success of the Games of the Xth Olympiad is carved in the depths of a dark abyss of world depression. But the spirit of Olympism has illuminated that abyss, and those who came to the Games from all the far corners of the earth have taken home with them something of a new hope engendered by a finer understanding of and a more intimate friendship for their fellow man, regardless of race or creed.

We who are writing this chronicle are members of the Organizing Committee in the city in which the Games were held. It is natural that we should be proud of the credit that has come to our Country, to our State and to our City from the success of this great international event. It is our purpose here, however, to record the simple but important fact that our own efforts amount to but a small part of the whole story.

With vision and pardonable ambition, Los Angeles sought the award of the Games, by the International Olympic Committee, twelve years before the year of the Xth Olympiad. The city's request was granted three years later. The child of modern Olympism was born in Europe, and nourished there by the leading Olympic countries, whose ministrations to the well-being and growth of the child could more easily be applied until it should have that strength that comes with maturity. Our hope to secure the Games was not more audacious than was the courageous decision of the young Olympic giant to leave the regions with which he had become so familiar and to travel great distances to a new Olympia.

With the award of the Games to a city on the far western shore of the North American Continent, at the very border of the waters of the Pacific, the Olympic family undertook an effort that was destined to tax its spirit to the utmost. Los Angeles fully understood and deeply appreciated this fact, and prepared to do her part in such a manner as to merit the confidence that had been shown.

The record of our city's conception of its responsibility, and of its preparations from beginning to end, discloses one fundamental and guiding principle, which was to adhere strictly to the Olympic ideals and to make such contributions in its organization of the Games as would strengthen and perpetuate those ideals. Not a single note of commercialism was allowed to permeate the consummation of the task.

In the years 1930 and 1931, when the ugly head of depression loomed up before the eyes of all, Los Angeles could have retrenched in her broad programme of preparations, without neglecting any of her specific Olympic obligations. It was determined, however, that preparations should continue as scheduled, to the end that everything should be as nearly perfect as possible for the celebration of the Games, even though general participation of the nations was doubtful and liberal patronage by a financially depressed public hardly to be expected.

THE REDWOOD TREES OF CALIFORNIA ARE THE ONLY LIVING THINGS WHICH WERE ALIVE
IN THE DAYS OF THE ANCIENT OLYMPIC GAMES

These things are frankly stated as a testimonial to the Olympic spirit and an explanation of what it did for our city. We were inspired by the confidence the Olympic nations had placed in us and we knew intimately, day by day, the great struggles being made by the Olympic organizations throughout the world to honor our city by their presence and their participation.

What insufferable ingrates we should have been to conceive our responsibility other than we did. That, perhaps, is the great beauty of it all, the inspiration that comes to individuals, organizations, cities and entire peoples, who once have a definite contact with the principles and ideals of Olympism.

One and all have been kind enough to bestow great praise upon Los Angeles for her complete and thoughtful preparations for the Games and for their administration. That is all deeply appreciated but, after all, does it mean so much after one has sat in the stand and watched a youth who has been for years preparing body and mind at great self-sacrifice, who has yielded his annual holidays for several years in order to obtain a leave of ten weeks' absence from his employment, who has parted from friends and family and traveled half way round the world, carrying in his heart the honor of his country — to see this boy at the end of it all come struggling down the track, giving the utmost that is in him, and facing defeat with a smile.

Such boys challenge the spirit and soul of any city or nation and that challenge well met is certainly none too much as a return.

When, in the Opening Ceremony of the Games, the Parade of Nations came down the track, until some two thousand participants from forty different countries had received the acclaim of the tumultuous crowd, few among the spectators knew the story of self-sacrifice that lay behind that scene.

By their presence within her walls Los Angeles has been honored as have few cities, and this honor was accentuated by the condition of the times in which the event occurred. Therefore, Los Angeles desires here and now to record her deep appreciation of the distinction thus conferred upon her, and in this we feel that we are expressing also the sentiments of the people of the State of California and of the United States of America.

"THE OLYMPIC CITY"

ORGANIZATION OF THE GAMES OF THE XTH OLYMPIAD

IT IS the desire of governing Olympic bodies that this Report be a chronicle of the entire history of the organization of the Games of the Xth Olympiad. We shall therefore confine ourselves to the facts and take no editorial license other than endeavor to arrange the facts in narrative form, as interestingly as possible, continuing to serve the principal objective, which is to be informative.

The Olympic Protocol provides for what is known as the Organizing Committee, to which is given full responsibility for the organization and general administration of each celebration of the Games. In the Los Angeles Games, the Xth Olympiade Committee of the Games of Los Angeles U. S. A. 1932 Ltd. was the Organizing Committee. The entire Olympic family has become well acquainted with this organization during the four years of its work. Few know, however, of the events occurring since 1920 which led up to, and had an important part in, the creation subsequently of the Organizing Committee. These events, and the men associated with them, were in fact the foundation upon which the preparations for the Games of the Xth Olympiad finally rested.

In the year 1919 there was formed in Los Angeles, at the instance of the publishers of the daily newspapers of the city, the California Fiestas Association, for the purpose of reviving the old Spanish fiestas typical of the history and atmosphere of our State and City.

In preparing for this undertaking, it became obvious almost immediately that the contemplated project could not proceed without there first being provided the facilities of a stadium. Thus it was that the plan was first approached, for what later became the Los Angeles Memorial Colosseum, now known to the Olympic world as the Olympic Stadium.

The California Fiestas Association was dissolved in 1920 and its members subsequently formed the Community Development Association. This organization was incorporated as a non-profit association, with an allowed maximum of twenty-one members and directors. Its personnel consisted of outstanding leaders in the civic and business life of the community. The Association immediately engaged in a joint plan with the governments of the city and county of Los Angeles under which it financed and erected the Los Angeles Memorial Colosseum in Exposition Park, and agreed to administer the structure for a period of years, at the end of which time the structure would pass to the city and county of Los Angeles, jointly, together with all revenues derived from its usage, in excess of the cost of maintenance and improvements, and the carrying on of the stated purposes of the Association.

For several years there had been a growing consciousness in local sports circles of the possibility of holding the Olympic Games in Los Angeles. At a meeting of the California Fiestas Association held November 26, 1919, Maximilian F. Ihmsen, one of the directors, presented the suggestion that later resulted in the first formal application by the City of Los Angeles to the International Olympic Committee for the award of the Games.

The then President of the Association, William May Garland, had planned to sojourn with his family in Europe in the summer of 1920. He agreed to visit the Games at Antwerp and present to the proper Olympic body such official invitations as might be prepared. When Mr. Garland left for Europe he carried with him the official invitation of the City of Los Angeles, of the County of Los Angeles, of the State of California, and of the Community Development Association, with expressions from leading civic organizations. He also took with him plans for the projected stadium and data concerning the natural attractiveness of Los Angeles as a city in which to hold the Games.

Upon his arrival in Antwerp, Mr. Garland was introduced to the International Olympic Committee, then in session, and presented his documents and orally urged an award to Los Angeles. He was very courteously received by the Committee and was informed that although the Games of the VIIIth Olympiad (Paris, 1924) had been definitely awarded and a tentative commitment made for the IXth Olympiad (Amsterdam, 1928), the invitation of Los Angeles would be given every consideration in respect to future awards.

It should be stated that Baron Pierre de Coubertin, founder, and now Life Honorary President of the Olympic Games, who was in these earlier years President of the International Olympic Committee, evidenced a strong personal support of the invitation of Los Angeles. Baron de Coubertin some years previously had visited California and the State had won for itself a warm place in his heart and his esteem. Thus it may fairly be said that Baron de Coubertin was the first man to begin moulding what has since become a world-wide Olympic friendship for Los Angeles and California, for which this commonwealth will ever be most grateful.

Following the meeting at Antwerp, Mr. Garland was honored by being elected to membership by the International Olympic Committee as one of the three representatives for the United States of America. This post Mr. Garland has since held, and throughout the years he has attended virtually all meetings of the Committee and is at this time the senior member for the United States.

At the meeting of the International Olympic Committee in Rome in 1923, Mr. Garland formally suggested consideration of the award of the Games of the Xth Olympiad to the United States for the year 1932. His colleagues unanimously and enthusiastically gave a rising vote of endorsement to the suggestion. There immediately followed a similar action designating the city of Los Angeles specifically for the honor of the Xth Olympiad.

The award proved to be inspirational to Los Angeles. The Memorial Coliseum had just been finished by the Community Development Association, and immediately other civic and private organizations, and the populace itself, became Olympically minded with a splendid realization of the responsibility that lay ahead through the award of the Games to the city.

An early result of this spirit was the construction of the Olympic Auditorium as a private enterprise, to be operated in behalf of suitable sports in the intervening years, but with the definite objective of the structure becoming a useful facility in the Games. It will now be recalled that all of the weightlifting, boxing, and wrestling competitions were held in this Auditorium.

Privately owned country clubs were inspired to expand their plans for polo and other equestrian sports, and as a consequence of this movement the Riviera Country Club later provided a magnificent site for the equestrian sports of the Games.

Several athletic clubs with complete facilities were developed subsequent to the award of the Games and the City government expanded its playground and recreational facilities and equipment. All of these developments laid the foundation upon which the Organizing Committee later assumed its great task.

The Community Development Association, through its stadium project and its efforts in securing the Games, became logically the organization to contemplate most seriously the responsibilities that are those of an Organizing Committee. But the Association realized that little could or should be done until after the Games of the IXth Olympiad in Amsterdam (1928), and during the four years that followed the award of the Games in 1923 it therefore devoted itself to numerous other civic projects of major importance to the community.

In 1927 the Community Development Association took the first step in preparation for the Games by presenting to the Legislature of the State of California the necessity of financial aid from the State. This resulted in the passage of a measure generally known as the California Olympiad Bond Act of 1927. The principal provisions of this Act were (1) for the issuance and sale of State bonds in the sum of one million dollars, to yield a fund to be administered specifically in behalf of the expenses of preparing for and the holding of the Games of the Xth Olympiad; and (2) the creation of the California Olympiad Commission of five members to administer the fund to the "Olympiad Corporation" mentioned in the Act, which corporation, under the words of the Act, was contemplated and designed to become what is known under the Olympic Protocol as the Organizing Committee.

The California Olympiad Bond Act of 1927 involved an amendment to the constitution of the State of California. It was necessary, therefore, that the same be approved by the voters of the State at the ensuing general election, to be held November 6, 1928.

The Community Development Association realized that the work of presenting this question to the voters would constitute the first major Olympic activity. It therefore decided to incorporate under the laws of California a non-profit association which would meet the requirements of the Olympic Protocol for an Organizing Committee as well as to become the "Olympiad Corporation" contemplated in the wording of the Act.

On February 10, 1928, such a corporation was formed and became the Organizing Committee, legally known as the Xth Olympiade Committee of the Games of Los Angeles U. S. A. 1932 Ltd., a title evolved through correspondence with Count de Baillet-Latour, President of the International Olympic Committee. The membership of the Organizing Committee was as follows:

Russell H. Ballard	Harry Chandler	Dr. Robert A. Millikan
Dr. Frank F. Barham	Louis M. Cole	Henry S. MacKay, Jr.
Harry J. Bauer	Edward A. Dickson	Maynard McFie

A. M. Chaffey	Fred W. Kiesel	G. G. Young

Early in 1928 the Organizing Committee decided that its major activities in that year would be to secure a favorable vote by the people of the State on the financing plan previously referred to, and to make a study of the Olympic organism as it might be disclosed at the Games of the IXth Olympiad at Amsterdam.

It is proper at this point to set forth the basic policies established by the Organizing Committee for the carrying out of its task.

It was necessary, first, for the Committee to decide upon the type of organization that would be built and enlarged upon from time to time, to assume the manifold departmental activities incident, first, to complete preparations for the Games, and second, for their actual management and administration. It was recognized immediately that responsibility automatically rested with the Committee and would rest there in the last analysis. The great number and complexity of major requirements in respect to active preparations, and the innumerable important details, constituted a formidable picture of effort and responsibility.

Reduced to its simplest terms, the task was of such dimensions as to dictate the necessity for a carefully selected, closely-knitted, and highly efficient executive staff, upon whom would be placed the entire responsibility of the work, guided by the fundamental policies of the Committee and under constant liaison between the Committee and such staff.

The Committee realized that a simple but strong formula of procedure, which should at once provide protection to the Committee in its responsibility to the community and the world-wide Olympic family and at the same time not constitute an interference in the effectiveness of the work of the staff, was advisable. The Committee chose from among its own membership one of its Directors, Zack J. Farmer, and appointed him General Manager, and to him also was affixed the established Olympic title of General Secretary.

AMSTERDAM, 1928 — LOS ANGELES, 1932. THE TWO GENERAL SECRETARIES, MAJOR G. VAN ROSSEM AND ZACK J. FARMER, CONFERRING IN LOS ANGELES, 1930

In the spring of 1928 the General Secretary instituted a campaign to effect a favorable vote by the people of the State of California on the million dollar bond issue. Later in that year the Committee sent the General Secretary to Amsterdam, where he made a careful study of the organization of the Games and made the initial contacts with the various Olympic groups which were to become so important later in carrying on his work so far from the seats of the various governing Olympic bodies. Several weeks were spent in Amsterdam, where the fullest co-operation was extended by the Dutch Committee, its President, Baron Schimmelpenninck van der Oye, and the General Secretary, Major G. van Rossem.

Mr. Garland attended the Games at Amsterdam in his capacity as President of the Organizing Committee and as senior member of the International Olympic Committee for the United States.

In Amsterdam the Olympic officials were intensely busy preparing for the Games, and this precluded as intensive a survey of organization as had been hoped for, although the surface examination and general observations made proved later to be invaluable.

The Games of the IXth Olympiad were an outstanding success. During the years of their organization the Dutch Committee brought into tangible form what had become almost a lost record of procedure in the organization of previous Games. As a consequence of the great fidelity of the Dutch Committee to Olympic principles and an appreciation of the seriousness of its task, an organization record was established that could well be taken as a basis upon which to build for the Games of the Xth Olympiad. In this connection, it is a fact that each Olympiad, through the spirit of co-operation of all branches of the Olympic family, has profited from the experiences of preceding Games and has contributed to the work of succeeding Games.

While in Amsterdam the General Secretary recognized in Major G. van Rossem, General Secretary of the Dutch Committee and a veteran of many previous Olympiads, one of the best informed of students of Olympic law and practice. Therefore, in his first work of getting the full dimensions of the task ahead, the General Secretary arranged to have Major van Rossem visit Los Angeles for a period of several months in 1929 and 1930.

This visit proved to be of great fundamental value, effecting a definite connecting link between the Games of Amsterdam and those to be held in Los Angeles, just as it is hoped that the Games of Los Angeles will form a contributory link with the coming Games of Berlin, and so on, through the years, evolving into a tangible, progressive movement for the organization of the Games in the Olympiads to come.

To the National Olympic Committee,
Greece,

The International Olympic Committee having chosen the city of Los Angeles as the place for the celebration of the Xth Olympiad, the Organizing Committee of the Olympic Games of 1932 has the honour to invite you to take part in the competitions and celebrations which will take place on this occasion at Los Angeles. The suggested period is the last week in July and the first week in August, final decision of the exact dates to be announced at the Olympic Congress in Berlin.

WILLIAM MAY GARLAND SIGNING
THE INVITATIONS

In the election of November 6, 1928, the people of the State of California overwhelmingly voted their approval of the Olympiad Bond Act, thus definitely recording the Olympic spirit of the State and the intention to meet all the obligations imposed in the award of the Games, and giving assurance of complete physical preparation and hospitality. It is interesting here to note that while it was thought at the time that considerably more financing would be required, the Committee ultimately managed to carry through the entire project of the Games without any form of financial contribution or subsidy other than the money yielded by the bond issue.

During 1928 the General Secretary set the nucleus of the executive organization that was to follow. With two secretarial assistants, he carried on the work of the Committee until December, 1929, when the first steps of staff expansion were taken, following which the organization grew steadily as the respective departmental activities were established in the chronological order that had previously been arranged.

The Games were to be held on the shores of the Pacific Ocean for the first time in the history of the ancient or modern Olympic eras. This fact precipitated the first major problem, involving the ability of participating nations to meet a greater cost than they had been accustomed to, as well as the extended length of time participating athletes would have to be away from home. Heretofore the majority of nations had been able to participate with comparative ease and with a minimum of expense, through the holding of the Games in Europe.

At this time the world generally was in a comparatively prosperous condition, but the new problem was still a formidable one. The first effort, therefore, was to capture the confidence of Olympic nations in behalf of Los Angeles by a convincing demonstration of the determination that every possible aid would be given participating nations, and that the preparations would be of such magnitude as to warrant every effort toward participation.

It was necessary that the Olympic Committees in all countries should be brought as close as possible to the pulsations of the Olympic city during the years of advance preparations. To accomplish this it was decided that the first organized department should be the Press Department, to serve as a bureau of information to Olympic groups as well as a news disseminating agency for the World Press.

The Press Department was organized in December, 1929, and immediately instituted what probably was the first systematic world news service during the preparatory period of an Olympiad. The Department extended its news service to reach all Olympic groups regularly, and this method of constantly spreading the news of the preparations going forward in Los Angeles accomplished the purpose of bringing the nations closer to the Olympic city in respect to their interest in the forthcoming Games, and of increasing that interest, and thus assisted the National Olympic Committee in each country in its ultimate arrangements for the participation of its athletes. The Press Department later directed the constructive publicity that preceded and accompanied the sale of tickets of admission to the public; and its final activity was, logically, that of rendering co-operative service to the great number of correspondents who came to Los Angeles to report the Games through the World Press.

On the first of February, 1930, invitations were sent by the Organizing Committee to all countries in general, inviting their participation in the Games of the Xth Olympiad. In countries where there was a National Olympic Committee the document was transmitted to that Committee through the senior member of the International Olympic Committee for that country, or direct to the Committee in the absence of an International Olympic Committee member, and in the case of countries having no official Olympic connection the document was transmitted through that country's representative at Washington. In addition to this procedure, the State Department at Washington transmitted an official communication to the United States Ambassador or similar representative in each country, requesting him to call to the attention of the government to which he was accredited the fact that invitations had been issued by the Organizing Committee of the Games of the Xth Olympiad inviting that country's participation in the event.

Immediately following the dispatch of the invitations, the attention of the Committee turned to the forthcoming Olympic Congress, to be held in Berlin, in May, 1930. This Congress, which is held in a designated city approximately two years before the Games of each Olympiad, consists, first, of a series of executive sessions of the International Olympic Committee and the various International Sports Federations, for the consideration of matters coming within their particular authority, after which these groups consolidate, with the delegates sent from the National Committee in each country, into the general Olympic Congress, where decisions are made on all matters pertaining to the forthcoming Games that have arisen subsequent to the last preceding celebration.

HON. C. C. YOUNG, FORMER GOVERNOR OF CALIFORNIA, WHO AIDED OLYMPIC LEGISLATION

One of the principal purposes of the Congress is to hear and consider the report on preparations by the Organizing Committee for the forthcoming Games. This is wisely provided for in order that the Olympic organizations may, at a sufficiently early date, learn definitely that the Olympic city has properly and fully undertaken its task, giving warrant of success, or subject itself to decision of the Congress in the failure of such warranty. The Organizing Committee of the Xth Olympiad, therefore, crystallized all of its plans for adequate preparations in as definite a manner as possible so far in advance of the Games. A complete report was prepared and submitted to the Congress, through the International Olympic Committee, and this report was augmented by an exhibit of photographs, architects' designs, motion picture records of stadiums and other facilities in Los Angeles, and a budget of costs for traveling expenses of the participating groups, with plans for the housing, feeding, local transportation, entertainment, and so forth, of the athletes and officials while in Los Angeles, together with the tentative programme and arrangement of events as provided for under the Protocol.

The Committee realized, from the beginning of its task, that the proper housing, cuisine, and general accommodations for the athletes while in Los Angeles were matters of paramount importance. It was felt that the particular needs of the athletes under training called for a special housing arrangement, departing from hotels or similar types of existing facilities characteristic of all urban centers. In its research of this subject the Committee decided upon the Olympic Village plan, which later was to become an outstanding feature of the Games. Exceeding the requirements under the Olympic Protocol, the Committee, in a further effort to reduce the costs for participants, decided to offer all of the facilities and advantages of the Olympic Village to the participants on a basis of charges considerably less than actual cost. A rate of two dollars per day was fixed for each Village occupant toward the cost of his housing, dining service, local transportation, entertainment and general care.

This charge, together with the reduced transportation rate, made it possible for the Committee to submit in its report to the Congress a suggested budget of five hundred dollars or less for each participant from European shores, covering his journey to Los Angeles, his stay in the city for thirty days, and his return home, as against preliminary estimates by various countries averaging as high as fifteen hundred dollars.

The Congress immediately observed, through the report of the Organizing Committee, that Los Angeles already had taken such steps as would solve the biggest problems facing the participating countries. The report was enthusiastically received and had the effect of inspiring complete confidence in the preparations of the Olympic city and stimulated the determination of the delegates to return to their respective countries and win national support for liberal participation.

The suggested man-unit budget of costs for each country, and the Olympic Village plan, as disclosed in the report, created great interest in the Congress. It was difficult for the members to believe that the Organizing Committee was prepared to build an entirely new, specially designed, and completely equipped international "city" for the sole use of athletes and officials participating in the Games. The cost was obviously so great as to exceed very materially the total income to be derived from the nominal charge proposed for each resident.

The problems of meeting the special requirements of various nationalities, and of insuring the exclusive and disciplinary type of accommodation found in the past to be necessary in the training period for the teams, were so well known as to be considered insurmountable. It was recognized that the plan involved actual fulfillment of one of the most fundamental ideas or ideals incorporated in the founding of the modern Games, but there had been no previous demonstration in history of the feasibility of "bringing the nations together to share a common life under a single roof."

The delicacy as well as the magnitude of the plan suggested by the Organizing Committee made a deep impression upon the Congress. It is amazing that the Congress, composed of men of practical experience in matters affected by the plan, so promptly and unanimously adopted the Village plan. That action of the Congress appears to the now more experienced Organizing Committee of Los Angeles as having been a naive expression of confidence by men who had reasons to be doubtful of something that they hoped could be achieved but which possessed all the elements of failure. Perhaps, too, the Organizing Committee had a child-like faith that the Olympic doctrine would surmount the obstacle of international doubt naturally to be expected upon the launching of such a plan. It may truly be said, therefore, that the members of the Olympic Congress in Berlin joined with the Organizing Committee of Los Angeles, through adoption of the Olympic Village plan, in a test of the strength of the Olympic doctrine and in a determination to show the world that Olympism as an instrument for physical and cultural advancement is impregnable to the prosaic prejudices of race or creed.

The Congress officially designated the period for the Games of the Xth Olympiad to be July 30 to August 14, inclusive, 1932.

Before departing for the Berlin Congress, the General Secretary prepared an anticipatory budget of all operations which, together with the proposed report to the Congress, was approved by the Organizing Committee. This action of the Committee was the "casting of the die" in its assumption of responsibility for the community which had been awarded the Games, and laid the foundation for the Executive Staff to carry out the entire programme of preparations in continuous motion, following the Congress.

Governor C. C. Young, of the State of California, previous to the Congress, had appointed the California Olympiad Commission provided for under the California Olympiad Bond Act, for the purpose of administering the State fund to the Organizing Committee and of co-operating with the Committee in carrying out the purposes for which the fund had been provided. This Commission held its first meeting October 12, 1929. The members of the California Olympiad Commission were the following:

William May Garland	Louis B. Mayer	John C. Porter
William F. Humphrey	Malcolm McNaghten	Warren B. Bovard
		(Deceased 1930)

Thus, in the summer of 1930, upon his return from the Congress, the General Secretary immediately proceeded with the appointment of an Executive Organization, filling one position after another as the months elapsed and the burden of the work required it.

The Executive Council of five was formed of heads of several departments. Its members were:

Gwynn Wilson

H. O. Davis

William M. Henry

J. F. Mackenzie

There has been liberal comment regarding the character and efficiency of the organization of the Games. The principle of the Executive Council, together with the type of men comprising it, probably was most responsible for this.

The Executive Council laid the foundation for all departments before they were organized, later selecting their personnel and furnishing the working formulæ. All plans and policies emanated from this Council, and as the many departments came into existence their work was guided by the Council up to, and including, the period of the Games, the Council consummating the post Games work and concluding their activities with the preparation of this Report.

The manager of the Press Department, W. M. Creakbaum, closely associated himself with all activities in order that informative reports might go forward regularly to the Olympic world during the period of preparations.

Following the formation of the Executive Council the Organizing Committee appointed a Control Committee composed of three of its members, as follows:

Harry J. Bauer

Frederick W. Braun

Maynard McFie

Subsequently, another member, LeRoy Sanders, was added.

The Control Committee assumed the very important responsibility of acting as liaison between the Executive Organization, which had been given full authority to proceed, and the Organizing Committee, which was responsible for the acts of the Executive Organization.

CONTROL COMMITTEE

The Control Committee met regularly, throughout the period of intensive preparations, in the office of the General Secretary, and thus kept itself constantly informed through the Executive Council of the work of the Executive Organization, and of the status of the budget, which the General Secretary had undertaken from the beginning and which, because of the many flexible items thereon, required constant and careful balancing as the preparations matured or assumed definite proportions. The Control Committee also acted as a clearing house for suggestions emanating from the Executive Organization and the Organizing Committee and constituted at all times a well informed and sound court of final decision on any debatable questions.

This plan made it possible for the Organizing Committee to confine itself to fundamentals and at the same time enabled the Executive Organization to proceed without delays, providing for all concerned a feeling of security as to the correctness of the course being followed in all matters.

From the beginning of its work the Executive Organization functioned also under another important principle of operation. An internationally known firm of Certified Public Accountants was appointed to keep the books and all other financial records. Mr. William A. Bowen, a member of the Organizing Committee, acted as Legal Counsel.

The work of the Executive Organization, insofar as it involved commitments in any form, received, on the one hand, preliminary examination, advice and decision by Legal Counsel and, on the other hand, independent recording and accounting in respect to all receipts and expenditures of money.

Comprehensive systems and strict rules were established by the Executive Council to effect constant control by the accountants and legal counsel in respect to all matters properly coming under their purview.

Early in the work careful study was given to the complexities of the problem of adequate insurance. Many different types of property and forms of activity required the protection of insurance in the interests of the participants as well as of the Organizing Committee and of other corporate and governmental entities involved, including the interests of spectators at the Games. As a consequence, a most thorough and complete line of insurance was effected which adequately protected the interests of all concerned in the Games.

In order to facilitate arrangements between the Organizing Committee and the representatives of each nation the Organizing Committee, acting under the Protocol, arranged with the National Olympic Committee in each country for the appointment of an Attaché, native to that country but resident in Los Angeles, and acquainted with the language and customs of that country. In some instances the resident consul was selected. The Attachés served an important purpose following the arrival of the delegations, by acting as liaisons between the managements of the teams and the various departments of the Games organization. They also arranged many entertainments for athletes and officials through the various foreign societies in Los Angeles.

Up to this point in this chronicle, it has been the intent to present a simple outline picture of the fundamental elements underlying the organization of the Games. In succeeding pages, the chronicle will become departmentalized under various subject heads and in greater detail.

As a matter of policy minutiae have been purposely omitted wherever possible in order to prevent the text from becoming confusing. Considerable detail, of course, will be found in some subjects where it is felt a purpose is served. In some instances, where the average reader might expect to find intensive detail but where it is absent, such detail has been omitted, for the reason that it is felt that while it might be interesting it would be misleading in respect to future Olympiads because of the difference of conditions that will obtain.

THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL

GLORIOUS BUT UNNAMED

THROUGH the several months immediately preceding the Games there grew an ever-increasing organization of departmental workers until, at the height of the Celebration, several thousand men and women, under scores of classifications, were working loyally day and night for the success of the Games of the Xth Olympiad. These individuals were the inseparable links of the great organization chain that carried the stress and strain of the task without a break, and to a happy conclusion.

The Management of the Games had laid the plans and effected the formulæ. Upon this final organization rested the responsibility of the fulfillment of the myriad plans and hopes of the Management.

It is impossible to give in this Report the names of this army of true Olympians. Representatives of the World Press, visiting spectators and Olympic officials have commented generously on the efficiency, on the thoughtfulness, and on the courtesy of the ticket seller, the gate keeper, the usher, the guard, the Village attendant, the police officer, and of all who made up this host of loyal servants to the celebration of the Games of the Xth Olympiad and to the principles and ideals of Olympism.

All of this reached a glorious climax through the mass spirit of the spectators and those directly or indirectly connected, in whatever capacity, with the celebration of the Games.

Sensitive writers have called it "a spiritual something that permeated the atmosphere." The chroniclers of this Report feel themselves unequal to express a proper tribute or to interpret competently the thoughts of others on this subject. But we feel certain that this unnamed army of workers, if they could be heard, would all say:

"We were honored in the privilege of participating in the Games."

This, then, shall be our tribute:

SPORTS BOOKLETS AND BULLETINS

THE Games of the Xth Olympiad were to be held in Los Angeles many thousands of miles from the fountain heads of Olympic authority. One of the first duties of the Organizing Committee was to set up the machinery by which it could contact the various Olympic organizations throughout the world in order that its own preparations would be approved and completed, and that rules, regulations, and other information could be compiled and broadcast to the many nations that they might complete their own arrangements for participation in the Games. Personal conferences were obviously impossible. It was therefore necessary to depend entirely upon correspondence.

Before important letters were written, members of the Executive Council would thoroughly discuss the subjects to be covered, just as though their friends in other lands were sitting around the table with them, and would endeavor to anticipate their viewpoint on the matter at hand. The Olympic groups abroad were thus enabled to reply in the same comprehensive manner, resulting in surprisingly few instances of conflicting thought.

It is interesting to note here that through this correspondence, in addition to the necessary business which was transacted, the representatives of the Organizing Committee became remarkably well acquainted with the hundreds of persons with whom they were corresponding, so closely did the correspondence approach the personal contacts for which it was substituted.

The Protocol (Paragraph XII) provides that:

“The Organizing Committee shall make all necessary arrangements for the celebration of the Olympic Games in accordance with the general regulations adopted by the various congresses . . . The technical celebration of the Games is governed by the rules . . . which determine the functions of the National Olympic Committees and the International Federations under the direction of the International Olympic Committee. The Organizing Committee must enforce the strictest observance of the technical rules of the International Federations, these Federations having the right in each sport to choose the juries and have the control of the athletic equipment and the technical direction of the events.”

The responsibility of carrying out this provision of the Protocol was placed in the Sports Technical Department, which proceeded to establish contacts with the International Federations governing the sports chosen for the programme of the Xth Olympiad.

PREPARING DISTRIBUTION OF SPORTS BOOKLETS TO THE NATIONS

The great distances between Los Angeles and the countries of the different Federations made it necessary for the Department to act, to all intents and purposes, as an agent of the Federations. Without exception, the Federations gave their hearty co-operation.

Numerous problems brought about by conditions purely local to Los Angeles were satisfactorily disposed of by correspondence, the Federations in every case showing a ready willingness to accept all suggested changes and adjustments made necessary by circumstances concerning which they had little information beyond that supplied by the Organizing Committee. This co-operation of the Federations greatly simplified the Committee's problems.

As preparations for the Games progressed, it became evident that, owing to the long journeys involved in coming to Los Angeles, the Federations would be considerably handicapped as to personnel. It was therefore decided that experts in the various sports should be chosen and organized into a working force capable of carrying out the routine work of preparing, and if necessary, completely staging each day's programme, so that no matter how limited the official personnel of each Federation might be, the Sports Technical Department would be prepared to supply all additional personnel required. A competent man was selected and placed in charge of each sport, fully capable of meeting any situation that might arise. While in no case was it necessary to take over the functions of any Federation, this organization at all times was prepared to handle any sport and lent every possible assistance to the governing bodies.

Under Paragraph XX, the Protocol specifies that:

"A special booklet containing the programme and general rules shall be issued for each particular sport."

Immediately after the tentative acceptance, at the Congress of Berlin in 1930, of the detailed programme of the Xth Olympiad, the Organizing Committee obtained from the various Federations the text for the booklets for each Sport.

The Committee decided to publish the Sports Booklets of the Los Angeles Games in four languages, namely, English, French, German, and Spanish, and on the receipt of the approved contents of each booklet, the Committee proceeded to make the necessary translations.

Following the final acceptance of the detailed programme in each Sport, at the meeting of the International Olympic Committee at Barcelona, April 25, 1931, the Committee proceeded with the actual work of printing the booklets, the text in all four languages having been submitted to and approved by all the International Federations involved. The National Olympic Committees had previously been circularized, and in most cases they had notified the Committee of the exact number of copies of each booklet desired and in what language.

The work of compiling, translating, printing and distributing the Sports Booklets occupied two years and was completed one year previous to the opening of the Games. The following quantities were issued in the four languages :

When it was thought desirable to call to the attention of the National Olympic Committees any matters of importance in connection with their plans for participation at Los Angeles, special Bulletins were sent out by the Organizing Committee. In this manner the National Committees were kept informed of all developments that might be of interest to them.

STADIUMS, SPECIAL CONSTRUCTION AND FACILITIES

FORTUNATELY several existing important sports facilities and establishments, located in Los Angeles, were available to the Organizing Committee. In most of these it was necessary to make changes and additions to adapt them to the special needs of the Olympic competitions. With the exception of facilities for the Swimming and Rowing events, for which it was necessary to provide new stadiums, it was found that all events of the Olympic Games could be held satisfactorily in existing structures. In respect to all stadiums and facilities, however, the Organizing Committee paid the expense incident to the use of the facilities and had full use and control of them.

Drafting and Engineering departments were set up in the central offices and plans for construction and alterations were begun. These plans were completed as rapidly as specifications were furnished by the International Federations concerning technical requirements for the competitions and by the various departments of the Committee for other requirements, such as seating arrangements, dressing rooms, and special installations.

It was impossible to anticipate in detail a large part of the construction that would be necessary. Arrangements were, therefore, made with a competent builder to handle all the construction to be done by the Committee, on a cost plus basis. A competent firm of architects contributed to the plans in an advisory capacity whenever called upon.

In building new stadiums or altering existing ones, for the Olympic Games, the Committee considered so far as possible the use to which those stadiums could be put after the Games were over. As a result the City of Los Angeles now possesses several permanent sports improvements which are among the direct benefits of the Olympic Games to the City.

The Olympic Stadium was turned over to the Committee complete in every respect for the general purposes for which it was built. However, this structure being the focal point of Olympic activity, there were many special alterations, conveniences and additions to be made to adapt the structure to the unusual requirements of the Games.

The Olympic Torch: It was decided to erect a large torch above the central arch of the peristyle, so designed that it would fit in with the general architecture of the Stadium, embracing a special arrangement by which a flame could be lighted at an appropriate moment during the Opening Ceremony and kept burning continuously until the termination of the Closing Ceremony. This Olympic Torch, which was 107 feet high, was constructed of concrete surmounted by a bronze fixture in the shape of a bowl. After many experiments, a practical means was developed of producing a suitable flame which could be ignited and regulated from an invisible location and could be plainly seen both by night and by day.

The Flag Pole and Public Address: A steel Flag Pole 78 feet high was erected at the west end of the Stadium field, just inside the border of the running track. A large Olympic Flag was flown from this mast throughout the Games. The largest type of electrical loudspeaker (announcing) system was installed, having twenty-three huge amplifying horns on the steel flag pole, approximately 35 feet from the ground, and arranged in such a way that announcements reached all parts of the vast Stadium in equal volume. The microphone and all controls for this system were located in the Sports Technical headquarters at the top of the south side of the Stadium.

The Scoreboard: A large Scoreboard was erected on the inner face of the peristyle over the main arch and just below the Olympic Torch. In this location it was plainly visible from all parts of the Stadium. The main face of the Scoreboard was forty-four feet wide by twenty-two feet high and was operated entirely from behind the board on three floor levels. The letters and numbers were twenty-seven inches high and could be read from the most distant seat. Nine rows of letters or numbers were available.

GWYNN WILSON
ASSOCIATE MANAGER

A portion of the top floor of the Scoreboard was devoted to the flag loft, in which three flags of every nation participating in the Games were carefully arranged so that they could be used in the Olympic Victory Ceremonies with a maximum of speed and minimum possibility of error. Three flag poles, the center one taller than the others, surmounted the Scoreboard at such an elevation that during a Victory Ceremony the spectators simultaneously saw the results of the event on the face of the board, with the flags of the Nations represented by the winners of first, second and third places flying immediately above the board.

Special Facilities: A running track four hundred and forty yards in length had been installed when the Stadium was built. This was reconstructed and shortened to exactly four hundred metres, in order to meet the Olympic requirements. Large dressing rooms were already provided. However, it was necessary to build partitions in these to afford the athletes requisite privacy.

There was an existing tunnel leading from the dressing rooms to the floor of the Stadium. This tunnel was extended to terminate on the inside of the track at the west end of the oval, so that it was possible for the contestants to reach the enclosure within the track without being seen by the spectators.

The seats in the Stadium were arranged according to the typical American plan, there being no specially constructed sections for officials and dignitaries. It was necessary, therefore, to build a Tribune for members of the International Olympic Committee, officers of the National Olympic Committees, presidents and secretaries of the International Federations, special guests, and the Juries. It was desirable to have the entrance for these officials through the main peristyle arch at the east end of the Stadium, and the Protocol specified that the Tribune be located at the finish line, which was at the middle of the south side. Several rows of seats were eliminated at the level of the peristyle entrance, in order to construct a depressed promenade from this entrance to the Tribune, so officials could reach their seats conveniently and without interfering with the view of the spectators.

ENTRANCE TO THE FENCING STADIUM

The Tribune consisted of fourteen tiers of loges extending from the level of the field up to the promenade. Comfortable chairs were placed in each loge and the seating of the various groups was arranged according to the Protocol. There were eight hundred and nine chairs in the Tribune.

A Press Box adequate for ordinary use had originally been constructed at the top rim of the Stadium opposite the finish line. Because of the large number of press representatives expected to attend the Games, it was obvious that the space provided would not be sufficient, and the existing press box was therefore turned over to the Sports Technical Department, to be used as a headquarters for communications, announcements, records, etc. Approximately two thousand regular seats just below the original press box were eliminated and replaced by seven hundred and six special places for press correspondents. These were constructed with adequate seating room and generous counter space for each representative, and with sufficient aisle space to permit easy access to the various parts of the press stand, including the Press Telegraph amount to the Board of Playground and Recreation Commissioners of the City of Los Angeles toward the construction of a permanent Swimming Stadium adjacent to Olympic Stadium. It was conditioned that this stadium must fully meet the requirements of the International Swimming Federation from the standpoint of the competitions and provide dressing rooms, official and press headquarters, and seating accommodations for ten thousand spectators. This proposal was accepted by the Board, and plans were jointly completed and approved by the Committee and the Board, and submitted for technical approval to the International Swimming Federation. Construction was started immediately upon receipt of this approval. The stadium was built of concrete with the exception of a 5000-seat wooden grandstand which was dismantled at the close of the Games. The Swimming Stadium was completed several months before the opening of the Games and reserved exclusively for training and competition of the Olympic athletes until the close of the Games.

Approximately six hundred chairs were added in the balcony for additional spectators. At the conclusion of the Games the Armory was restored to its original condition by the Committee.

OLYMPIC AUDITORIUM

Located at 18th Street and Grand Avenue. Seating Capacity, 10,000

The Olympic Auditorium was built in 1924, by a group of Los Angeles citizens. The Auditorium was leased by the Committee for a very nominal sum sufficient to cover expenses, for the purpose of conducting the training and competitions of the Boxing, Wrestling and Weightlifting events of the Games. The Committee constructed a new ring, a press stand, new dressing rooms, and a few other facilities, in order fully to adapt the Auditorium to Olympic use.

ROWING STADIUM

*Located at Long Beach Marine Stadium, Long Beach. Seating Facilities, 17,000.
(Permanent Seats, 5000, Temporary, 12,000, and Two Miles of Standing Room along the Course)*

Rowing presented a difficult problem. After a thorough survey of all the water courses adjacent to Los Angeles, none was found that met the requirements of the Rowing events. However, a lagoon was found within one of the parks of the City of Long Beach that was ideal in every main respect except length, it being about five hundred metres too short.

The Organizing Committee and the City of Long Beach entered into an agreement for the use of this lagoon for the Rowing competitions. The City agreed to dredge the lagoon to the necessary length and depth, to straighten the sides, and to enclose the course completely with a fence, with necessary entrances for the public, contestants and officials, all according to plans furnished by the Committee. The Committee agreed to construct grandstands, a boat house, docks from which to launch the boats, starting platforms, and buildings to contain dressing rooms, and completely equip the course for the competitions. In return for expenditures by the City of Long Beach in fulfilling its part of the contract, the Committee agreed to make all construction substantial and to give it all to the City at the conclusion of the Games. As a result, Long Beach now has a permanent Rowing Stadium, completely enclosed and controlled, to which admission can be charged all spectators if so desired.

After estimating the probable number of contestants in the various events on the Rowing programme, the Committee requested the International Rowing Federation to supply suggested plans for the course, including a design for a building large enough to house approximately sixty shells of various sizes. The Rowing Federation promptly went to work, and in due time a complete sketch, embracing not only the boat-house but other installations necessary for the course, namely the Judges' stand and boat landing, a building for officials and the press, and the launching and landing float and starting bridge, was received by the Committee from Switzerland, where the designs had been executed under the direction of the International Rowing Federation. With this sketch as a basis, numerous American authorities were consulted regarding technical detail, and through its own Engineering department the Committee completed the design and constructed the buildings and floats, adding another large building with dressing rooms capable of housing comfortably two hundred men.

GATE TYPE OF EQUESTRIAN JUMP

EQUESTRIAN STADIUM

Riviera Country Club. Seating Capacity, 9500

After a thorough survey of existing facilities in Southern California, the Riviera Country Club was selected as headquarters for all Equestrian events. It was found that there were not sufficient stables to take care of the Olympic horses in addition to the horses regularly kept there. An agreement was therefore entered into between the Committee and Riviera Country Club wherein the Committee agreed to pay the Club a sum of money to cover expenses incident to the use of the equestrian facilities of the Club for the Games, and the owners of the Club agreed to construct additional stables, a steeplechase course, and a permanent grandstand with a capacity of three thousand spectators. The Committee, in addition, set up the special equipment necessary for the training and competitions of the Equestrian events and also sixty-five hundred additional temporary seats.

CYCLING STADIUM

Pasadena Rose Bowl, Pasadena. Seating Capacity, 85,000

The Pasadena Rose Bowl was made available to the Committee, by the Tournament of Roses Association of Pasadena, for the Cycling events of the Games. It was necessary to construct the cycling track. In its desire to meet the requirements of experts, the Committee called upon the International Cycling Federation for its assistance and in due course a complete set of working drawings for a track was received from a Parisian engineer to whom this task had been assigned by the Federation. The track was completed according to these plans, and at the conclusion of the Cycling events of the Games, the track was given to the Tournament of Roses Association.

SHOOTING STADIUM

Los Angeles Police Pistol Range, Elysian Park

The Los Angeles Police Department turned their Shooting Range over to the Committee for use in the Shooting competitions. In order to adapt the range to Olympic purposes, it was necessary to designate the shooting distances in metres instead of yards. The range was otherwise improved in many ways to meet the requirements of the Games and all designs were approved by the International Shooting Federation and by the International Pentathlon Committee. At the conclusion of the Games all improvements were left installed, for the permanent use of the Los Angeles Police Department.

CROSS COUNTRY COURSES

The matter of providing suitable courses for the Cross Country events proved to be one presenting serious difficulties. The city of Los Angeles with its environs covers an enormous amount of territory, with almost no open ground. The entire district is crossed in every direction by a myriad of paved highways, whose unusually heavy motor traffic constitutes a tremendous hazard to any sport event covering a considerable distance close to the city.

Since the Marathon was required, by edict of the International Athletic Federation, to start and finish in Olympic Stadium, it remained only to pick out the most suitable course from the standpoint of traffic control, to prepare for this historic event. There was no choice as to type of roadway as the only roads available within many miles of the Stadium were all of concrete construction.

Any course in this congested area presented a policing problem quite beyond the comprehension of anyone unfamiliar with traffic conditions in Los Angeles. Here there are more motor cars per unit of population than in any other community in the world. It was manifestly impossible to provide adequate protection for contestants on more than one day, and the Committee therefore insisted on staging the other Cross Country events in districts where adequate protection could be provided. The 50,000 Metre Walk, accordingly, was staged on highways in the vicinity of Griffith Park, after this and several alternate courses had been submitted to the technical delegate of the International Athletic Federation and he had had an opportunity to make a personal survey of the situation. The Walking course was approximately 12,500 metres in length. This necessitated the contestants making two round trips in order to cover the specified distance.

The Cross Country Cycling Race had been set originally for 100 miles but was later shortened to 100 kilometres or about two-thirds of the original distance. It was felt that the only way in which the cyclists could be protected in this race was to stage the event on the highways most easily controlled. After considerable investigation, a course was laid out from the vicinity of Moorpark to join the Roosevelt Highway at Oxnard and finish on the outskirts of the city of Santa Monica. This course, which was paved for the entire distance, had a minimum of dangerous crossings and a reasonable number of grades, and for approximately two-thirds of its distance ran along the shore of the Pacific Ocean, where traffic could be completely shut off.

Without question, one of the most difficult problems faced by the Organizing Committee was that of locating and preparing a course near Los Angeles fulfilling the exact requirements of the International Equestrian Federation for the Cross Country phase of the Three-Day Event. Previous to the Games, there did not exist within a hundred miles of Los Angeles a steeplechase course as called for in phase B. Apart from the expense involved in constructing such a course, it seemed impossible to find a location for a course having immediately adjacent to it the roads required for phases A and C and the 10,000 metres of open terrain called for in phases D and E. The difficulty of locating such territory, which normally would be found only on a military reservation, and of securing control of the property if located and providing adequate traffic control and protection, seemed almost insurmountable.

But, thanks to the earnest co-operation of United States cavalry officers representing the International Equestrian Federation, who spent more than two years in investigating possible sites and in preparing the course decided upon, a course complying in all details with the requirements of the Equestrian Federation was finally constructed for the Cross Country events. It was a course which presented unusual difficulties to horses and riders accustomed to standard racing conditions, but on the other hand was absolutely typical to western United States and one whose difficulties presented a sterling challenge to the world's visiting riders and mounts.

A portion of phase D of the Equestrian Cross Country course was used for the Equestrian phase of the Modern Pentathlon, and presented no unusual difficulties to experienced horsemen although rather terrifying for those who entered the Pentathlon event without proper experience in cross country riding.

For the Cross Country Run phase of the Modern Pentathlon a 4000 metre hill and dale course was required and this was laid out on a golf course conveniently located close to the Olympic Village.

EQUIPMENT AND FACILITIES

IN ITS preparations for the Games, the Organizing Committee followed the policy of endeavoring to provide equipment which came within the necessary specifications and with which the athletes also were familiar. In every case the equipment provided came within the specifications called for in the rules, and in most cases the equipment was specifically approved in advance by the governing Federations.

Athletics: All hurdles and obstacles used in the competitions were constructed in the United States according to designs submitted to and approved by the International Athletic Federation. Jumping and vaulting standards came from manufacturers in the United States and in Finland; shots came from Sweden, Finland, Germany, and the United States; hammers came from Sweden, Germany, and the United States; discus from Sweden, Finland, Germany, Austria, and the United States; javelins from Sweden, Finland, and the United States; and vaulting poles from Finland and the United States.

Many special installations were made at Olympic Stadium for Track and Field events. Dirt runways for Javelin and Jumping events were installed, using a mixture of selected soils of the same texture as the running track. In the case of large areas, such as needed for the High Jump and Javelin runways, the soil was kept in place by an inter-laced structure of wood four inches beneath the surface. In the Broad Jump pits, a special leveling device, consisting of a heavy steel blade moving on runners at the exact height of the take-off board, made certain that the material in the pit was at the correct level.

Boxing: The Committee provided gloves and bandages for the Boxing events, the gloves being of an English make officially approved by the Secretary of the International Boxing Federation and the bandages all being of standard American manufacture.

Cycling: No special equipment was required for the Cycling events.

Equestrian Sports: The necessary number of hazards, all of which were of standard design approved by the American Horse Show Association, and of dimensions conforming strictly with the requirements of the International Equestrian Federation, were provided by the Committee.

Fencing: For the Fencing events, four dirt runways of clay mixture were constructed, covered by canvas and surmounted by continuous strips of special cork linoleum carpet of American manufacture approved by the International Fencing Federation. These strips were each fifty metres in length and two metres in width. The entire design was approved in advance of construction by the International Federation.

Field Hockey: Goals provided for Hockey were of American manufacture and balls were of English manufacture and approved by the International Hockey Federation.

Gymnastics: The Committee provided pommeled horses, long horses, springboards, and parallel bars, of American and Finnish manufacture. Several of the competing teams brought their own equipment and used it in the competitions. The horizontal bar, climbing rope, flying rings and other apparatus, were specially constructed for the Olympic competition by the Sports Technical Department, according to designs submitted to and approved by representatives of the International Federation of Gymnastics.

Modern Pentathlon: Equipment provided for the Modern Pentathlon competition included targets of a type recommended by the International Pentathlon Federation and purchased in Sweden, and a special device for operating the targets, the design of which was approved by the International Federation, and also the horses used in the Equestrian phase. These horses were provided by the United States Army after being trained for more than two years, and were generally regarded as an unusually fine and even group of mounts.

Rowing: Equipment for the Rowing events included speed-boats for the officials and other installations described elsewhere in this Report.

Shooting: No special equipment was provided for shooting except targets of American manufacture, approved by the International Shooting Federation.

Swimming: Numbered swimming caps were provided for contestants by the Sports Technical Department at the request of the International Swimming Federation, but in most cases these were not used. The diving tower and other installations were approved in design by the International Federation. Springboards at one and three metres were provided in both steel and wood, the steel boards being of German manufacture and the wood boards of American manufacture of a special design with adjustable fulcrum submitted to the International Federation by the Sports Technical Department and approved by them for the first time for international use. Water polo goals were of American manufacture, but all the balls were secured from an English manufacturer at the request of the International Federation, after tests of samples submitted from other countries. The pool itself was 50 by 20 metres in size and varied in depth from 1.5 to 6 metres.

Weightlifting: Bars and weights used in the Weightlifting events were of German manufacture, as specified by the International Federation of Weightlifting.

Wrestling: Wrestling mats were specially made in the United States according to specifications submitted to and approved by the International Wrestling Federation. They were of four separate inch thicknesses of special felt sewed into a special canvas cover and with a special soft "no burn" cover over all to protect the athletes from injury. A platform with sloping sides was constructed on a design approved by the International Federation. An electrical device for judging the wrestling events was loaned for use in the Games by its Swedish inventor.

Yachting: Monotype yachts of uniform design, specially equipped with new sails and rigging, were provided for contestants in the Monotype class, and the Committee, with the co-operation of the Southern California Yachting Association, arranged for the use of Star boats and six- and eight-metre yachts by visiting contestants.

Timing: Official timing in all events was done by means of thirty Swiss chronometers of the split-second type. These were loaned to the Organizing Committee and each was specifically tested for the Games and carried an official certificate as provided for in the rules of the International Athletic Federation.

TICKETS AND ATTENDANCE

THE International Olympic Committee, at its meeting in Barcelona, April 25 to 27, 1931, approved the final programme of each sport in the Games of the Xth Olympiad, as submitted by the International Federations. After this approval no changes could be made, and the Organizing Committee was free to broadcast the programme to the world and definitely lay the foundation of the organization that was to manage the various events.

The schedule, covering a sixteen-day period, consisted of competitions in sixteen sports and demonstrations, and comprised a total of approximately one hundred and thirty-five individual programmes, to be held in nine different stadiums, auditoriums and water-courses. It was the task of the Executive Staff to present this complex schedule to the public simply and intelligibly, and at the same time in sufficient detail to enable purchasers to make an intelligent selection of the events they desired to attend.

The world is informed and interested in sports generally, but few people have a true conception of the comprehensive field of sport embraced in the Olympic Games programme. In order to give a complete picture of all the competitions at a glance, the schedule was reduced to chart form, showing graphically the events of all the sports, those which would take place in the morning, in the afternoon, and in the evening of each day, and the stadium in which each event would be held. This chart was used as the key in preparing all Olympic tickets of admission.

The Games being held during the period from July 30 to August 14, inclusive, the numbers 30, 31, 1, 2, 3, and so on up to 14, were used in all cases to indicate the date of the events, and the letters M, A, and E were used to indicate whether the event was to be held in the morning, afternoon, or evening. These figures and letters became the standard code in identifying all events.

After determining the different types of admission tickets to be sold the public, three classifications were adopted:

(1) The Single Event Reserved Ticket: To be sold in advance.

(2) The Single Event General Admission Ticket: To be sold in advance for events where reserved seat tickets were not printed, and also to be sold on the grounds at all stadiums on the day of the event, in case the event had not been sold out in advance.

This ticket greatly facilitated the sale at the stadiums on the day of the event. It was more economical for the management and simplified the handling of the crowds. In selling reserved seat tickets on the grounds as the crowd is assembling there is necessarily discussion with the ticket salesman regarding the location of the seats, etc., which consumes time. In selling a general admission ticket, however, the purchaser takes the ticket without question and immediately proceeds into the stadium through any of the general admission entrances, making his own choice of the best available seat. Thus, also, he is more quickly seated.

(3) Season Tickets: These involved careful consideration, as there were many ways in which the complex programme of the Olympic Games could be divided or grouped for such tickets. It was finally decided to have two types of Season Tickets, as follows:

(a) The Olympic Stadium Pass: A transferable ticket which would admit the holder to the same reserved seat at all the events held in Olympic Stadium during the sixteen-day period of the Games, including the Opening and Closing Ceremonies, all of the Track and Field Athletics, the Demonstrations of American Football and Lacrosse, the Gymnastics, Field Hockey, and the two final days of the Equestrian events. In addition, this pass included the Olympic Victory Ceremonies held in Olympic Stadium each day for the winners of all Olympic competitions, whether the competitions were held in Olympic Stadium or elsewhere. This was a very comprehensive programme and the Olympic Stadium Pass proved to be the most popular ticket. It was realized in the beginning that several of the sports which were to be held in Olympic Stadium were not generally known in this country, and that by creating a ticket including these sports, those holding the tickets would attend them, thus making these sports better known and more popular. This is in exact accordance with the Olympic ideal of furthering interest in all sports throughout the world.

These tickets were featured throughout the period of the ticket sales. They were nearly twice the size of the individual event tickets, and each ticket was put in an individual leather case. They were printed in green and blue, for opposite sides of the Stadium, and the color of the container was carefully selected to harmonize with the color of each ticket. The special design on the plate was cut by the best obtainable steel engraver, who spent some three months completing his work.

(b) Season Tickets for Individual Sports: These were issued for certain sports where the programme was extensive enough to warrant such a ticket, and entitled the holder to a reserved seat for each programme of the sport for which the ticket was issued. These sports included Boxing, Wrestling, Rowing, Swimming, and Fencing.

ESTABLISHMENT OF PRICES OF ADMISSION

Faced with a heavy budget in the preparation for the Games of the Xth Olympiad, and with the prospect of a period of economic depression limiting the purchasing power of the public, the Organizing Committee was confronted with one of its most important and difficult problems in the establishment of the prices of tickets.

It was promptly determined that the prices should be as low as possible, so that the greatest number of people could take advantage of the opportunity of seeing the Games. Fortunately, most of the stadiums used had large seating capacities, which made it possible to meet expenses with a comparatively low admission charge. The admission prices finally decided upon were as follows:

Opening Ceremony	$3.00
Weightlifting	50 cents and 1.00
Fencing	1.00
Athletics	Morning, 50 cents and $1.00; Afternoon 2.00
Wrestling	Morning, 50 cents and $1.00; Evening, $1.00 and 2.00
Field Hockey	Morning, $1.00, Afternoon 2.00
Cycling	1.00
Swimming	Morning, $1.00, Afternoon 2.00

Gymnastics	$1.00
Lacrosse	2.00
Boxing	Afternoon, 50 Cents and $1.00; Evening, $1.00 and 2.00
Rowing	50 cents, $1.00, $2.00 and 3.00
Equestrian Sports at Riviera	$1.00 and 2.00
Equestrian Sports in Olympic Stadium	2.00
American Football	$2.00 and 3.00
Closing Ceremony	2.00

There was no provision for printing tickets for or charging admission to the following events: The Equestrian, Shooting, and Cross Country phases of the Modern Pentathlon, the Yachting and Shooting events, the Fine Arts competition, the 50,000 Metre Walk, and the Cycling Road Race.

Special Children’s Tickets were sold to children under sixteen years of age at fifty cents, for all events, at all stadiums, admitting to special general admission sections wherever general admission tickets were sold. As a result of this special price, thousands of children attended the events of the Games, — for example, 9,111 were present in Olympic Stadium on the afternoon of Wednesday, August 3, and 10,135 children attended the afternoon of the Marathon. In addition to these fifty-cent tickets, tickets were sold to children for the Rowing events, for twenty-five cents, admitting them along the banks of the Course.

Season Tickets were sold at approximately one-half the aggregate price of the daily admissions of the events to which they admitted, and Children’s Season Tickets were further reduced to one-half the price of the adult Season Tickets. The following prices were adopted for Season Tickets:

	Adults	Children
Olympic Stadium Pass	$22.00	$11.00
Boxing Season Ticket	12.00	6.00
Wrestling Season Ticket	9.00	4.50
Rowing Season Ticket	14.00	7.00
Swimming Season Ticket	15.00	7.50
Fencing Season Ticket	10.00	5.00

All ticket prices were established approximately a year and a half in advance of the Games. During the spring of 1932, the United States Congress passed a Revenue Bill which imposed a tax of ten per cent on all amusement tickets sold for fifty cents or more. The Bill went into effect June 20, 1932, during the rush of the Olympic ticket sale. It was a most inopportune time to make changes or adjustments, as hundreds of thousands of pieces of literature giving the price schedules had been sent to the four corners of the world. For this reason, and because of the prevailing economic conditions, the Organizing Committee decided that the total price of the tickets, despite the addition of the tax, should not be changed.

Under the Revenue Bill, the Organizing Committee could not pay the tax itself, it being required to collect the tax from the public. Therefore, the prices of all tickets were reduced on June 20, 1932, so that the price of each ticket plus the tax was equal to the price originally established. This actually decreased the income from the sale of tickets for the Games of the Xth Olympiad by $111,704.00, and coming unexpectedly at the peak of the preparations for the Games, was a matter of considerable concern to the Committee from the standpoint of the budget.

DESIGN OF TICKETS

In selecting a design for the tickets of admission, three principal features were given consideration.

(1) The tickets must clearly indicate the name of the sport, the date, the time of day, the location, the seating assignment, and the price. It was essential that tickets for each individual event should be easily identified, for with thousands of people purchasing tickets weeks or months in advance for many different events, they might, if error occurred, present the wrong tickets at the gates, which would cause inconvenience and embarrassment.

In order to guard against this possibility, there was printed on each ticket, in large type, the number representing the date of the event and one of the letters M, A, or E, as a code identification indicating for what date and time of day that ticket was valid. The tickets were further separated and distinguished by sports or stadiums, by selecting a distinctive color and printing all tickets for that sport or that stadium in that same color throughout. For example, all tickets for Swimming were printed in blue, all tickets for events at the Olympic Auditorium were in red, all tickets for Track and Field Athletics were in orange, and the tickets for all other events at Olympic Stadium were in brown.

While this method of identifying tickets was of great value in insuring the presentation of the right tickets at the gates, it was of even greater value in facilitating the stocking and counting of tickets in the Ticket Department, which handled an aggregate of 2,941,057 tickets provided for the Games.

(2) The tickets must not easily be counterfeited or duplicated. They had to be distributed many months in advance of the Games, and to all parts of the world, and every precaution must be taken to prevent any possible duplication or counterfeiting. A special "safety" paper stock was ordered from one of the most reliable paper companies in the United States. This paper was made in three layers, the middle layer being blue and the two outside layers white. The middle layer was specially watermarked and this watermark could be detected only by looking through the ticket against sunlight or other strong light.

All tickets except general admission tickets were printed from hand engraved steel plates. Each design had certain secret marks known only to a few members of the Executive Staff. A lithographed spot was printed over the face of each ticket in a different color from that of the engraved design. Great care was taken in the combination of colors used, to make it as difficult as possible to photograph the tickets successfully should duplication or counterfeiting be attempted. There were, besides, several other important protective features.

(3) The element of beauty was not overlooked in the ticket design. Although utility and safety were the prime considerations in the manufacture of the tickets, every effort was made to have them artistically worthy. It was realized that many would retain their tickets as souvenirs, and that after the Games there would be requests for samples for souvenir purposes, and for permanent exhibits in museums, libraries, and other institutions.

DISTRIBUTION OF TICKET INFORMATION

A booklet was prepared giving complete information concerning the purchase of tickets. This booklet gave the programme of events, explained the various kinds of tickets and the prices, the location of the stadiums, and contained a brief description of the Games. It was mailed out with an application form, which could be used in purchasing tickets, and a return envelope addressed to the Olympic Games Ticket Department. No application for tickets was accepted unless accompanied by the cash for the total number of tickets applied for.

The first applications for tickets were received in June, 1931. At this time announcements had been made through the press, and approximately 125,000 booklets and application blanks had been mailed out to lists of university alumni and club members, selected because of their probable interest in the Games. Later, through announcements in newspapers and other publications, and over the radio, the public was informed that on receipt of names and addresses the Committee would mail complete sets of literature without charge. During the period of the sale of tickets for the Games a total of 400,000 sets of literature was distributed.

SCENE IN THE CENTRAL TICKET OFFICE

TICKET SALES

Twelve different kinds of Season Tickets, and more than two hundred kinds of tickets for individual events, including Children's Tickets, were printed. These all had to be on sale simultaneously. It was necessary to work out a method for the sale of tickets by which the public could purchase any type of ticket at any time without delay. Also, complete and accurate records of all sales must be available at all times.

It was decided that there should be only one Central Ticket Sales Office, in which all tickets would be delivered directly to purchasers. Several outside offices were established where applications for tickets were received, but these were sent to the Central Ticket Office for filling.

This Office was designed with a counter approximately ninety feet long, over which orders were received by clerks. Opposite the back of the counter, leaving a space about twelve feet wide, was a series of nine booths running parallel to the counter. The first of these was used by the cashier. In booths numbered 2 to 9, inclusive, ticket racks were installed, and tickets for the different sports were divided up and placed in these booths, except that Booth No. 2 was used exclusively for Season Tickets. Booth No. 3 was used for Track and Field Athletics, Booth No. 4 for Boxing, Wrestling and Weightlifting, Booth No. 5 for Rowing, and so on.

It was possible for the purchaser to obtain any kind of ticket and for any event through one clerk. The clerks could select the desired tickets from the booths quickly and accurately, making the system efficient from an operating standpoint and convenient to the public. It was found that the average purchasers of tickets had no comprehensive understanding of the Games and no very definite ideas as to the events they wished to see, and the system employed made it possible for a clerk to spend as much time as necessary with a prospective buyer without delaying others in the office.

At the peak of the ticket sales, sixty clerks were employed in the Central Ticket Office alone. These clerks had been selected months in advance of the Games, and had been given complete literature to study concerning all details of the programme. In addition, all the clerks were assembled in the Ticket Office just before it was opened to the public, and the executives explained to them the functions and operations of each department, as well as the events, history, purposes and ideals of the Games.

When the Ticket Office was first opened, there was not enough business to justify the simultaneous employment of all of the trained clerks. The force was, therefore, put on a half-time basis for a while, to give experience to as many as possible. When the rush came, the entire organization was thus sufficiently trained to serve the public intelligently and efficiently.

When a purchaser came into the Ticket Office for tickets, one of the clerks at the counter filled out an application form for the tickets desired. The purchaser then paid the clerk the total cost of the tickets applied for and the clerk took the application and the money to the cashier. The cashier inspected the application, received the money and rang it up in a cash register, and delivered the change, if any, to the clerk.

The application was then handed to the operator of the Accounting Machine, the "mechanical brain" of the Ticket Department. In this machine all applications were recorded, dated, and given a serial number for identification. Nineteen different totals were kept by the machine, the keys controlling these totals being identified by codes, i.e.: Opening Ceremony, Op.C., — Athletics, Ath., — Boxing, Box., and so on. In these totals the sales of tickets for each sport or special event were recorded separately, and thus there was available at all times a record of the total sold for each sport. Certain keys on the machine did not affect the sales totals, but merely printed on the tape the letter M, A, or E — for Morning, Afternoon or Evening — and the code number representing the date of the event.

In recording an application on the Accounting Machine, the serial number and the date were automatically printed; the operator punched the keys representing the number of tickets sold, the total value of the tickets, the sport, the code letter representing time of day of each event, and the date of each event. This information was printed in a neat line in five different places by the machine, as follows :

(1) On the permanent tape.

(2, 3, 4) On three separate sheets of paper inserted by the operator, the application itself, the check or money order if any, and the receipt for the money. The latter was not issued if the tickets were delivered immediately.

(5) On a separate coupon automatically delivered by the machine. One of these coupons was issued for each event for which one or more tickets were purchased on each application.

The coupons were given to the clerk, who then went along the line of booths in which the tickets were kept and exchanged the coupons at the proper booths for the tickets purchased. The coupons were retained by the clerks in the booths as their record for the tickets issued, and the tickets were then delivered to the purchaser and the application placed in the file.

The same system as that for cash sales was followed with mail orders, except that the tickets were delivered to a mail clerk who, after carefully checking the order, sent the tickets to the purchaser by registered mail. Arrangements were made with the Post Office Department so that the serial number of the application was in every case the same as the Post Office registration number. This was of great assistance in simplifying the records. Mail orders were filled during a period of the day or in the evening when the order clerks at the counter were not busy taking care of the public sale, and all mail orders were filled on the day of receipt. This saved a duplication of organization, and at the same time assured those ordering tickets by mail of seats equally as desirable as those sold over the counter.

Across one end of the counter provision was made for five windows where tickets were sold directly for events that were in particular demand during the advance sale, and also for the events of the day during the period of competitions. All Complimentary Tickets were authorized by the General Secretary and issued on the order of the Office Manager. A complete record of each ticket so issued was kept.

THE TICKET VAULT

As the tickets were delivered by the printers, they were received at the Ticket Vault. Seat charts were prepared and bound in books, one book for each stadium in which events were to be held, and one or more pages for each event showing all of the seats in that stadium. These chart books were two and one-half by three and one-half feet in size, and contained approximately 224 pages. All tickets were checked with the charts by the Ticket Vault Manager, as well as by the auditors, and if found to be correct, the sections checked were outlined on the charts, and the tickets stored in specially built cabinets in the vault in an orderly arrangement so that they could be quickly and easily accessible. Thus, by inspecting the charts, it could be seen at a glance what tickets were stored in the vault. Each cabinet was filled in the presence of the Vault Manager and a representative of the auditors, and locked and sealed by the auditors.

When tickets were taken out of the cabinets, the seals were broken only by the auditors in the presence of the Vault Manager. A special cabinet was provided for the Vault Manager for which he alone was responsible. Each day he prepared for the auditors an estimate of the tickets he would need for that day, and together they drew the tickets from the cabinets. The tickets were then charged to the Vault Manager, who placed them in his own cabinet.

As the Vault Manager checked tickets out of the vault for daily sale, he received a receipt for the exact number of tickets and their location and blocked out the seats so issued with colored crayon on the charts. Thus, at all times during the period of sale, the charts indicated exactly the tickets remaining in the vault. A complete set of record books was kept in addition to the charts, but the charts were the convenient and accurate means of ascertaining the number of tickets remaining and their location.

In the Ticket Sales Office, the tickets were kept in specially constructed racks made of wood. These racks folded together and when folded locked like an ordinary suitcase. The racks were assigned individually to the ticket clerks, and each locked and stored his rack in the vault each night and checked it out each morning. This made it unnecessary to check each clerk's tickets nightly. The tickets in the racks were checked two or three times each week by the auditors. The coupons exchanged for tickets were collected and checked each night at the close of business, by the auditors and representatives of the Organizing Committee.

At any time the auditors wished to make a complete accounting of all tickets it was only necessary to count the tickets in the racks and the Vault Manager's cabinet, all others being under seal.

Each day during the period of the Games, the tickets for the events on the following day were collected from the racks and, together with the residue of these tickets in the vault, were checked out in sealed sacks to the ticket sellers at the various stadiums. A sufficient number was checked out to the windows at the counter in the Ticket Department for the direct sale up until about two hours before the time set for the event, at which time, if any tickets remained, they were also checked out to the ticket sellers at the grounds. At the close of each day at the grounds, the ticket sellers placed their remaining tickets and all of their money in their sacks and sealed them, and the sacks were taken to an office at the stadium where the tickets and money were counted. The bank collected the money in an armored truck. Change was provided each ticket salesman, the method for which is described in the chapter on Stadium Administration.

All unused tickets were returned daily to the Ticket Department, and after the conclusion of the Games all receipts from the sale of tickets for each event, and all unsold tickets, were counted and reconciled with the total number of tickets printed, after which all remaining tickets were burned, with the exception of a few preserved for the records.

An idea of the accuracy with which the Ticket Department operated can be given by the fact that out of nearly 3,000,000 tickets handled, a total of only 142 tickets were finally unaccounted for.

TICKET SALES AND ADMISSIONS XTH OLYMPIAD, LOS ANGELES, 1932

(In the following table, receipts from Olympic Stadium Passes have been pro-rated and credited to the Sports or Events to which they were good for admittance. Admission figures have been calculated on the number of admissions to which holders of Season Tickets and Olympic Stadium Passes were entitled, whether or not the tickets were actually used for each event. The column headed "No Charge" includes the estimated number of admissions of officials, athletes, press representatives, and members of musical organizations, admitted on various kinds of credentials. Official Passes and Press Passes, for example, were valid for admission to all events. The estimated attendance on these passes has been based upon the probable number of events each holder attended. Approximately fifty per cent of the admissions listed in this column were issued to athletes to permit them to visit sports other than those in which they were entered.)

CREDENTIALS

OFFICIAL delegations to the Games of the Xth Olympiad included members of the International Olympic Committee, the National Olympic Committees, the International Sports Federations, the Organizing Committee, Attachés, members of the various Sports Juries, the participants with their trainers, coaches and attendants, and the representatives of the World Press. All had much to do in a relatively short time.

It was of prime importance that all officially accredited persons be properly identified in order to be assured of the co-operation and courtesies to which they were entitled. It was therefore necessary to provide Credentials which would definitely classify each person and be simple enough to be instantly recognized wherever presented. Thus all members of the official delegations could be extended the requisite freedom to carry on their work efficiently.

The Official Credentials adopted were divided into two classes:

- I. Badges.
- II. Tickets of admission to the various stadiums.

I. BADGES

Badges were designed primarily for the purpose of personal identification. They consisted of standard medallions finished in gold, silver, or bronze, with ribbons attached. Each medallion had an inscription such as "I.O.C.," "Official," "Press," etc. Badges for all Olympic officials were made with the medallion at the top, with the ribbon suspended, and were easily distinguished from the badges of the Executive Staff, which were designed with the medallions suspended on the ribbon. Badges with gold medallions were issued to all members of the International Olympic Committee and the Organizing Committee, and to the presidents of the National Committees and the presidents of the International Sports Federations; badges with silver medallions were issued to secretaries and members of National Committees, secretaries of International Sports Federations, Juries, Attachés, and Chefs de Mission; and badges with bronze medallions were issued to Team Managers, Athletes and attendants, and to the Press. The color of ribbon in each case identified the organization or the sport.

While the above system clearly identified the wearers, an additional Olympic ribbon was created, bearing the five Olympic colors in vertical stripes, and this ribbon, when attached to a badge, entitled the wearer to special privileges and courtesies including admission to the Olympic Village.

Badges with the Olympic ribbon were issued to members of the International Olympic Committee and of the Organizing Committee, to officers and members of National Olympic Committees, officers of International Federations, and Attachés.

The identifying ribbons on all Jury Badges were the same color as that selected for the Sports Federation they were to serve. Therefore, to identify officials or juries of any sport, it was only necessary to watch for the standard medallion with the identifying ribbon for that sport attached. If the badge also had an Olympic ribbon with a gold medallion, the wearer was the president of the Federation. If the badge had an Olympic ribbon with a silver medallion, the wearer was the secretary of the Federation. Or if the badge consisted of merely the medallion with the plain piece of identifying ribbon, the wearer was a member of the jury of that sport.

None of the badges issued to the International Olympic Committee, National Olympic Committees, International Sports Federations, Organizing Committee, Juries, Attachés or Press were good for admittance at the gates of any of the stadiums, all persons to whom these badges were issued being also given regular tickets of admission.

The badges issued to Chefs de Mission, Team Managers, Coaches and Attendants, and to the Athletes were good for admittance at all places the wearers were entitled to go, including the Olympic Village. These badges were all serially numbered on the medallions and were easily distinguished.

Badges of the Chefs de Mission and Team Managers bore a short piece of dark blue ribbon. They entitled the wearers to enter the dressing rooms and the athlete sections in the stands at all stadiums. Each athlete's badge had a short piece of the colored ribbon attached, indicating the sport in which the athlete was a competitor. As provided by the Protocol, these badges were good for admission to the athletes' section in the Olympic Stadium and to the athletes' section and the training quarters at the stadium at which the athlete was participating. Thus all athletes were admitted to the athletes' section in Olympic Stadium but only competitors in the swimming contests, for instance, were admitted to the athletes' section in the Swimming Stadium, and only boxing contestants were admitted to the athletes' section in the Boxing Stadium.

Badges for the Executive Staff of the Organizing Committee consisted of a piece of Olympic ribbon from which the medallion was suspended, the individual's name or the word "Manager" appearing on the medallion. These badges were good for admittance at all places at all times and were an indispensable convenience. Persons wearing badges with their individual names printed on the medallion were entitled to issue instructions to the staff at any stadium and staff members were bound to carry out these instructions. However, the staff members were obliged to remember the name of the person giving the instructions.

Staff badges for executives in charge of the various stadiums were made with the medallion suspended on a ribbon the color of which identified the stadium. These were good only at the one stadium. The staff title of the wearer, such as "Manager," or "Sports Technical," was imprinted on the medallion.

II. TICKETS OF ADMISSION

The Protocol (Section XXVI) makes these provisions for Reserved Seats:

"Apart from the big stand reserved for the Press, invitation cards must be sent out by the Organizing Committee and places reserved in the Stadium as follows:

"Stand A. For Members of the International Olympic Committee and their families.

"Stand B. For the Presidents of the National Olympic Committees and the Presidents of the International Federations and their families.

"Stand C. For Members of the National Olympic Committees and their guests — one ticket to be allotted for every ten athletes competing, with a maximum of twenty and a minimum of four. For the official delegate of each sport in which a country is represented.

For Secretaries of International Federations. For Members of Committees of the Organizing Committee. "Stand D. For Members of the various juries. Also 1500 places for athletes near the winning posts."

The Protocol requires places in the other stadiums as follows :

"For the Press and occupants of Stands A and B. One stand to which shall be admitted, as far as places will allow, the occupants of Stands C and D. Places for the competitors in the sport which is then taking place, but not for other competitors."

At each stadium four sections were set apart and designated as follows:

|-----------------|------------------------|
| (2) Section AA. | (4) Athletes' Section. |

Tickets similar in design to the Olympic Stadium Pass were printed, purple in color and contained in leather cases, admitting the holder to the designated section in each stadium. (No tickets were printed for the Athletes' Section as the athletes were admitted on their badges.) In the lower left-hand corner the specific seat location in the Olympic Stadium was designated, and in the lower right-hand corner the section to which the ticket admitted in all other stadiums was designated.

In the Olympic Stadium, a special loge section was constructed for the Tribune, consisting of loges furnished with chairs. All seats in the Tribune were specifically reserved. At all stadiums except Olympic Stadium, a special section was reserved in the Tribune for members of the International Olympic Committee, who were identified by means of their badges after they were admitted to the stadium. The tickets admitting to these special sections were called Official Passes, and each was a passepourtout.

Obviously, it was unnecessary to make the sections, except in Olympic Stadium, large enough to accommodate, at one time, all to whom tickets were issued. There were many events going on simultaneously and those entitled to these tickets would not all go to the same stadium for the same event. There was, besides, such a large number of Official Passes issued that should a corresponding number of seats be reserved at each stadium as there were tickets issued, there would have been no room left for the public at the smaller stadiums, and the sections reserved for the officials would have been only partially filled. It was necessary, therefore, to estimate in advance the size of the section to reserve at each stadium. This was done as shown in the table on page 121.

Tickets similar to the Official Passes, and enclosed in leather cases, were made for accredited representatives of the Press. They were printed in yellow with the word "Press" across the face of each ticket. In the lower left-hand corner was the specific seat location in Olympic Stadium, and in the lower right-hand corner was printed, "All Other Stadiums, Press Section." The Press Tickets were good at all stadiums and the specific seats or sections were reserved accordingly at each stadium.

In accordance with the Protocol, Official Passes were issued to all officials and to each National Olympic Committee in the ratio of one ticket for each ten athletes entered in the Games, with a maximum of twenty and a minimum of four. Although not provided for in the Protocol, complimentary tickets for individual events were also issued to each National Olympic Committee. These were for athletes who wished to attend competitions in sports other than their own sport, to which they were admitted on their badges, and for special guests of the National Olympic Committees. The number of tickets issued to each National Olympic Committee for this purpose was based upon the size of its team entered in the Games. At the Olympic Stadium there was a minimum of four and a maximum of twenty tickets for each event issued to each Committee, and this number was reduced slightly for outside stadiums where there was a limited seating capacity. The total of such tickets issued to all Committees amounted to 22,204.

DISTRIBUTION OF CREDENTIALS

Credentials were delivered in large paper envelopes in which were enclosed tickets of admission, ribbon badges, commemorative medals, the printed booklet of information issued by the Organizing Committee, the Programme of the Games, maps of the city, and in certain cases an Auto Pass and invitations to social events.

At first consideration of the problem of the distribution of Credentials, it was obvious that different methods would have to be applied for the distribution to the different groups. Credentials were delivered to members of the International

SPECIMEN OF OFFICIAL PASS, A CREDENTIAL ISSUED ONLY TO OLYMPIC GROUPS

Olympic Committee, and to presidents and secretaries of International Federations, upon their arrival at their hotels, or if the Organizing Committee had not been notified of their arrival, at the time of their first call at the office of the Committee.

Generally speaking, national representatives, including athletes and National Committee members, arrived in groups by special train or by boat. A representative of the Credentials Department was sent to meet each group, where he got in touch with the Chef de Mission, who furnished him with the complete list of names of those in his party and the classification of each individual, whether member of National Committee, or athlete, trainer, etc. This list was taken to the Credentials Office, where the badges were made up at once and taken to the Olympic Village, and there individually delivered to those registered in the Village. Badges for officials not registered in the Olympic Village were returned to the Credentials Office, where they were either called for by the individual or delivered on request to his local residence.

As it was impossible to complete the appointment of members of the various Juries until after the arrival of the delegates for each sport, and because the representatives of the Federations were wholly responsible for the selection of the members, as well as for the work of the Juries, it was the policy of the Organizing Committee to deliver the Jury Credentials to the representatives of the Federation, who then distributed the Credentials on their own responsibility. In all cases where this policy was adhered to, it worked out satisfactorily. In one or two cases where the Federations deviated from this policy, delay and some misunderstanding was the result. The Organizing Committee strongly recommends strict adherence to such a policy for future Games.

As all Credentials were issued, whether by the Organizing Committee or by representatives of the Federations, complete records were kept, listing the name, the Los Angeles address, the home address, and the classification of each individual to whom issued. This register was later used to prepare the lists of persons to whom diplomas should be sent.

The table on pages 122 and 123 shows the various kinds of Credentials used at the Games of the Xth Olympiad, with a description of each type and the totals issued.

SPECTATORS ASSEMBLING IN THE GREAT BOWL FROM ALL DIRECTIONS UNDER THE GUIDANCE OF THE 2000 OLYMPIC STADIUM ATTENDANTS

STADIUM ADMINISTRATION

THE formulation of plans for Stadium Administration was of major importance, as this included the handling of the public at all the stadiums, and of all activities incident to the holding of the Games at each stadium, except those having to do directly with the competitions. It was essential that all the stadiums be operated under a standardized set of rules, that the procedure be smooth and efficient, and that the practice to be followed should be convenient both for stadium officials and for the public.

In preparing the plans, two policies were established:

(1) That a separate and independent organization be set up at each stadium, with a manager in charge responsible only for the management of his own stadium.

(2) That a standard method of procedure be followed at each stadium.

These two policies accomplished these purposes:

(a) Similar management at all stadiums was a convenience to the officials as well as to the public, because after becoming familiar with the methods at one stadium they were familiar with the methods at all stadiums.

(b) The work of the Executive Staff in preparing regulations and instructions was greatly facilitated, and undoubtedly many errors, omissions and misunderstandings were avoided.

All tickets and credentials were of standard form for all stadiums, and the special sections reserved for officials, athletes, press representatives, etc., were designated by the same names or letters at each stadium. Similarly, all badges for employees were of uniform design, differentiated only by the name of the stadium and the color designating that stadium. The type of organization set up at all stadiums was identical, and standard titles used for members of each stadium staff doing similar work or having similar duties.

A carefully worked out set of instructions and special information was prepared and distributed to all stadium managers and their executive staffs. All details of stadium management were covered minutely and every contingency that could be foreseen was provided for. Standards were set up for handling all details of the work and instructions given concerning credentials of all sorts, medical assistance, sale of official programmes, accommodations for musical organizations, payrolls, and other duties. As these general instructions applied to all stadiums, it was only necessary to add a few incidental notes to provide for special conditions at each of the stadiums. This "Memorandum to Stadium Managers" is reproduced in facsimile herewith (pages 130 to 147, inclusive).

With the exception of the stadiums in Olympic Park, all stadium managers were responsible directly to the Central Office.

At Olympic Park, the Olympic Park Management Committee was organized, comprising the executive management staffs of all of the stadiums within the park, including Olympic Stadium, and the Swimming and Fencing Stadiums. A director was appointed for Olympic Park who became chairman of this Committee.

The Olympic Park Management Committee became the clearing house for all questions concerning management within the Park. It met frequently before the Games, laying plans and approving personnel, and during the Games met every evening after the close of the afternoon events. At these meetings all difficulties and suggestions were discussed, and the work at the different stadiums coordinated. Estimates were made each evening for the following day's attendance, and the organization necessary to handle that attendance was fixed at the meeting.

On two occasions before the Games, meetings were called of the managers and the staffs of all stadiums. It was in the hands of these officials that the Executive Staff had placed the responsibility for the proper management of the stadiums, and only through them would it have contact with the thousands of workers at all of the stadiums who would be directly contacting the public. was given to this group, so that they would have an appreciation of the problems of the visiting Olympic officials and be prepared to be of every possible assistance to them. The importance of courtesy at all times on the part of the entire management personnel was stressed.

ORGANIZATION AND PAYROLL

The selection of the working personnel for each stadium was the responsibility of each Stadium Manager. Every applicant was personally interviewed and those accepted were mailed a double postcard, one-half of which contained the notification of appointment with the following pledge:

"The success of the Games of the Xth Olympiad will rest upon you as a member of the Management Staff. You have been selected because the Olympic Committee believes that you are competent to fully realize the responsibilities which you will undertake.

"Courtesy will be the keynote of your conduct during this great international event. All of the tact and diplomacy that we know you have will be needed. You will be serving the peoples of some forty-five nations, and the impressions they gain of these Games and of our City will be largely determined by your treatment of them."

"I have carefully considered the above and the responsibilities that will rest upon me, and I will do my part toward the success of the Games of the Xth Olympiad.

PAYROLL VOUCHER FOR STADIUM EMPLOYEES
THESE VOUCHERS WERE ISSUED IN AMOUNTS FROM FIFTY CENTS TO FIVE DOLLARS

This pledge, when signed and returned to the Stadium Manager, served as the applicant's acceptance of the position and furnished the management with his signature for personal identification.

The second half of the card was the employee's notice of where and when to report for duty, which he was instructed to present at the gates of the stadium for admission the first time he reported.

Immediately on an employee's reporting for duty, a permanent identity card was issued to him for the period of the Games. This card he personally signed, and this signature was checked with the signature on his acceptance card. The duties and type of work of each employee were set forth on the identity card. The employee was then instructed to report to the chief of the group or department to which he was assigned, where he received his specific instructions and was put to work.

Each morning the chief of every group or department collected the identity cards from all of his employees and in turn issued each a badge indicating the type of work to which he was assigned, such as guard, usher, gateman, ticket-seller, etc., which badge he wore as long as he was on duty. The identity cards were then sent to the Payroll Office where a pay voucher was made out for each employee, the amount being determined by the type of work. At the conclusion of each day's event, the identity card and the voucher were returned to each employee in exchange for his badge. The employee retained his identity card for admission to the stadium the next day and cashed his voucher at the cashier's office.

The attendance of course varied from day to day, and when an employee was not needed, he was admitted to the stadium to which he was assigned, on presenting his identity card (which he retained) and permitted to see the event without charge. This privilege kept up the morale of the organization and also assured sufficient men reporting for duty each day to complete the organization necessary to handle that day's crowd.

This daily method of handling the payroll worked out most satisfactorily, particularly so on account of the fact that the organization was necessarily so variable in size and personnel. Those actually assigned to duty automatically received their pay each day.

A total of approximately 32,000 stadium pay vouchers was issued during the period of the Games, which indicates that during the sixteen days there was a daily average of 2,000 employees on the Stadium Management payroll.

A cashier was appointed for each stadium. Each day he would estimate the amount of money necessary for change at the ticket-sellers' and for the payrolls. He notified the Central Office of the sum needed, and a check for the amount was delivered to him. Arrangements were made with the bank to cash the check with the denominations of currency necessary for change and payroll. The head ticket salesman would draw on the Cashier for the total amount of change wanted, and at the close of the sale each day this money was returned to the Cashier in small denominations suitable for the payroll. The Cashier was furnished with the signatures of all the employees on the payroll, on their acceptance cards, and it was his duty to cash all pay vouchers. Since the change money was returned before the time for cashing payroll vouchers, the amount of money given to the paymaster each day was the sum actually needed for the payroll, and it was not necessary to provide him with additional money for change.

All employees at all stadiums were required to wear a uniform. This uniform consisted of a blue and white cap with the Olympic rings embroidered on the front, a blue bow tie, white shirt, and grey trousers. Arrangements were made with a local clothier to sell the ties, shirts and trousers to Olympic employees at a special reduced price, on presentation of their assignment cards. The Organizing Committee furnished the caps at its own expense.

CLEAN-UP OF THE STADIUMS

Large gatherings of people leave behind them great quantities of torn newspapers, discarded programmes and miscellaneous litter. During the period of the Olympic Games, all stadiums had to be cleaned immediately following each programme, and inasmuch as the days and many of the evenings were crowded with events, the major portion of the clean-up was done during the night.

A clean-up crew of seventy-five men was organized for Olympic Park alone, to clean up the stadiums and the grounds. This crew reported for duty immediately after the spectators had departed from each event. Between events in the daytime, on account of limited time, they made a quick pick-up of the larger pieces of litter, and then during each night, all of the lights of the Stadium and park were turned on and a thorough clean-up was made.

It was a dramatic sight in Olympic Stadium, in the wee sma' hours of the morning, to see this large crew of men busily weaving through the seat sections and in all corners of the field under the bright electric lights. By dawn all signs of the previous day's activity had disappeared and the stadium was fresh and clean for another day.

MEMORANDUM TO STADIUM MANAGERS

Attached herewith is special information concerning the details of operation of departments and services that concern all stadiums. You, as a Stadium Manager, should study these sheets carefully, and pass this information on to the proper members of your staff, so that your organization will be operating in consonance with the commitments that have been made through the Central Office.

You will prepare detailed written instructions for each division of your organization, such as guards, ushers, gatemen, etc., outlining their specific duties and responsibilities in each case, including the special instructions necessary to insure the smooth operation of the special services and departments described on these sheets we are furnishing you. Copies of your instructions to all divisions of your organization must be submitted and approved at the Central Office before they are mimeographed and distributed.

SPECIAL NOTICE

1. You, as a Stadium Manager, should immediately determine upon the number of Pass Gates necessary for your stadium and designate them and submit the plan to the Central Office.

2. Signs: Signs must be prepared for your stadium, designating:

Tribune	Press Stand Entrance
Section AA	Team Stand
Section AA Entrance	Team Stand Entrance
Press Stand	Team Dressing Room Entrance
	Service Entrance

and all other signs necessary to properly handle the crowds.

All points where there is any possible hazard to the public should be marked with DANGER, DANGER - KEEP OFF and DANGER - KEEP OUT signs.

If the seat sections and entrances are not marked at your stadium, proper signs must be prepared and installed. The Central Office will check with you on the grounds and assist you in preparing the copy for all signs. Thereafter, you will have the signs prepared and installed, and they will be finally checked as soon as the Central Office is notified they are ready. The deadline for the preparation of all signs is July 22nd. In some cases it may be desirable not to install the signs until after that date.

You will agree with the Central Office on cashier for your stadium (except stadiums in Olympic Park) to supply change to the box offices and disperse the money on payroll vouchers and provide proper quarters for this work. The Paymaster will mutually agree on the quarters for his staff.

3. Ticket Boxes: All Stadium Managers will have ticket boxes at the gate in which gatemen will place ticket stubs, immediately after tearing each ticket. These boxes must be locked and then turned into the Stadium Manager's office immediately following each show. All ticket stubs must be sacked, marked and carefully preserved after each show, for the Auditor's inspection. If there are none of these ticket boxes at your stadium, please check with the Central Office.

4. Communications: You will be provided with a telephone booklet listing published and unpublished numbers of all departments of the Olympic Games Committee. Teletype facilities will be installed from the Olympic Stadium to: The Central Office, the Olympic Auditorium, the Olympic Village, the Long Beach Marine Stadium, and the Swimming Stadium. This teletype is designed primarily for the transmission of results of the competitions. However, it has a secondary purpose of communications between executives of the organization, although this must not interfere with the primary purpose.

You should check in at your teletype or private phone frequently and leave word where you can be reached at all times. All members of the organization are doing this, and is for the convenience of all.

5. Estimating Size of Crowd: For many reasons it is necessary that estimates of the size of the anticipated crowds be made one or two days in advance. During the period of competition each

HERE, AND CONTINUING TO PAGE 147, IS REPRODUCED IN FACSIMILE THE INFORMATION AND INSTRUCTIONS ISSUED TO THE EXECUTIVE STAFF OF ALL STADIUMS, WHICH DISCLOSES THE MYRIAD DETAILS OF STADIUM ORGANIZATION AND ADMINISTRATION

Manager will check with Gwynn Wilson. This estimate will be used in arranging for the size of your own organization as well as for the Ticket Department, official programs, etc.

6. Pass Gates: It is important that Pass Gates be manned with the best possible personnel, and all persons entitled to enter without tickets be required to enter through them. Special service personnel for telephone and telegraph service and maintenance of all sorts should be carefully checked, and wherever practical proper button badges should be issued to such persons. However, where this cannot be done, special lists of the names of persons entitled to enter the Pass Gates should be furnished to the Head Gateman at the gate and checked off as they enter. These lists should be preserved.

7. Detectives, Firemen and Special Representatives of Police: Local Police Officers of the city in which the stadium is located will be admitted through all gates, provided they are in full uniform and wearing their police badges except at the Olympic Auditorium. Police Officers from other cities will not be admitted. If special un-uniformed police details are necessary, a special police card must be issued bearing the name of the Officer, his badge number and the date. These cards will be good for one day only. If such a detail is necessary at your stadium, please check with the Central Office immediately. Where possible, it is desirable that such a practice be avoided.

Olympic Auditorium: No Police Officers will be admitted in uniform with the exception of the Lieutenant and 15 men who are now detailed.

No badges, such as police, firemen, detective badges, etc., of any sort should be honored at any gate at any time unless one of the two provisions above has been fully met.

There should be a firemen's detail at each stadium, drawn from the city in which the stadium is located. This should be a limited number necessary to guard the premises, approved by you, and should be admitted only in full uniform with their firemen's badges and their names checked off the approved list at the Pass Gate.

SPECIAL NOTE: SWIMMING STADIUM

The Manager will check with Chief Scott's Office three days prior to the opening of swimming competitions to be assured that the fire detail, both inside and under the temporary stands, has been assigned and provisions made for their placing at strategic points. Four men of this detail with equipment should be placed underneath the temporary stands and one on top of each entrance tunnel.

DRINKING WATER SERVICE AT THE STADIUMS

Drinking water will be furnished to all stadiums for athletes, officials and members of the staff. Charts will be furnished Stadium Managers showing the locations where the water should be placed in the Olympic Stadium and the Swimming Stadium.

The schedule for water dispensers in each stadium is as follows:

Olympic Stadium - Opening Ceremony

Playground south of Athletic Building - 30

Olympic Stadium - Standard Set-up

30 locations, 20 of which are indicated on map (additional to be specified later by Stadium Manager when needed)

Water services at each of the stadiums will start on order from the Sports Technical Director as soon as training starts and will continue throughout the competitions. The Stadium Manager in each case will see that the dispensers are put in convenient places, so that they may be available to all athletes and officials, both men and women.

Drinking cups are being furnished by the water company.

An extra supply of cups will be provided and each Stadium Manager will see that the attendant in charge is instructed to have cups in the containers at all times. Additional set-ups will be furnished on order by the water company, if needed.

During the period of competitions, all stadiums will be serviced as far as possible during hours when competitions are not being held. Arrangements should be made with the drivers of the trucks delivering water, so that an attendant can meet them at a regular hour to see that the stadiums and buildings are open for the deliveries. In case of emergency deliveries during the competitions, instruct men on service driveways to pass the trucks with water to the locations where delivery is to be made, and allow for the men to enter the dressing rooms and other locations to deliver the water where it is needed.

AUTO PARKING

Special windshield sticker Auto Passes have been issued to important officials. Regulations concerning these stickers will be compiled and supplied to the men concerned.

There are two special designations on each Parking Sticker. In the lower right-hand corner a large red number indicates the parking area at the Olympic Stadium. On some of these parking stickers there is a large red circle on the lower left-hand corner. A special parking area convenient to the Tribune Entrance should be reserved at each stadium (except the Olympic Auditorium), for approximately 200 cars, for exclusive parking of cars bearing stickers WITH BOTH the large red circle and a large red number as described above.

Windshield stickers without the large red circle are not good for special parking at outside stadiums. However, traffic organizations at all stadiums should be instructed to assist all cars bearing any of these official Auto Passes, through traffic, whether or not they bear the large red circle.

Special parking areas at each stadium should be designated by large signs. Check with the Central Office for copy on these signs.

Parking attendants in all special parking areas are responsible for guarding all cars parked in their areas, and they should be well informed concerning the different classes of officials' tickets, so that they can give complete directions to these special guests, thus aiding them to reach their seats.

LONG BEACH MARINE STADIUM

The most important people will have Auto Passes marked O-1, O-2, O-3 and O-4, and the parking lot at the corner of Colorado and Nieto Streets should be reserved for these people, and the proper signs should be erected to guide them. For the most part, the Press cards will be O-5, and these should be directed to the parking station at the rear of the Press Stand. This area should also be indicated with a proper sign. These signs will be agreed upon on the grounds by the Stadium Manager and a representative of the Central Office.

INFORMATION CONCERNING THE SALE OF CONCESSIONS

The accredited representative of the concessions company will handle the concessions at all stadiums with the exception of the State Armory. The concessions at the State Armory will be handled by the 160th Infantry.

THE CONCESSIONAIRE will provide each salesman with a concession button badge. These badges will be identified as follows:

PLACE	COLOR	NUMBER	LIMIT FOR CAPACITY CROWD
Olympic Stadium	Orange	1-300	262
L.A. Swimming Stadium.....	Light Blue	1-36	30
Olympic Auditorium.....	Red	1-50	36
Pasadena Rose Bowl.....	Yellow	1-75	65
Riviera Country Club.....	Yellow	1-25	20
Long Beach Marine Stadium	Green	1-110	100

PROCEDURE IN OPERATION

ALL SALESMEN MUST BE CLEAN AND IN REGULATION UNIFORM
NO SELLING IN TRIBUNE AT ANY STADIUM

The Section Chief or Lieutenant in charge of any area is responsible for the conduct of concession salesmen. On first offense of breaking regulations a salesman should be warned. If he fails to cooperate, the Section Chief or Lieutenant in charge will see that the salesman is taken to the Concessions Building and is reported to the Concessionaire or his representative.

1. Olympic Stadium: Salesmen will be admitted through slide gate opposite Concessions Building in outer fence, on their badges, and proceed directly to the Concessions Building through which they will be admitted to the Stadium. The number of salesmen to be admitted will be limited proportionately according to the size of the anticipated attendance in the Stadium for each show, and this number will be determined each day by the Stadium Manager.

The maximum for a full Stadium will be 262. In the case of a full Stadium, concession badges Nos. 1-262 only will be admitted. If the number of salesmen were limited to 175, badges 1-175 would be admitted, etc.

The Stadium Manager will appoint a man to check the entry of concession salesmen, and the Concessionaire will supply this man with a list of the numbers of the badges and the names of the persons to whom these badges are issued. He will check each concession salesman off this list as they enter and spot-check by frequently requiring a salesman to give his name and check the name back to the list.

In the Olympic Stadium, concession salesmen will be provided with an additional badge bearing the number of the aisle in which they are permitted to sell.

The Stadium Manager will instruct his organization to enforce the following rules in regard to concession salesmen:

1. They are permitted to sell only in the aisle indicated on their badge.
2. They are not permitted to go from one section to another along the transverse aisles.
3. They must remain in the Stadium, and if they leave, they must not be permitted to re-enter.
4. They must remain in the aisles and are not permitted to go between the seat rows at any time.
5. They must stay away from the tunnel entrances while the crowd is entering and leaving the Stadium.
6. They must not call their wares while an announcement of any kind is being made over the loudspeaker.
7. They must not call their wares while any track event or other similar event is in progress or at any other time when it would interfere with the spectators.
8. They must sit down in the aisles during the track events.

II. All Other Stadiums:

Concessions regulations under "OLYMPIC STADIUM" apply at all other stadiums wherever applicable.

The number of salesmen to be admitted will be cut down proportionately to the size of the crowd; this to be determined by the Stadium Manager. The Stadium Manager will provide in each case a convenient Pass Gate for the salesmen and assign a representative to check the salesmen in, as described for the Olympic Stadium.

At each stadium concession salesmen will pick up their supply of goods within the stadium gates and will not be permitted to re-enter the stadium if they leave.

At the Pasadena Rose Bowl, supply stations will be inside the fence. The location of supply stations will be mutually agreed upon between the concessionaire and the Stadium Manager.

At the Riviera Country Club the concessionaire will not be permitted to have stands or wagons of any sort on the turf of the polo field. Concession salesmen at the Riviera Country Club will not be permitted to call their wares or to interfere in any way with the spectators at any time during which a horse is performing in the dressage events.

At the Long Beach Marine Stadium 6 to 8 concession wagons will be permitted along the road in the standing room areas. These wagons must not in any way interfere with the movement of official cars or in any way with the spectators. In this Stadium badges 1-50 will be good in the stands, and badges 50-110 in the standing areas and on the wagons.

REGULATIONS FOR ADMITTANCE OF BANDS, CHORUSES AND OTHER MUSICAL ORGANIZATIONS TO STADIUMS

Musical organizations participating in the Olympic Games will consist of the following:

1. Permanent Bands: There will be four of these bands - Band A, Band B, Band C, and Band D. These bands will be issued standard celluloid button badges, numbered as follows:

Band A	1-60	Band C	1-70
Band B	1-70	Band D	1-60
2. Guest Bands: Guest bands will consist of bands representing civic, fraternal, educational, etc., organizations which may be assigned to play on one or more occasions at any of the places where Olympic competitions are being held.
3. Chorus: A Chorus of 1200 voices will sing at the Opening and Closing Ceremonies and the Football Game, all of which events will be held in the Olympic Stadium.

OLYMPIC STADIUM

The Director of Music of the Olympic Games will assign a representative each day to the gate where the musicians will be admitted. This man will report to the Gate Captain with written instructions, signed personally by the Musical Director, describing the musical organizations which will be admitted, and the gate through which they will enter. The Gate Captain will be responsible to properly introduce this Musical Organizations representative to the Head Gateman of the gate designated. Thereafter, he will remain at that gate to identify the musicians and their credentials.

However, the responsibility for the entry of all musicians rests upon the Gateman, and he shall see that the proper credentials and conditions for entry are met by all musicians as well as other persons. The representative of the Musical Organizations Department is acting entirely in an advisory capacity, and to assist the Gateman in every case.

PERMANENT BANDS will not be admitted unless:

- (1) They are in full uniform.
- (2) They carry their own instruments.
- (3) They wear the proper badges.

The instructions will specifically state which of the Bands (A, B, C, and D) are to be admitted.

GUEST BANDS will not be admitted unless:

- (1) They are in full uniform.
- (2) They carry their own instruments.

No more than one Guest Band will be admitted for any event. Their uniform will be identified by the representative of the Musical Organizations Department. Any member not dressed in the standard uniform will not be admitted.

FOOTBALL GAME - MONDAY EVENING - AUGUST 8, 1932:

All musicians, including members of bands and choruses, except Bands A, B, C, and D who will be admitted as above, will be provided with special admission tickets. These admission tickets will have a stub which must be detached and placed in a special box which will be provided by the Musical Organizations representative. These will be turned over to this representative as soon as all of the musicians have entered the Stadium and delivered to the musical director for the purpose of checking attendance.

OPENING AND CLOSING CEREMONIES:

Bands A, B, C, and D will play in the Opening and Closing Ceremonies and will be admitted in the usual way. The Chorus will be admitted on special admission tickets and the stubs will be kept exactly as described above.

ALL OTHER STADIUMS

Pasadena Rose Bowl, Riviera Country Club, Long Beach Marine Stadium, Olympic Auditorium, and Los Angeles Swimming Stadium.

The musical director will notify each Stadium Manager of the Band which will play at each stadium, specifying the events for which it will play and designating the entrance through which the band will enter. The Stadium Manager will make proper arrangements with the Head Gateman at that entrance. If the Band is one of the Permanent Bands, it will be entered as described in "PERMANENT BANDS" under "OLYMPIC STADIUM", above. If it is a Guest Band, the Manager or Director of that Band will report to the Gateman and identify the members of his Band. They will not be admitted unless:

- (1) They are in full uniform.
- (2) They carry their own instruments.

Only one Guest Band will be permitted to play for any show, and each member must be dressed in the standard uniform of that Band.

INFORMATION CONCERNING OFFICIAL OLYMPIC BADGES

Official Olympic badges are divided into five divisions:

I. BADGES ISSUED TO MEMBERS OF INTERNATIONAL AND NATIONAL OLYMPIC GROUPS WHO HOLD PERMANENT POSITIONS IN THE WORLD-WIDE OLYMPIC ORGANIZATION:

Each of these badges is designated by a short piece of special Olympic ribbon (blue, yellow, black, green and red stripes) with the medallion at the top. These badges are for identification only and are not good for admittance. All.

persons wearing these badges have been issued tickets of admittance.

The medallion may bear either of the following titles imprinted thereon: "I.O.C." or "OFFICIAL". Special courtesy should be shown all persons wearing this type of badge. If the person wants information, give it to him if you can, or if not, see that he is directed to a person who can give it to him. If he insists on admittance at any gate, first try and direct him to one of the Official Gates (Peristyle- Olympic Stadium, Gate 4- Olympic Stadium, or Tribune Entrance - all other stadiums.) If he insists on entering a stadium or training quarters and will not go to one of the places suggested, admit him and, if possible, see that he is personally escorted where he desires to go by a member of your organization, such as a guard or usher, who can be relieved from duty temporarily.

No person wearing an Olympic badge should be criticized at any time. However, instruct your organization to report abuses of the badges to you. Persons wearing Olympic Ribbon badges are entitled to enter all training quarters if they desire. If this privilege is being abused, however, discourage the practice if possible.

II. JURY BADGES (USED BY JUDGES, TIMERS, ETC.):

These badges have the medallion at the top with a plain solid-color ribbon; the color of the ribbon indicating a particular sport.

These badges are not good for admittance through the gates, but are for identification only. Persons issued these badges have also been issued tickets of admittance.

Although persons wearing these badges should be treated courteously at all times, they are not entitled to have any regulations set aside for them at any time.

III. TEAM BADGES:

All team badges bear a serial number on the medallion and are entitled to admittance at specific places, described below:

SPECIAL NOTE: ALL OF THESE SPECIAL TEAM BADGES WILL ADMIT THROUGH ALL GATES IN THE OUTSIDE FENCE AT THE OLYMPIC STADIUM AND THROUGH TUNNEL SIX TO THE ATHLETES SECTION. THEY WILL NOT ADMIT THROUGH THE PUBLIC GATES AT ANY OTHER STADIUM EXCEPT SWIMMING STADIUM. ALL SWIMMING BADGES WILL BE ADMITTED AT ANY GATE IN THE OUTSIDE FENCE AT THE SWIMMING STADIUM.

1. Team - "Chef de Mission" - Short Dark-Blue Ribbon:

This badge is issued to the Manager of the entire delegation representing a country. In addition to the Olympic Stadium, it will admit the wearer at the Dressing Room Gate at all stadiums. At stadiums other than the Olympic Stadium, this badge will admit from the dressing quarters to the athletes' section in the stands at the stadium. These men should be shown extreme courtesy at all times.

2. "Team" Badges - Short Dark-Blue Ribbon:

This badge is issued to coaches, trainers, etc., who are connected with more than one sport. Wearers of this badge are entitled to admittance exactly as described for "Chef de Mission".

3. "Team" Badges with the Name of the Sport Thereon in Different Colored Short Ribbons indicating that Sport:

These badges are issued to competitors, coaches, trainers, etc., whose activities are confined to a single sport.

In addition to the Olympic Stadium, these persons are entitled to admittance at the Dressing Room Gate at the stadium where their sport is held while their sport is in progress only. If they are not competing on that day they will be admitted on their badges from the Dressing Room into the Athletes' Stand at that stadium.

At the Long Beach Marine Stadium they should be admitted through the Pass Gate adjacent to the Boathouse and be directed from there to the Athletes' Section in the stands.

IV. PRESS BADGES

Press badges have the medallion at the top with a short piece of red and yellow ribbon. These badges are for identification only and will not admit any place at any time. All persons issued these badges have been issued admittance tickets.

Every possible courtesy should be extended to Members of the Press wearing these badges. However, regulations must not be set aside for them except in cases of emergency.

V. MANAGEMENT BADGES WITH THE MEDALLION HANGING AS PENDANT AND X.O.C. ON BAR:

Management Badges are divided into four groups:

1. Olympic ribbon Management badge with an individual name on medallion:

This badge is issued to members of the Central Executive Staff only, and is good through all gates and at all points at all stadiums at all times.

Orders issued by wearers of these Executive Badges must be obeyed by all employees of all stadiums. However, the wearer of the badge takes responsibility for the orders which he issues, and any employee carrying out such orders must re-member the name of the person who issued them, and report to his superior, if occasion arises.

2. Olympic ribbon Manager badge: Same as above except with the word MANAGER imprinted on the medallion.

These badges are good to all gates and at all points at all times. However, the wearer has authority to issue orders only to members of the organization for which he is responsible.

3. Olympic ribbon Village badge: OLYMPIC VILLAGE printed on medallion. Same as (2) above.

4. Staff ribbon badges for individual stadiums:

Medallion hanging as pendant from ribbon same as above. STAFF printed on the bar at top and MANAGEMENT printed on the medallion, with the name of the stadium printed on the ribbon and a different, solid color ribbon for each stadium.

These badges are issued to assistants to the Manager at each stadium. They are good through all gates and at all points at the stadium designated. They will not be honored at other stadiums.

TICKETS OF ADMITTANCE TO THE OLYMPIC GAMES

There are five general classes of tickets of admittance to the Olympic Games:

I. A. OFFICIAL PASSES

B. PRESS PASSES

II. OLYMPIC STADIUM PASSES

- 17 -

III. SEASON TICKET COUPON BOOKS FOR INDIVIDUAL SPORTS

IV. SINGLE ADMISSION RESERVED SEAT TICKETS

V. GENERAL ADMISSION TICKETS

A. OFFICIAL PASSES:

The Official Pass is a purple, steel-engraved ticket in a leather case, and is good for admittance at all stadiums. It has been issued to members of the official groups attending the Olympic Games. On the left-hand side of the ticket is the seat designation for the Olympic Stadium, and on the right-hand side is the seat designation for all other stadiums. These tickets will admit the bearers through the peristyle entrance at the Olympic Stadium, and to the Tribune and Section A.A. entrance at all other stadiums.

B. The Press Pass is an orange, steel-engraved ticket in a leather case, and has been issued to accredited members of the World Press attending the Games. These tickets will admit to all stadiums as follows: At the Olympic Stadium the seat designation is on the lower left-hand side and the tunnel entrance is specified. The designation for all other stadiums is on the lower right-hand corner, and the bearers of these Passes will be admitted through the Press Entrance at all other stadiums.

II

The OLYMPIC STADIUM PASS is good for the Olympic Stadium only, and will admit to all of the events to be held in the Olympic Stadium.

CHILD OLYMPIC STADIUM PASSES are valid for use by all children of 16 years of age or under, and can be identified by the fact that they are approximately two inches shorter in length and are in a smaller leather case, as well as the fact that they have printed on the ticket "VALID FOR CHILD ONLY". This child ticket is the regulation Olympic Stadium Pass ticket with the portion of the ticket bearing the figure of the athlete cut off.

A limited number of Child Tickets have been sold to high school students over 16 years of age. These tickets are marked NON-TRANSFERABLE at the base of the ticket. If the bearer has not written his signature on the face of the ticket he should be requested to do so before he is admitted.

- 18 -

There are two colors of Olympic Stadium Passes, namely, green for the South side, and blue for the North side. All are in leather cases. The specific seat designation is on each ticket.

III

There are five SEASON TICKET COUPON BOOKS for the following sports: namely, Swimming, Boxing, Wrestling, Rowing and Fencing.

CHILD SEASON TICKET COUPON BOOKS are valid for use by children of 16 years of age or under and can be identified readily inasmuch as they are the regulation Season Ticket Coupon Books with the portion of the ticket bearing the figure of the athlete cut off.

Some of these tickets have been sold to High School students over 16 years of age and the same regulations apply as above for Olympic Stadium Passes.

The cover of the Season Ticket Book is of a different color to correspond to the different sports, and bears the name of the sport for which it is valid, and in every case except Fencing, it bears a specific reserved seat designation.

Colors of Season Ticket Books:

Swimming	-	blue	Wrestling	-	orange
Rowing	-	green	Fencing	-	gray
Boxing	-	red

Fencing Season Ticket Books do not bear a specific seat designation, but will admit to a special Season Ticket Section.

There is a coupon in the book for each show, and the proper coupon must be detached by the Gate-men as the holder is admitted.

EXPLANATION OF CODE DESIGNATION ON SEASON TICKET COUPONS AND SINGLE ADMISSION TICKETS

EACH COUPON IN ALL SEASON TICKET BOOKS AND EVERY RESERVED SEAT TICKET AND EVERY GENERAL ADMISSION TICKET HAS ON IT A CODE NUMBER, EITHER "M", "A" OR "E" AND THE NUMBERS 30, 31 or 1 TO 14 INCLUSIVE. THE "M" STANDS FOR MORNING, "A" FOR AFTERNOON AND

"E" FOR EVENING. THE 30 and 31 AND 1 TO 14 INDICATE THE DATE FOR WHICH THE TICKET IS VALID. AS AN EXAMPLE: - "A - 30" WOULD BE VALID FOR THE AFTERNOON OF THE 30 OF JULY, "E - 8" WOULD BE VALID FOR THE EVENING OF THE 8 OF AUGUST. "M - 10" WOULD BE VALID FOR THE MORNING OF THE 10 OF AUGUST - ETC.

THE MOST IMPORTANT INSTRUCTION THAT ALL GATEMEN CAN

BE GIVEN IS TO INSPECT EACH TICKET CAREFULLY TO

BE SURE THAT IT BEARS THE PROPER CODE FOR THAT EVENT

IV

RESERVED SEAT TICKETS FOR SINGLE EVENTS are all similar in style and wording, and each ticket bears the price of admission, the code indicating the event for which it is valid, and the stadium to which it admits, in addition to the seat designation which is specifically marked. There are no child single admission Reserved Seat Tickets.

NOTE: Rowing Tickets for special bleacher sections call for any seat in that section, but do not have reserved seat designations.

COLORS FOR RESERVED SEAT TICKETS FOR SINGLE EVENTS

A. Olympic Stadium:
All Track and Field Events	Orange
All other events	Brown
B. Swimming Stadium	-	Blue
C. Olympic Auditorium	-	Red
D. Long Beach Marine Stadium	-	Green
E. Riviera Country Club		Purple

GENERAL ADMISSION TICKETS:

All General Admission Tickets are serially numbered, and the Stadium, Code, Price, and whether for Child or Adult, are printed thereon.

These General Admission Tickets have a color similar to the Reserved Seat Tickets' color in practically every case, but it will be very necessary that all gatemen learn what the tickets are like that will admit through their gates, and they must carefully check whether the ticket is Child or Adult.

Child Tickets are easily identified as the Code is printed in blue ink in all cases. The code on all Adult Tickets is printed in red and in large type.

Samples of all tickets will be provided for each Stadium Manager, showing a complete set of tickets that are valid at their respective stadiums. This chart must be used to educate the ticket salesmen, the gatemen and the section chiefs at each stadium to eliminate any possibility of confusion or doubt that they are handling the proper ticket for that event.

The Ticket Department will provide a tabulated list of the tickets of admittance, indicating whether there are reserved seat or general admission tickets for each event, or both. Seating charts indicating the seat sections will also be provided for use by the Management Staff at each stadium.

Stadium Managers will provide removable GENERAL ADMISSION signs to put over all gates where General Admission Tickets are to be honored.

MESSENGER AND STAFF BADGES

Messenger and Staff badges are all serially numbered and will admit the wearers through the Pass Gates only at each stadium and allow them to pass between sections within the stadiums. Stadium Managers will instruct men at Pass Gates not to permit messengers to bring cameras through Pass Gates.

MEDICAL SERVICE BADGES

First Aid Service: The medical division of the Games of the Xth Olympiad will be under the Supervisor of First Aid and his assistant. Special First Aid Stations are provided in the upper Concourse of the Olympic Stadium at funnels 1, 5, 16, 24 and 29, and at four points on the grounds outside the Stadium.

Stations will be provided at each other stadium and all Stadium Managers are requested to see that all important staff members are fully informed of their exact location, and that all employees are familiar with the location of the station nearest the area where they are working. There will be competent physicians in charge at all stadiums and stretcher bearers will be conveniently stationed wherever crowds congregate.

All doctors will have an assignment card signed by the Supervisor of First Aid, and all other medical personnel will have assignment sheets signed also by the Supervisor.

These people will be admitted through the Pass Gates only at all stadiums, under the following conditions:

1. That they present an assignment card or sheet bearing the proper date and designating the specific stadium (card or sheet should be carefully inspected at the Pass Gates to be sure that the person presenting the card or sheet is assigned at that stadium and on that date).

2. That they are wearing an official medical service tag bearing a large number corresponding to the date, in a conspicuous place. These tags permit the wearers to pass from section to section within the stadiums to which they are assigned or to remain in their sections near the entrances where they will be in a position to observe the crowd.

Persons in charge of ambulances and other medical equipment should be given full co-operation at all stadiums on presentation of proper credentials, as described above. Stadium Managers are urged to co-operate with the Supervisor and his assistant in the location of convenient First Aid Stations.

INFORMATION CONCERNING THE USE OF CAMERA BADGES

Wear your badge on your coat lapel whenever you are in or about places of Olympic competition.

For the convenience of cameramen special camera button badges have been provided. No tickets of admittance will be required in addition to these badges. The button badges will be good for admittance only at the designated Pass Gates and subject to the conditions at each stadium as listed below.

The Management is anxious to give cameramen all of the freedom and co-operation possible, and we urge that all cameramen co-operate with members of the staff in all stadiums by taking care at all times not to interfere with the spectators.

OLYMPIC STADIUM:

1. Good for admittance only at Pass Gate 33 (East end of Stadium) and Pass Gate 12 (Southwest of Stadium near Swimming Stadium). Cameramen with these badges must go through the designated gates in both the outside and inside fences.

2. Camera badges will permit the wearer with his camera to circulate in the stands at the Olympic Stadium. Ushers are instructed to prohibit cameramen from entering certain restricted areas, such as the Tribune, except when on special assignment. Arrangements to take pictures in these restricted areas must be made in advance.

3. A maximum of one cameraman from each syndicate, two cameramen and one camera from each news-reel, and two official cameramen will be permitted on the field. Absolutely no other cameramen will be permitted on the field.

4. Camera badges will not admit to the field. It will be necessary for cameramen assigned to the field under the above limitations to report at the Stadium Box at the athletes' entrance to the field at the foot of Tunnel 6, and there be issued special field ribbons each day. If a cameraman leaves the field and wishes another to take his place, it will be necessary for him to leave the field ribbon with the attendant at the Stadium Box. No more than one field ribbon will be issued to any syndicate or two to any newsreel at any one time.

LOS ANGELES SWIMMING STADIUM

1. All cameramen will be admitted through any gate in the outside fence, and will check in through the Pass Gate (the East gate on South Park Drive), and be permitted to operate in the stands.

2. A maximum of one cameraman from each syndicate, two cameramen and one camera from each news-reel, and two official cameramen will be permitted on the pool level in the Los Angeles Swimming Stadium.

STATE ARMORY:

1. All cameramen may check in through the main entrance.

2. The ushers will assist the cameramen in obtaining locations to take their pictures so that they will not interfere with the spectators.

OLYMPIC AUDITORIUM:

1. Camera Badges will not be admitted at the gates of the Olympic Auditorium. Special Camera Boxes have been reserved in the balcony, and admittance to these will be by a special season ticket which designates the exact location of the box.

PASADENA ROSE BOWL:

1. All cameramen may enter through the Pass Gate (Gate 26, south end of the Stadium) and may enter the stadium through any tunnel.

2. A maximum of one cameraman from each syndicate, two cameramen and one camera from each news-reel, and two official cameramen will be permitted on the field in the Pasadena Rose Bowl. These Cameramen will be checked in through the Pass Gate and will proceed straight forward through the tunnel to the track.

RIVIERA COUNTRY CLUB:

All cameramen will be admitted through the Pass Gate indicated on their badges via the main entrance on Beverly Boulevard. They are expected to keep within the restricted areas and exercise due care not to interfere with the spectators. The Stadium Manager will guard the restricted areas.

LONG BEACH MARINE STADIUM:

1. All cameramen will be admitted to the Long Beach Marine Stadium through the Pass Gates: - (1) adjacent to the boathouse on Nieto Street, and (2) at the entrance to the press stands on Colorado Street.

2. The attendants will assist cameramen in obtaining good locations to take pictures. Special care must be taken not to interfere with the view of spectators.

SPECIAL NOTICE

THE USE OF FLASHLIGHT POWDER OF ANY SORT IS ABSOLUTELY PROHIBITED IN OR ADJACENT TO ANY OF THE OLYMPIC STADIUMS OR FACILITIES

INFORMATION CONCERNING THE SALE

Program salesmen must be wearing the regulation uniform and be clean and neatly dressed.

Each Stadium Manager should mutually agree with the Head Program Salesman upon the locations for supply stations and on all special regulations concerning each stadium. Any salesman breaking any regulations should be first warned by the ushers or other members of the staff and if he fails to co-operate, it should be reported to his section chief or superior, who will require the offending salesman to turn in the balance of his programs and give up his badge.

OLYMPIC STADIUM:

Four program salesmen are permitted to sell in each section. Program badges have two numbers. The first number indicates the section number, and the second number the salesman's serial number. These badges will admit program salesmen to the Stadium through the gate on the inside fence corresponding to the first number on their badge, under the following conditions:

They must be carrying their programs in the regulation program salesman's bag. A salesman may exit and re-enter with a new supply of programs through his proper gate at any time. In case the gate indicated on a salesman's badge is not open for any particular event, that salesman will not be allowed to enter the Stadium through any other gate.

Supply Stations will be situated in the permanent ticket booths:

1. Between the inside and the outside fence near Gate 4.
2. Between the inside and the outside fence near Gate 24.
3. Between the inside and the outside fence near Gate 33.

All program salesmen will be admitted through the outside fence through Gates 4, 24, and 33 exclusively. Special gatemen should be at these three gates to identify and check the program salesmen in and out, as they are permitted to exit and re-enter through these gates as often as necessary for a fresh supply of programs.

- 25 -

All program salesmen are permitted to sell outside the outside fence and inside the outside fence as long as they do not interfere with the public in any way.

The following are the rules of the Stadium:

1. Program salesmen are permitted to sell in the section designated on their badges only.
2. They cannot go from one section to another along the transverse aisles.
3. They must remain in the vertical aisles and are not permitted to go between seat rows at any time.
4. They must stay away from the tunnel entrances while the crowd is entering and leaving the Stadium.
5. They must not call their wares while an announcement of any kind is being made, or while any event is in progress, when such calling would interfere with the spectators.
6. They must be in the regulation uniform for program salesmen.

OLYMPIC PARK:

Program badges numbered 1 to 80 will be issued for salesmen in Olympic Park. These salesmen are permitted to enter outside fence Gates 4, 24, and 33 for their supply of programs, but they are not permitted to enter the Olympic Stadium under any circumstances.

SWIMMING STADIUM:

Olympic Park badges numbers 1 to 16 will admit to the Swimming Stadium.

STATE ARMORY - Fencing:

Four program salesmen will be admitted to Fencing on Olympic Park badges. The Head Program Salesman will furnish the Stadium Manager the serial numbers of badges to be admitted.

OLYMPIC AUDITORIUM, ROSE BOWL, RIVIERA COUNTRY CLUB and LONG BEACH MARINE STADIUM:

Program badges for these stadiums are marked "Outside Stadiums - Not Good in Olympic Park". They are all serially numbered. The maximum number of salesmen to be admitted to each stadium is as follows:

- 26 -

Rose Bowl 25
Long Beach Marine Stadium 75

In each case the Head Program Salesman will furnish the Stadium Manager with the serial numbers of the badges which will admit salesmen. Others must not be admitted. Each Stadium Manager will agree with the Head Program Salesman upon locations for supply stations and convenient gates for the salesmen to pass through.

Olympic Auditorium - one pass gate only. Supply station inside.

Rose Bowl - One Pass Gate only through outer fence. Supply station inside outer fence. Program salesmen may enter and exit through tunnels into stadium at any time.

Riviera Country Club - One Pass Gate through outer fence. Supply station under or adjacent to permanent stands. Salesmen allowed to enter and exit stands. No loud calling at any time and no selling while horses are performing.

Long Beach Marine Stadium - Stadium Manager will agree with the Head Program Salesman upon the number of pass gates necessary, and designate the number of salesmen to be permitted to sell in each area. Supply stations inside fence.

NOTICE TO ALL STADIUM MANAGERS:

1. Program salesmen are not permitted to sell in the Tribune.
2. Arrange for location to count program money.
3. Rules of Olympic Park as described above are to be enforced at all stadiums in so far as they are applicable.

OUTLINE OF PAYROLL SYSTEM

Each Stadium Manager will provide the Central Office with a detailed outline of the anticipated organization necessary to operate his stadium during the period of the Games, and a budget of cost. This will be based on the anticipated crowds at each stadium.

Stadium organizations must necessarily be flexible so that they can be increased or decreased each day depending upon the attendance. The budget estimates are necessarily tentative. However, they should be carefully prepared so that increases should be caused only by increased attendance.

AFTER THE FIRST DAY OR TWO OF OPERATION

MANY ECONOMIES CAN BE EFFECTED

IT IS YOUR DUTY TO SEE THAT THIS IS DONE

METHOD OF EMPLOYMENT

Applicants for work will fill out standard application cards which will be prepared and printed by the Stadium Manager in conjunction with the Paymaster.

The Stadium Manager will then send each accepted applicant a double government postcard, one-half of which notifies the applicant of his appointment and where and when to report for duty, and the uniform required. The other half is his acceptance card which he will sign and return to the Stadium Manager.

On receipt of the acceptance cards the Stadium Manager will complete the original application cards, filling in the identification number, the position in which the man is to work, and the number of badge which is to be issued to him each time he is assigned to work.

Identification numbers will start from (1) at each stadium and run serially without regard to the type of work to which the man is assigned. The badge numbers should be assigned in the order of preference in which the Stadium Manager desires to select his organization for work each day. For example: If a Stadium Manager has 100 gatemen, the best gatemen should be issued the lowest badge numbers so that if 50 gatemen are to work on a particular day, the men to whom the badges 1 to 50 are assigned would be automatically selected.

After all assignments have been made on the original application forms, they will be turned over to the Paymaster who will prepare an identification card (an envelope form) for each employee.

At least one day before the opening event in his stadium, the Stadium Manager will give the Paymaster, in addition to the application cards, a list containing the name, identification number, position and rate of pay for each employee, and sign the list as authority to the Paymaster to issue identification cards to those whose names appear on the list.

On the day the employee reports for duty he will surrender his appointment card and an identification card will be issued to each employee who will sign his identification card in the presence of a representative of the Paymaster. This signature will be compared with the signature on the original application card at that time.

OPERATION OF THE PAYROLL SYSTEM:

On reporting for duty each day (including the first day after the identification cards have been issued), each employee to be assigned for work on that day will present his identification card at the designated time and place where a representative of the Paymaster and a member of the Manager's staff, working together, will exchange his identification card for his celluloid badge. The men will then be given their instructions by their chiefs and report to their posts for duty.

If a full organization is not needed for any particular day, all men not assigned for duty will not be given a badge, but on presentation of their identification cards (in this case they will retain their identification cards) will be admitted to the employees' section of their own stadium.

This method of issuing badges will be followed out for each group in the order of their rank, that is: the chiefs of each division will report to the Stadium Manager who will see that their badges are issued, and thereafter these chiefs will see that the badges for their assistants are distributed, etc., until the entire organization for that day have been issued their badges.

After the identification cards are collected, the payroll man will take them to the Paymaster's Office where vouchers will be prepared and inserted in the identification cards. This voucher will be in the exact amount of the pay for each man for that one event. At an agreed time toward the end of each program, the chief of each division will assemble his men and meet the payroll man at a designated place, where the payroll man will validate each voucher with a signature punch as he returns the identification card envelope containing the voucher in exchange for each celluloid badge. The vouchers will be cashed at the conclusion of each show at the Cashier's Office. The employee will then retain his identity card in order to gain admittance to the stadium for the next event.

In the event there are two or more shows to be held in a stadium in one day, the badges will be issued before the beginning of the first show, in the manner described above, and collected at the conclusion of the last show.

Vouchers may be issued either at the conclusion of each show or held until the conclusion of the last show.

Any additional employees added for a second or a third show during a day will be issued their badges in the standard way. If the organization is to be cut down between shows on any particular day, the Stadium Manager will notify the Paymaster in advance of the men who are to be released and the Paymaster will issue their vouchers at the time of their release in the standard way.

All employees should be instructed to cash their vouchers immediately after the final event at which they work each day. Vouchers more than 36 hours old will not be honored. No vouchers will be cashed without identification cards.

A CASHIER will be appointed at each stadium who will be responsible to cash the vouchers. Vouchers must be signed by the employees at the Cashier's window where they will present their identification cards in order to prove their signature. The Stadium Managers will call the General Operating Manager and a Cashier will be mutually agreed upon.

If it is necessary for a Stadium Manager to assign extra workers after the general assignment has been made, he will fill out a special detail sheet and send it to the Payroll Office. A payroll representative will report at once with the proper badges to the spot where the detail is to be issued credentials and the badges will be issued in the standard way.

If special details are necessary, the Stadium Manager will send the man to the Paymaster's Office with a note (forms for which will be provided) where the Paymaster will collect his identification card and issue him his badge. If the man had no identification card, one would be issued on this authority.

Where the amount of money to be paid a man is not standard, the Manager must provide a special detail sheet for the Paymaster with a short explanation of the type of work and the amount to be paid in each case.

RATES OF PAY:

Standard rates of pay for all types of work will be furnished by the Paymaster on approval from the Central Office in advance. Absolutely no exception can be made in the standard rates of pay, except for special work which is certified by the Stadium Manager.

In the event a man is transferred from one stadium to another, his identification card will be taken up and a new one issued. Such transfer will be made on mutual agreement of both Stadium Managers in each case.

The Stadium Manager must furnish the Paymaster and the Cashier each night with a complete list of the maximum number of men who will be assigned to duty in each department of his organization, and where they will report, for each show of the day following. Standard forms for this list will be provided by the Paymaster. As far as possible, men should be notified one day in advance whether or not they are to be assigned for duty.

INFORMATION CONCERNING SALE OF

OFFICIAL PICTORIAL SOUVENIR OF THE XTH OLYMPIAD

REGULATIONS CONCERNING SALE OF OFFICIAL PICTORIAL SOUVENIR BOOKLET:

Salesmen are not permitted to sell this book in the stands at any stadium. However, they will be permitted to sell as follows:

Olympic Stadium

Between the inside and outside fences
Maximum number of salesmen at any time - 50

Swimming Stadium

Between the inside and outside fences
Maximum number of salesmen at any time - 10

Olympic Auditorium

In halls on inside, but not in aisles or seat sections.
Maximum number of salesmen at any time - 10

Riviera Country Club

Around outside of stands.

Pasadena Rose Bowl

Inside of outside fence, but not through tunnels.

Long Beach Marine Stadium

Inside of outside fence and in standing room areas and back of seat sections.
Maximum number of salesmen back of seat sections - 20
Maximum number of salesmen in standing room areas - 10

State Armory

Salesmen may sell in the open ends of the Armory, but not near the seat sections.

(Addenda - 2)

All guards and attendants are instructed to see that salesmen for the Official Pictorial Booklet do not in any way interfere with the entry and exit of the crowds.

The head salesman will arrange with Stadium Managers for checking-out stations, etc. At the Olympic Stadium, two of the ticket booths inside of the outside fence will be provided for this purpose.

METHOD OF ADMITTANCE:

All salesmen will wear celluloid button badges marked OFFICIAL PICTORIAL SOUVENIR. All of these badges are serially numbered at each stadium, beginning with (1).

Salesmen will be allowed to enter through the Pass Gates to the areas in which they are permitted to sell only, and in no cases will they be admitted to the seat sections with or without books.

If 13 salesmen are to be admitted, badges numbered 1 to 13 will be admitted; if 20, badges 1 to 20, etc. - exactly as the concession salesmen are admitted. They must all be admitted at one time, and if they leave the grounds, they will not be permitted to re-enter.

NEARLY ONE THOUSAND LOS ANGELES POLICE OFFICERS, SPECIALLY ASSIGNED TO THE GAMES, RECEIVING FINAL INSTRUCTIONS

TRAFFIC CONTROL

THE traffic problem was not a new one for the Olympic Games, but for those of the Xth Olympiad it constituted a more serious problem than in previous celebrations of the Games.

The City of Los Angeles is spread over a large area of comparatively open or flat territory. There are few natural geographical conditions to force the development of the city into main converging lines, as is the case in many large cities. Instead of there being one or two principal lanes of rapid transit through subways or on elevated tracks, a great network of boulevards has been developed. The automobile has been adopted by all classes of people as the primary means of transportation and the favorable climatic conditions have augmented its use for purposes of pleasure as well as of business.

There are approximately one million automobiles in use within a radius of a hundred miles of Olympic Stadium. Under normal conditions the boulevards are crowded to near capacity. For the period of the Olympic Games, an additional heavy traffic load had to be anticipated on all main boulevards and particularly on streets leading to the Stadium. It was necessary to create new lanes piercing the public traffic around Olympic Stadium for vehicles carrying officials and contestants, so that these could quickly reach the Stadium at all times. Also, space had to be provided in a convenient location near by to park their automobiles and busses.

A Traffic Committee was organized consisting of traffic experts of the Los Angeles Police Department, and the Traffic Manager for the Organizing Committee. The Police Department relieved the men assigned to this work of all other duties, and instructed them to spend their full time perfecting the traffic plan for the Olympic Games in co-operation with the Traffic Manager and Organizing Committee. After several months of intensive work, the Traffic Committee completed a Traffic Plan, and this was printed and sent to all members of the Los Angeles Police Department, so that they would be familiar with all its details.

The members of the Traffic Committee were:

Roy E. Steckel	Chief of Police, City of Los Angeles
Deputy Chief James E. Davis	Chairman of the Committee
Willis O. Hunter	Traffic Manager, Organizing Committee
Inspector A. W. Gifford	Lieutenant Fred A. Therkorn
Lieutenant James B. Peyton	Lieutenant Herman F. Luedtke

It was necessary to secure the services of some 800 police officers to put the plan into effect. The Los Angeles Police Department was working under a very restricted budget and could not obtain sufficient funds to employ this number of additional men. The Chief of Police made an appeal to all of the men of the Department, first, to work twelve hours per day instead of the regulation eight, and second, to postpone vacations. The men generously agreed to this, and thus made it possible for the Department to assign approximately 650 men to Olympic traffic duty each day during the period of the Games. As this number was short of the number called for by the Traffic Plan, the Organizing Committee agreed to employ one hundred and fifty university students to assist the police and complete the organization.

Meetings were held with the executive officers of the Police Department, which culminated in one big mass meeting, of nearly a thousand police officers, in Olympic Stadium the day before the Opening Ceremony. At this meeting the highlights of the Traffic Plan were outlined, and the responsibilities of the police officers and the necessity for courtesy and efficiency was stressed.

Probably no other meeting had such an important bearing upon the success of the Games as this police meeting in Olympic Stadium. That the men fully realized their responsibilities, and that they grasped the spirit of the Olympic Games, is vividly demonstrated by the magnificent performance of their work. Great credit is due the Police Department of the City of Los Angeles, and particularly to the men who worked many extra hours without additional compensation. It was their contribution to the Games of the Xth Olympiad and is a splendid testimonial to the men themselves, as well as to the event which furnished the inspiration.

By the Traffic Plan, the principal streets leading to Olympic Stadium from the downtown section of the city were made one-way streets for traffic going to the Stadium before each event, and one-way streets for traffic going from the Stadium after each event. All counter traffic was diverted away from the area immediately surrounding the Stadium, for a distance of approximately one-half mile. No parking of automobiles was permitted on the main streets leading to Olympic Park. Left-hand turns were not permitted wherever they would interfere with the flow of traffic. One of the one-way streets was made the Official Route, and it was recommended that all officials going to and from the Stadium and the downtown section use this street. Police officers were stationed along the entire route to assist them through the traffic, and public traffic on this street was restricted to prevent crowding and to facilitate the rapid flow of the official cars.

Special Auto Passes to be attached to windshields were designed to identify official cars. These were issued to members of the International Olympic Committee, five to each International Federation, from two to ten to each National Olympic Committee, depending upon the size of their delegation in Los Angeles, to attachés, members and staff of the Organizing Committee, Government officials and special guests. A total of 682 of these special Auto Passes was issued.

The Auto Passes were divided into six groups, each indicated by a large red figure visible at some distance — 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6. This number indicated the area in which the car should be parked at Olympic Stadium. A map on the back of each pass gave the route to follow to reach the indicated area.

Official routes to all other stadiums were designated on maps included in the book of information supplied to all Olympic visitors. The cars with these Auto Pass stickers were given special consideration by the police at all points in the city, and along these official routes they were given right-of-way over all other traffic. A large red circle was prominently printed on the Auto Passes issued to the International Olympic Committee, the presidents and secretaries of National Olympic Committees, the presidents and secretaries of the International Federations, members of the Organizing Committee, and others who had responsibilities at stadiums. Parking space was reserved at all stadiums for cars bearing the windshield sticker with this special red circle. All Auto Pass windshield stickers were detachable, and the officials carried them in their pockets and used them on any car in which they were riding to the Olympic events.

The street leading from the Olympic Village to Olympic Stadium was patrolled by police officers at all times, and official cars and busses carrying athletes were given right-of-way over all traffic.

On the day of the Opening Ceremony, the hundreds of official cars, and the sixty-eight busses carrying nearly 2,000 athletes from the Olympic Village and other points to Olympic Stadium, were enabled to travel rapidly and without a single stop over the entire distance, through the dense traffic created by the 105,000 spectators going to the Stadium. The running time of the busses from the Olympic Village to the Stadium averaged from ten to twelve minutes.

The street adjacent to the Stadium on the west was closed to the public for a distance of approximately 1,000 feet, and no public parking was permitted on this street for a distance of over 2,000 feet. This street was used for the purpose of loading and unloading athletes on and off the busses, and for parking.

The Marathon, the 50,000 Metre Walk, the 100 Kilometre Cross Country Cycling Race, and the Cross Country Equestrian competitions all created special traffic problems. Of these, the Marathon presented the greatest difficulty. Beginning and ending at Olympic Stadium, the Marathon course extended approximately twenty-six miles, mostly through a thickly populated section of the city. Due to its historic character, a great deal of publicity had been given the event in the newspapers and tremendous public interest was aroused. It occurred, also, on Sunday afternoon, when most of the people of the city were at leisure.

It was necessary to patrol the entire distance of the course in order to avoid any interference with the runners on the part of the public. Chain controls were erected along the course for a distance of approximately 1,000 feet, from the point where the runners would leave and re-enter the Stadium. From the end of this chain control, for a distance of approximately four miles through the most congested part of the course, provision was made to close the course to all traffic for half an hour while the athletes were out-bound and for an hour at the time the athletes were returning.

At the end of this four-mile section, the course was laid out in the form of a large loop returning to the same point and thence to the Stadium over the same route as out-bound. Several hundred police officers were stationed at the dangerous intersections around this loop, to cut off all traffic in advance of the runners and to hold it until the last runner was past.

In addition to this, over one hundred police officers mounted on motorcycles met the runners at the beginning of the loop, one stationed at each of the first hundred intersections or streets crossing the course, to cut off all traffic and to see that the course was kept open. After the last runner passed the last motorcycle officer, the officer would immediately proceed past the others and take his position at the first intersection beyond the first motorcycle officer. In this way the motorcycle men progressed with the athletes, thus forming a "moving sleeve" of protection within which the athletes ran around the loop. Part of the officers assisted in clearing the remainder of the course to the Stadium. Additional chain controls were installed around the refreshment stations. These proved to be invaluable. The course was kept open for all of the runners and no interference on the part of the public was reported by any of the officials or by any of the runners.

Although there was no way of accurately counting the number of people who witnessed the Marathon, it has been estimated that no less than one-half million persons thronged the twenty-six mile course outside the Stadium.

The course for the Cross Country phase of the Equestrian championship unavoidably bisected all of the numerous busy thoroughfares and highways between the city of Los Angeles and the Santa Monica bay district, and this event was scheduled to be held during the peak of the morning traffic. The route of the course followed the rural districts, through which sections motor cars travel at high speeds. It was not only necessary to protect the horses and riders from actual injury, but also to stop the traffic at sufficient distance from the course so that the high-bred animals would not be frightened or disturbed by automobiles or other vehicles. Through the co-operation of the local police departments of the districts through which the course was laid out, and with the additional assistance of Los Angeles and State police, traffic was either detoured around the course or rigidly controlled. Cars were not allowed to cross the course at any point during the period of the event unless it was absolutely safe for them to do so. Chain controls were installed at the finish to prevent crowding by the public.

In the cases of the 50,000 Metre Walk and the 100 Kilometre Cycling Race, highways which could be shut off from all public traffic were chosen as courses, and sufficient police officers were assigned to duty to keep spectators within bounds.

The California Highway Patrol, under the direction of E. Raymond Cato, co-operated with the Committee in every possible way, particularly in furnishing motorcycle officers wherever required to protect the athletes or to expedite traffic.

The Automobile Club of Southern California assisted the Organizing Committee in numerous ways such as surveying, and measuring and mapping all cross country courses. This civic spirited organization was of particular service to the Traffic Committee in making and supplying maps, printing and posting thousands of traffic signs, supplying emergency cars, and in many other ways. Its traffic experts gave unselfishly of their time whenever called upon during the Games.

It is a matter of gratification to all concerned that not a single accident of any kind was reported involving any athlete or official, nor was a single protest made on account of interference by spectators, during the entire period of the training and competition of the Olympic Games, and furthermore, police records show that traffic accidents actually decreased during this period in spite of the increase of traffic occasioned by the Games.

FILTERING QUESTIONS THROUGH THE TELEPHONE INFORMATION BUREAU

TELEPHONE ORGANIZATION

THE telephone was a prime factor in the operation and administration of the Games of the Xth Olympiad.

Inasmuch as the major portion of the business of the executives was done over the telephone, it was necessary that important calls, both incoming and outgoing, be handled without interference or delay through the maze of thousands of incoming calls from the public. It was realized that all public calls must be answered courteously and satisfactorily, and a method had to be devised to separate calls which could be handled by information clerks from those which should go through to the executives.

The system adopted and installed was designed with such care and functioned with such automatic smoothness that members of the Organizing Committee were hardly conscious of its existence as a mechanical system.

The executive departments of the Committee, which had consisted of a small and highly centralized group until the months immediately preceding the Games, rapidly expanded in numbers and over a wide area as the Games approached. The plan of telephone communication was designed in advance of this expansion period in such a way that it could be increased from time to time without interfering with the service or changing the fundamental plan. Telephone service was increased only as needed in order to avoid unnecessary expense.

Two eighty-line switchboards were installed in the Central Executive Office, with forty-six trunk lines leading into the boards from the outside. Of these lines, eleven were listed under a Ticket Department number, twenty under a General Office number, seven under an Information number, and eight were unlisted and their numbers used privately by the executive departments of the Committee.

A battery of "turrets" was set up which provided positions for twenty operators to answer all incoming calls, except those coming in on the eight unlisted lines, before connecting them with the main switchboard. Any operator could answer a call on any incoming line, making it possible to transfer a call from an operator unable to speak the language of the person calling in to another operator able to do so. The operators were provided with revolving racks containing complete information concerning the Games, revised and kept up to date daily.

It was found that the operators on the turrets were able to answer approximately ninety per cent of the incoming calls without sending them through the main switchboard. The turret system thus accomplished the double purpose of screening the calls to the Central Executive Office and of serving as an information bureau to the public.

BATTERY OF TURRETS IN CENTRAL OLYMPIC

Calls for specific individuals in the Executive Office were immediately connected with the main switchboard, and by means of a "split circuit" the operator on the turret directed the switchboard operator to whom the call should go without the person calling hearing the conversation. The person calling in would first hear the answer of the operator on the turret and the next voice he would hear would be from the office of the person he was calling. This was accomplished without appreciable delay.

The eight unlisted lines terminated directly on the central switchboard and were used for incoming and outgoing calls of executives of the Committee without the necessity of going through the turrets. These lines were in effect private lines for the Committee and were kept "open" at all times for important calls.

There were forty-eight individual telephones in the Executive Office connected with the central switchboard. Each executive had two telephones on his desk, one for general telephone service, the other reserved exclusively for intercommunication and important incoming calls.

A private switchboard with four operators was installed at the Olympic Village with thirty-nine trunk lines leading from the outside. These were connected with two hundred and ten individual telephones located in various parts of the Village, as follows:

(1) Four telephones for each nation, distributed thus:

One public and one private telephone in the Attaché's Office in the Administration Building.

One public and one private telephone in the Team Manager's Cottage within the Village.

The private telephone in each case was for official business and no charge was made for its use. The public telephone was for all purposes other than official business

Sports Technical Department, had eighteen connecting individual telephones.

During the period of occupancy by the teams, the Olympic Village switchboard was operated twenty-four hours per day. All other switchboards were operated from twelve to eighteen hours per day.

Four direct lines were installed on the Central Office switchboard, one leading to the Olympic Village switchboard, two leading direct to the Sports Technical Department at the Village, and one leading to the switchboard at Olympic Stadium.

The direct lines to the Olympic Village switchboard and to Olympic Stadium, and one to the Sports Technical Department at the Olympic Village, were for the exclusive use of the executives.

The second direct line to the Sports Technical Department at the Olympic Village terminated in the registration room where a complete Olympic roster was kept. Calls coming into the central switchboard asking for local addresses or other information regarding Olympic visitors were connected with this line.

Two direct lines were installed between Olympic Stadium and the Olympic Village for private official use, particularly for the Sports Technical Department.

At each of the other stadiums, including Olympic Auditorium, and the Cycling, Equestrian, Rowing, Swimming, Fencing, and Shooting Stadiums, two individual telephones were installed, one of which was unlisted and was available only to members of the Committee, the other for incoming calls from the public. These telephones were in addition to the existing service at these stadiums.

Great credit is due the Southern California Telephone Company and its engineers for their co-operation in devising the plan and in installing the system, and for the efficiency and economy of its operation.

Additional service was furnished by the telephone company for the telegraph companies, for the teletype communications, the Dow, Jones electric writing machines outside of Olympic Stadium, and the newspapers and Press associations.

A summary of the telephone communication equipment installed at each location, for all purposes, is given in the tables on pages 160 and 161.

The second Table on page 160 shows the total number of out-going telephone calls from the various locations over the official telephone system of the Organizing Committee, not including Press and other services.

It was estimated through test checks that there were from six to seven incoming calls for each out-going call. Using this as a basis, it would be conservative to estimate that not less than 500,000 calls were received and answered through the Olympic Games telephone system during the period of its operation, exclusive of Press and other special services.

GRAPHIC COMMUNICATION OF RECORDS AND INFORMATION

One of the most important duties of the Sports Technical Department was to compile complete and accurate records of the results of all competitions at each Stadium and immediately transmit them to Olympic Stadium, where they could be announced directly to the spectators in the Stadium and through the Press to the rest of the world. Realizing the importance of accurately spelling the names of the representatives of the forty countries taking part in the competitions, as well as the importance of the data concerning their performances, the need of a system of rapid graphic communication became evident. After considerable investigation it was decided to install a network of teletypewriting machines between the key points where this type of communication was necessary. Although the teletypewriters were installed primarily for the transmission of records, they could also be used to great advantage for communication between executives at the various stadiums.

HEADQUARTERS, SPORTS TECHNICAL AND COMMUNICATIONS

The first teletypewriter communication was established between the Central Office of the Organizing Committee and the Sports Technical office in the Olympic Village to transmit information regarding arrivals, arrangements for housing, and in compiling the card index record of all persons in Los Angeles officially connected with the Games.

During the training period, the headquarters of the Sports Technical Department, which had charge of the training and transportation arrangements, was moved to the Olympic Village, and later, during the period of the competitions, it was moved to Olympic Stadium and a branch established at every place where competitions were held.

A second teletypewriter was installed in the Olympic Village headquarters of the Department and connected with the machine in Olympic Stadium located in the Sports Technical headquarters there. With the start of the actual competition, additional teletypewriters were set up in Olympic Stadium connecting with teletypewriters located at the Swimming Stadium, Fencing Stadium, the Olympic Auditorium (scene of Weightlifting, Wrestling and Boxing), and at the Rowing Stadium in Long Beach, and one from Olympic Stadium to the downtown office. A corps of expert operators was organized and drilled in Olympic procedure and the importance of accuracy. Thus the teletypewriter became the primary means of written communication between stadiums, and Olympic Stadium became the center through which all information regarding competitions was cleared.

By means of the teletypewriter system the official results of all events wherever held were available at Olympic Stadium almost at the instant they were completed, the spelling and all other information correct, ready for immediate dissemination. In addition to this, the results of the events in Olympic Stadium and the other outside stadiums were transmitted to all stadiums where competitions were being held, so that the spectators in each stadium were kept constantly informed of the progress of all Olympic competitions in all the other stadiums.

All information regarding events in progress on the field of Olympic Stadium was brought to the Sports Technical office by means of a field telephone system which extended to the Field Manager's stand near the start of the sprints and to various other points on the field. Accurate information regarding every jump or throw in the field events, and regarding other matters of interest, was immediately flashed over this telephone system and thence disseminated over the various means of communication. This particular service was extremely valuable in the use of the Public Address System as it enabled the announcer to keep the spectators informed at all times of the progress of all events, a service which added greatly to the enjoyment of the Games.

The problem of disseminating the information received in the Sports Technical Department at Olympic Stadium was a corollary of the problem of collecting it. It was announced over the Public Address System and simultaneously on the Scoreboard. An additional teletypewriter communication was set up between the Sports Technical Department and the Scoreboard in Olympic Stadium so that all announcements shown on the Board could be taken directly from written communications and thus assure accuracy.

The problem of communicating the information in correct and complete form to the hundreds of Press representatives was more difficult. Ordinary means of printing or mimeographing results for distribution were slow and through some oversight the results might not reach the entire group. After a great deal of investigation, it was decided to attempt something entirely new by adopting electrically operated writing machines, hitherto used almost exclusively for the dissemination of financial news from the Stock Exchange.

Arrangements were made for the installation of several hundred of these machines in the Press Stand at Olympic Stadium, with others placed in the downtown offices of the Los Angeles newspapers and the large Press associations, and at various other points where Olympic groups might gather, such as the Olympic Village, the Women's hotel, the Central Offices and Press headquarters, the Ticket Office and Photographic Service headquarters, and the office of the printer of the Daily Programme. One of these machines was installed opposite each loge in the Tribune of Honor so that the officials occupying this stand would be constantly informed of the progress of events.

The sending device was in the Sports Technical headquarters at Olympic Stadium, where all official results were received over the teletypewriter system. These results were carefully selected and edited, and then relayed to the Press and other points where the machines were located as rapidly as information was available.

This system was installed and in operation at all outside points two weeks previous to the Games, carrying news of the arrivals and the practice activities of the teams. It proved to be an outstanding contribution in the way of news dissemination to the Press and was greatly appreciated, as it enabled a single newspaper representative to cover the Games without leaving his seat at the stadium.

In the Press Stand at Olympic Stadium, these printing machines were installed directly on the tables at which the journalists were writing. One machine was placed between each pair of seats to accommodate representatives of the more important newspapers and Press associations. The machines for those to whom instantaneous service was not quite so necessary were spaced a trifle more widely. The information appeared upon a long continuous roll of paper, so that newspapermen who arrived late or who left their seats for a period of time would find the complete results in their machines upon their arrival or return. If desired they could tear off the sheet of paper and file it with the telegraph companies, by the simple act of writing an address at the top of the paper.

The printing machines in Olympic Stadium were maintained in operation only during the hours that events were being held in that stadium, but the other machines in the downtown newspaper offices, the Olympic offices, the Village, the Daily Programme office and other outside points, were in operation almost continuously from nine o'clock in the morning until after midnight.

During the thirty days of operation of this service, which was installed and maintained by the Dow, Jones Company, more than 150,000 words were sent over the machines, approximately thirty miles of printer paper being used in the process. A total of nearly a hundred miles of wire circuits was necessary to install the system.

PRESS TELEGRAPH

For the convenience of the Press representatives, a Press Telegraph Department was installed at Olympic Stadium, located just above the seats occupied by them. Adequate space was provided accommodating two hundred persons, including operators, messengers and technicians, one-half of which space was allotted to the Postal Telegraph Company and one-half to the Western Union. The section was so constructed that the newspapermen could have access to the telegraph operators with a minimum of difficulty or could signal and have their messages picked up by messenger boys. Correspondents who wished to dictate directly to a telegraph operator could do so by occupying special seats set aside for that purpose in the Press Telegraph section. Branch telegraph offices were located at outlying stadiums.

The Telegraph operators were on duty at all times. Direct connections were established between the stadium and foreign cities and news centers, and the results of Olympic events were flashed abroad within a few seconds after the events were finished. The proximity of the telegraph sending instruments to the seats of the actual working Press representatives, together with the quick and accurate information made available through the automatic writing machines, gave the correspondents what they characterized as the "finest Press arrangements ever provided for any event of world magnitude."

As a direct result of the vast amount of Olympic information made available to the Press, a total of more than four million words was telegraphed directly from Olympic Stadium by the commercial telegraph companies, approximately three million words to points in the United States, and to Canada and Mexico, and the remainder being cabled abroad. This does not include the very large volume of words sent out by the news services over their own leased wires.

COMPILATION OF RECORDS AND RESULTS

THE compilation of accurate and complete records and results of the various phases of competition of the Games was essential.

The method adopted for compiling and recording this information involved two separate tasks, one for events that took place in Olympic Stadium and the other for those which took place outside Olympic Stadium. The Communication System, with its teletype and telephone installations at the various points of competition, provided for the immediate transfer of information.

The Records Department was set up in the headquarters of the Sports Technical Department at Olympic Stadium. It had immediate access to all information coming in from the various competitions over teletype and telephone and could be in touch with all events taking place in the Stadium.

Results in the different competitions were communicated to the headquarters of the Sports Technical Department at Olympic Stadium by the following methods :

Inter-Communicating Telephone	Teletype	Telephone
Athletics	Rowing	Cycling
Gymnastics	Swimming	Equestrian Sports
Field Hockey	Boxing	Shooting
Equestrian Sports (Finals)	Wrestling	Pentathlon
American Football Demonstration	Weightlifting	Yachting
Lacrosse Demonstration	Fencing
	Pentathlon

For the events held in Olympic Stadium, a field phone was installed with a three-instrument circuit connecting the Manager's Stand, the Finish Stand and the Sports Technical Headquarters. Through this hook-up, it was possible to supply the Public Address System, the Scoreboard, and the Records Department, with all necessary information immediately.

The teletype service furnished communication facilities from other points of competition outside Olympic Stadium, such as the Rowing Stadium at Long Beach, the Armory, where the Fencing was held, the Swimming Stadium, and the Olympic Auditorium where competition was held in Weightlifting, Wrestling and Boxing. From the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, results of Cycling were sent in by telephone as were those of the Equestrian Sports held at Riviera Country Club and the Shooting at the Police Rifle Range. Both teletype and telephone service was utilized in communicating results in the various phases of the Pentathlon competition.

Special forms were used wherever possible with the names of all contestants in the various events tabulated in advance of the competition, thereby eliminating confusion and delay. At the end of each day's competition, all records and results of events in Olympic Stadium were checked against those of the Federation so as to avoid any possible error which might have occurred through such a rapid transfer of information.

A member of the Sports Technical staff was assigned to each of the outside competitions, whose duty it was to obtain the official results of all events held where he was stationed, and to make out a detailed written report of these results and send it by "special messenger" to the Records Department at the end of each day. Upon receipt of this information, the recording clerk of this department carefully checked all data and filed it in its proper order.

Speedy compilation of certified results of all competitions on the day they occurred, made it possible to publish the outcome of all contests in the Official Programme the day following. Furthermore, it enabled the Medal Department to prepare accurate schedules for the awarding of first, second, and third place medals in all Victory Ceremonies.

THE CAMERAMEN

THE Protocol required that the Organizing Committee make the necessary arrangements for recording the Games photographically. In addition to this, it was necessary to provide facilities that would enable the Press and News Reels to take pictures for news purposes.

The Committee made no charge of any sort to any photographers. In issuing credentials, however, the Committee retained strict control in order to assure itself, and guarantee to the Sports Federations, that the taking of pictures would in no way interfere with the conduct of the Games. The public were permitted to bring cameras into the stadiums and take pictures from the seats so long as it did not interfere with other spectators.

There were three divisions of photography:

- I. Official Photographic Department (still pictures).
- II. Press Photograph Syndicates (still pictures).
- III. Motion Picture News Reels.

I. OFFICIAL PHOTOGRAPHIC DEPARTMENT

The official still photographers were entirely under the jurisdiction of the

DISPLAY ROOM, OFFICIAL PHOTOGRAPHIC DEPARTMENT,
OLYMPIC STADIUM

Organizing Committee. A director was appointed for this Department several months before the opening of the Games. His duties were to supervise the taking of official pictures, the developing of the films, and the supply and sale of prints to all accredited officials, athletes and members of the Press, the latter only after they had been serviced by the news photo syndicates. A budget was provided to carry on the work of this Department, and while there was no attempt to make a profit on the sale of photographs, a nominal charge of thirty-five cents per print was made as a partial reimbursement for the cost of operation of the Department.

A survey was made of the activities and events to be covered, as a basis for an estimate of the number of pictures it would be necessary for the Department to take. It was decided to photograph the following:

- (1) Starts and finishes of all final races.
- (2) As far as possible, starts and finishes of the semi-final and other races.
- (3) At least the first three place winners in all individual and team competitions.
- (4) Activities at Olympic Village and Women's housing at Chapman Park Hotel.
- (5) Arrivals of teams and delegations.
- (6) Activities of the various departments of the Organizing Committee.
- (7) Complete pictures of the Opening and Closing Ceremonies and special events.
- (8) Other interesting matters and events directly and indirectly connected with the Games, desirable in a complete photographic record of the Games of the Xth Olympiad.

The estimate arrived at, as a result of this survey, was that it would be necessary for the Photographic Department to take a total of approximately 5,000 still pictures. Using this estimate as a basis, arrangements were made for space, supplies, equipment and personnel to do the work, and a sales room was set up in Olympic Stadium. Six expert news photographers were selected to work regularly at all places during the period of the Games, and on special days extra photographers were employed.

As the pictures were taken each day at various points of Olympic activity, they were rushed to a central laboratory where they were developed and printed. A serial number was put on each negative and on each print. The negatives were filed according to these serial numbers so that they could be quickly found whenever additional prints were desired. Samples of all prints were posted in the sales room at Olympic Stadium, where all accredited officials, athletes and representatives of the Press were permitted to inspect them. Clerks in the sales room took orders for the prints, identified by their serial numbers, and each night the day's orders were sent to the laboratory, where the specified prints were made and sent to the stadium for delivery the next day.

After the conclusion of the Games all the negatives were catalogued according to events. After eliminating duplicates and negatives otherwise unsatisfactory, a total of over 3,300 negatives was preserved. Approximately 20,000 prints, 7 by 9 inches, and several hundred panoramas up to 16 by 84 inches, were sold to officials, athletes, and the Press. There was no public sale of official photographs.

II. PRESS PHOTOGRAPH SYNDICATES

More than a year before the Games, requests from the Press for the privilege of taking photographs of Olympic competitions began to pour into the office of the Organizing Committee.

Inasmuch as photographers could not be permitted to interfere in any way with the competitions, it was obvious that the number authorized to photograph the Games would have to be so limited that no newspaper could be allowed to take pictures exclusively for its own use.

Upon investigation, it was found that all important newspapers, both domestic and foreign, subscribed to the service of, or could secure photographs from, one or more of four large Press photograph syndicates. It was therefore decided that one credential would be issued to each of these four syndicates at each stadium, permitting them to take photographs from advantageous positions. Photographers with these credentials were extended liberal privileges on the fields and platforms at the various stadiums, on agreement that they would use extreme care at all times not to interfere with the competitions.

Understanding the extremely difficult position in which the Committee found itself in providing a way to supply the newspapers of the world with the photographs, the Los Angeles newspapers waived all special privileges and obtained their photographs in the same manner as all other newspapers, either through the four syndicates, whose pictures were available for immediate publication, or through the official Photographic Department, whose pictures were available the day following the competitions.

Additional credentials were issued to the photograph syndicates, and to the local newspapers, for taking photographs from the stands, under strict regulations.

III. MOTION PICTURE NEWS REELS

Four News Reel concerns were permitted to have one motion picture camera each on the fields or platforms of the various stadiums where competitions were being held. Inasmuch as most of the motion picture film was taken in sound, and the necessary equipment could not easily be moved from place to place, these pictures were mainly taken from fixed positions agreed upon in advance of the Games. Provision was also made for additional News Reel cameras in the stands at the various stadiums. Whenever it was necessary to move motion picture cameras from one place to another, it was done with the least possible amount of disturbance.

The News Reel concerns were required to keep a motion picture record of the Games which was available to the Juries and to the Organizing Committee during the period of the Games.

Realizing the importance of as perfect a photographic record as possible, all attendants at all stadiums were instructed to co-operate with the cameramen in every way, so long as the cameramen were abiding by the regulations of the Organizing Committee concerning their activities.

DAILY PROGRAMMES AND CONCESSIONS

IN PREPARING to produce the Daily Programmes, it was decided to adopt a magazine style, and to carry authentic and interesting information concerning the present and past Games in addition to the usual time tables and entry lists. In this way the spectators would understand and enjoy the Games to the fullest extent. The price of each programme was fixed at the nominal figure of ten cents, which guaranteed a large circulation.

A total of thirty-nine separate programmes was printed, covering all of the events of the Games. All events held in Olympic Stadium, and the Swimming and Fencing events, were included in one programme known as the Olympic Park Programme. It was printed daily during the Games, contained thirty-two pages in each issue, and was the largest and most popular of all of the programmes.

Other programmes, containing specific information regarding events held in each location, were printed for the Olympic Auditorium, covering Weightlifting, Wrestling and Boxing, for the Rose Bowl for Cycling, for the Long Beach Marine Stadium for Rowing, and for the Riviera Country Club for Equestrian events. These programmes were from eight to sixteen pages in size and were printed only on the days events were being held in these locations.

schedule for the day, a summary of all Olympic championships already decided, and, if space permitted, the summary of the previous day's results and some interesting highlights of the Games. All programmes were illustrated with official photographs.

The Sports Technical Department undertook the task of editing the programmes. A competent staff was organized of men with newspaper training, and each day the programme for the following day was written after the results of the competitions became available. One of the electrical typewriting machines was placed in the printer's office and much of the text of the programme, including last minute news and results, was transmitted on this machine directly from Olympic Stadium to the printer. The programmes went to press each night as soon as possible after the results of the evening competitions were available. Each evening estimates were made of the probable attendance on the following day and the number of programmes printed was based on this figure.

The Official Programmes carried on their cover the Olympic poster in colors and were easily identified. They were so complete and so reasonable in price that little difficulty was experienced with unofficial programmes offered for sale.

The total number of programmes distributed was 360,241, of which 28,723 were given to officials and the Press and the remainder sold to the public by an organization of salesmen at each stadium. The actual number of copies of each programme distributed was as follows:

Olympic Park	316,062
Olympic Auditorium	19,256
Long Beach Marine Stadium	14,997
Riviera Country Club	6,799
Rose Bowl	3,127
	360,241

CONCESSIONS

The concessions for the privilege of selling refreshments, including sandwiches, soft drinks, and candies, tobacco, useful novelties such as paper umbrellas and seat pads, and a few souvenirs, were granted to a local concern on a percentage basis and covered all stadiums except the Fencing Stadium.

Inasmuch as there was already a concession operating at the Fencing Stadium, the profits from which were placed in a fund for the benefit of the 160th Infantry, the Committee did not claim the privilege for itself.

Complete control over the sale of all concessions was retained by the Committee. The quality and type of goods sold were carefully checked, the prices limited, and the Committee reserved the right to discontinue all sale of concessions at any time, at any or all locations.

No sale of concessions was permitted in the Tribune in Olympic Stadium. A special service of refreshments was provided in the Tribune by the Organizing Committee.

An official dining-room was established in the Fencing Stadium, conveniently located in Olympic Park, for all accredited Olympic groups and their guests.

Protective Control: The limited and carefully controlled concessions privileges in the stadiums were illustrations of the protective measures taken by the Organizing Committee, from the beginning of its work, to keep the organization of the Games on a true Olympic basis devoid of professional activities and commercialism.

In the year or two preceding the Games, the Committee energetically opposed any efforts of private enterprise to capitalize improperly upon the coming celebration. The various Olympic creations of the Committee, such as its official insignia, poster and commemorative medal designs, etc., were copyrighted, and no Olympic privileges were allowed to pass into private hands.

The holding of any form of international event invariably develops numerous ambitious plans of enterprising individuals aiming to propagandize the event, some with and some without selfish personal interest, but all inadvisable unless they are kept strictly under the control of the properly inspired official management.

California as a whole instantly endorsed this attitude of the Organizing Committee, and it is gratifying that visitors to the Games remarked the care that had been exercised in this regard to protect the Olympic Games from such corrosive activities.

CHECKING AND LISTING NATIONAL FLAGS

FLAGS AND DECORATIONS

THE Protocol required that official flags of all participating nations be used for the Opening and Closing Ceremonies and for the Victory Ceremonies, and in addition, that the national emblems of all Olympic nations be flown as part of the decorations at all Olympic stadiums.

In order to avoid any possible error in the color or design of any flag, a request was sent to the National Olympic Committee of each country for the exact specifications and design of the official national flag of that country. As these specifications and designs were received, a standard size pattern of each flag was made in the exact proportions and official colors. These patterns were bound together and used as the key designs for the manufacture, verification and identification of all national emblems.

A set of the Victory Flags used at the IXth Olympiad in Amsterdam, in 1928, was procured by the Committee from the Dutch Committee. The collection included one large flag for first place, and two somewhat smaller flags for second and third places, for each of fifty-eight nations. Inasmuch as the flags of several countries had been changed during the intervening four years, each flag was carefully checked with the key design, and new flags were made to replace such as had been changed. This was also done in the case of any flags lost or damaged.

A complete set of silk flags was made up for the March Past, or Parade of Nations, of the Opening and Closing Ceremonies. In all, approximately one thousand flags, including the national flags of the fifty-eight nations and the

BY ACTION OF THE CITY GOVERNMENT, LOS ANGELES WAS GAILY DECORATED

Olympic flags, were prepared and used in decorating the various stadiums. Also, about six hundred of the flags sent from Amsterdam were used for this purpose. In addition, two complete sets of national flags were made up for the Olympic Village, one set to fly in front of the Village, and the other distributed to the teams living in the Village, so that the national flag of each country might fly over the particular section which the team of that country occupied.

Great quantities of streamers and decorative bunting were made up in the Olympic colors of blue, yellow, black, green, and red, and used to complete the decorations at the stadiums. Individual banners were made bearing the inscriptions, "I Olympiad — Greece — 1896," "II Olympiad — Paris — 1900," etc., as set forth in the Protocol, and these adorned the peristyle entrance to Olympic Stadium.

Several complete sets of small national flags were used for interior decorating of the Olympic Village, the Women's Hotel, the Central Ticket Office, etc.

The City of Los Angeles voted funds to decorate the streets of the city for the Games, and the Organizing Committee assisted in working out the plan of decoration. This consisted of the national flags of all Olympic nations and the special Olympic flags, combined with various large Olympic insignia. Many manufacturers of decorations produced special material appropriate for the occasion, which was sold to individual building owners and merchants and contributed materially to the colorful festive dress of the city during the celebration.

MUSICAL ORGANIZATIONS

MUSIC was a prescribed part of the Opening, Closing and Victory Ceremonies of the Olympic Games. Bands were required to play the marches of the Opening and Closing Ceremonies, and also to play the national anthem of the country represented by each victor in the Victory Ceremonies.

The Organizing Committee, realizing that a high quality of music was essential for the proper celebration of the Games, and that it was necessary to organize mass bands and choruses in order to produce a volume of music sufficient to fill the immense Olympic Stadium, selected the Director of Music more than a year in advance of the Games.

TWELVE HUNDRED TRAINED VOICES COMPOSED THE OLYMPIC CHORUS

THE ENTIRE ORGANIZATION NUMBERED ONE THOUSAND MEMBERS

THE CHORUS

The Director of Music immediately issued a call to vocal ensembles throughout Southern California for volunteers to sing in the Chorus. There was a tremendous response, and a Chorus of 1200 voices was selected and regular rehearsals held for many months in advance of the Games.

During the period of training, the Chorus presented several programmes over extensive radio broadcast systems. This assisted greatly in advertising the Games themselves and furnished interesting activity for the members of the Chorus which helped to maintain the morale of the entire organization.

The Chorus appeared in the Opening and Closing Ceremonies and also at the Demonstration Football Game in Olympic Stadium.

THE BANDS

It was the plan of the Organizing Committee to have an official band present in Olympic Stadium at all times events were being held there. As it would be necessary for this band to go through a long period of training, in order to learn to play properly the national anthems of all the countries represented in the Olympic Games, it was decided that the members should be paid. They were chosen from the ranks of professional musicians, and the organization was known as the Official Band of the Games of the Xth Olympiad. The musicians were paid only for the time they were actually playing in Olympic Stadium, and at other times gave freely of their services, not only in rehearsals but also in many public appearances and numerous radio programmes.

In addition to the Official Band, three other bands, Band B of seventy pieces, Band C of seventy pieces, and Band D of sixty pieces, were selected, after a series of try-outs, from university, college, and high school groups, and from large numbers of individual musicians who made application for membership. These bands augmented the Official Band in Olympic Stadium and supplied music at the other stadiums throughout the period of the Games.

Many other organized bands already in existence were invited to play on one or more occasions at the different stadiums, as guest ensembles.

A combined band of 200 pieces or more was maintained at Olympic Stadium during all events. On the occasion of the Demonstration Football Game, a chorus of 1,200 voices, a massed band of 1,000 pieces, and a drum and bugle corps of 800 pieces, making a total musical ensemble of 3,000, provided music and marching formations typical of the occasion. Altogether, thirty bands, comprising 1,500 musicians, and 1,200 members of the chorus and 800 members of the drum and bugle corps, a total personnel of 3,500, took part in the musical programme of the Games. All musicians with the exception of the members of the Official Band volunteered their services.

The Director of Music supplied trumpeters for the Marathon and the Opening and Closing Ceremonies, musical organizations for entertainment at the Olympic Village, and for innumerable other occasions during the period of the Games.

The Olympic musical organizations all dressed uniformly in white. Seated in a special section in the Stadium, they formed a beautiful white square contrasting vividly with the colorful masses of the audiences around them. All members of the bands wore white Continental caps, and around their waists sashes of the Olympic colors, blue, yellow, black, green, and red. Members of the Chorus wore white berets. The Olympic rings were embroidered on all caps and berets, in colors.

During the spring of 1931, each National Olympic Committee was requested to send to the Organizing Committee a copy of the official score of its country's national anthem. Inasmuch as American bands are not constituted entirely of the same instruments nor in the same proportions as the bands of foreign countries, it was necessary to have a special orchestration made of each national anthem, adapted to the instruments of the Official Band.

MEDICAL SERVICE

SVEN LOKRANTZ, M.D.
MEDICAL DIRECTOR

SOME two years before the Games the Organizing Committee, realizing the great importance of an adequate medical service, appointed Sven Lokrantz, M.D., Medical Director of the Games.

Dr. Lokrantz, internationally known in the field of school health and corrective physical education and Director of that department of the Los Angeles City schools, was, at the time of his appointment, President of the American Association of School Physicians and President of the Southern California Public Health Association.

Dr. Lokrantz served in a voluntary capacity, as did virtually all the members of the medical organization that he created for the Games. More than a year of intensive study and organization work by the Medical Department preceded its actual functioning upon the arrival of the delegations participating in the Games, and during the celebration of the Games.

The Department was created and operated entirely on the basis of providing a complete medical service to all participants in the Games at no expense or charge whatsoever, with the exception of a comparatively few serious cases requiring outside hospitalization (other than the gratuitous service rendered in the Village hospital), which latter service was rendered at cost.

Plans for medical supervision of the Games of the Xth Olympiad were arranged more than a year prior to the events. Never in the history of the Games had such a detailed medical organization for the care of sick or injured athletes been in operation, and it is a matter of gratification that there was not a single fatality among the contenders at the Games, nor any outbreak of contagious or infectious disease.

Every precaution was taken to insure healthful surroundings, adequate first aid in case of accident, and expert care in event of serious illness. In view of the fact that the athletes were living in specially prepared quarters, with their own dining rooms and sanitary system, closest co-operation was maintained with public health authorities. The local Health Officers rendered most valuable service in providing expert advice in the field of sanitation and in control of possible contagion. The Los Angeles Receiving Hospital and the local chapter of the American Red Cross Society also gave valuable assistance in their respective fields. Not only did these organized health agencies assist in the work but many private physicians and surgeons voluntarily donated their services and professional advice.

An Executive Medical Advisory Committee was appointed by the Medical Director. Matters of major importance in the medical organization were referred to this Committee for its opinion. One of the first subjects discussed was the question of medical research. This matter was considered very carefully with the Research Committee. The concensus of opinion was that in view of the splendid work which had already been done for thousands of athletes, and on account of the short space of time during which research work could be carried on, the varied nationalities represented, the opposition on the part of some athletes, and the difficulty of obtaining proper facilities and apparatus convenient to the athletic contests, it would be unwise to attempt medical research at this time.

Lists of volunteer consultants in all the major specialties were compiled so that visiting athletes might have the best medical advice should the necessity arise. No matter what the type of illness or injury a specialist for that condition was immediately available. A list of advisory physicians who spoke the languages of the various countries sending teams was also prepared, so that the athletes might have physician consultants understanding their own languages.

The following Advisory Committees were appointed: Executive, Medical, Surgical, Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat, Dental, Women's Section, Research, Lung, Heart, Dermatology, Psychiatry, X-ray, Nursing, Physiotherapy, Equipment, and Hospitalization. These Committees were of great help in matters pertinent to their own specialty or section.

EQUIPMENT

Responsibility for equipping the Olympic Village Hospital and the Surgical Rooms at the athletes' quarters in Olympic Stadium was placed in the hands of the Administrative Assistant, Los Angeles County Health Department. He co-operated closely with the Architect's Office of the Organizing Committee, and with the officials of Olympic Stadium, so that the installation of all technical equipment, such as X-ray and physiotherapy apparatus, was not hindered in any way by lack of proper facilities.

With the completion of the Village Hospital, arrangements were made with local surgical supply houses, and others, for the various types of equipment required for its operation. This included X-ray equipment, laboratory equipment, hospital equipment for minor surgery and dressings, examining room, and physiotherapy apparatus for the treatment and conditioning of athletes. Equipment was also provided for the first aid rooms in the men and women athletes' quarters at Olympic Stadium and for the hospital in the women athletes' residence.

OLYMPIC VILLAGE HOSPITAL

The arrangements for caring for the health of the athletes included a Hospital Unit in the center of the Olympic Village, where X-ray, laboratory, physiotherapy and emergency service, with physicians and nurses on duty, was available every hour of the day or night. The hospital staff was comprised of a Superintendent who was also Day Surgeon, a Night Surgeon, and an Assistant Day Surgeon, and day and night male nurses who were also qualified physiotherapists.

The Olympic Village Hospital was constructed particularly with a view to caring for the minor strains, sprains and abrasions which come to all athletes, but was also used for slight temporary illnesses and for purposes of observation. By providing immediate treatment or diagnosis in close proximity to the living quarters of the athletes, much time was saved and a real service rendered to the athletes. Although abrasions, furunculosis, blisters, minor infections, sprains and strains composed the majority of the conditions treated, undoubtedly the immediate care which these minor ailments received prevented in some cases the development of more serious ailments and contributed largely to the splendid health and excellent showing of the athletes of the Xth Olympiad. Any severe injury was cared for in a local hospital, and in all, eighteen cases of a more serious nature were handled in this way.

The policy of the Village Hospital was to give the athletes, insofar as practicable, the type of treatment to which they were accustomed in their respective countries, and the type of management of their cases which they had found most beneficial in any previous athletic injuries.

The Olympic Village Hospital was in operation from July 5 to August 21, 1932. For this six-weeks period, the statistics are as follows:

Total number of individuals treated	473
Total number of treatments	1,862
Average treatments per day	40
Physiotherapy treatments	540
X-rays	22
Cases referred to other hospitals	18

When the Hospital was erected there was speculation on the part of athletes and coaches as to the amount of use which would be made of it. The feeling was that a highly trained, healthy group of athletes would have little need of hospital service. It was found, however, that the Hospital was in constant use, and the large number of treatments given, with the great variety of cases treated, indicate conclusively that a field hospital such as the one erected in the Olympic Village was necessary.

HOSPITALIZATION

The California Hospital, a local institution, was selected for the more serious cases of illness or injury. It was desirable, so far as practicable, that all athletes requiring hospitalization treatment be in one institution. The California Hospital extended athletes special rates for hospital and laboratory service, and specialists or foreign advisors were called in as needed, either at the discretion of the physician in charge or on request of the patient. Special efforts were made to give the most efficient attention and every facility of modern science was utilized to insure the best possible care of sick or injured visiting athletes. Day and night special nurses were called when necessary, and laboratory and diagnostic procedures and physiotherapy were provided where indicated.

SANITATION

One of the most important medical factors contributing to the success of the Games of the Xth Olympiad was the arrangements for sanitation.

With two thousand world athletes, their managers, trainers, coaches, and other attachés, congregating in one community, with the vast throngs of spectators, extraordinary precautions were necessary to prevent the possibility of contagion. The problem was a large one. Besides the Olympic Village, the Olympic activities involved seven stadiums, sixteen special training fields, including six athletic clubs, eight high schools, and the University of Southern California and Los Angeles Junior College, with their shower and locker facilities. These centers of activity were scattered from Pasadena in the north to Long Beach in the south, and from Jefferson High School in the east to Santa Monica and the Riviera in the west.

To facilitate the sanitary inspection of the Olympic Village, the Olympic Village Director was appointed a special deputy health officer.

In addition to the usual sanitary precautions, special attention was given to the prevention of epidermophytosis or "athlete's foot." By permission of the Los Angeles County Health Officer, the County Chemist made chemical tests of several commercial preparations to determine which one best filled the requirements of prompt fungicidal efficiency, non-irritant properties, simplicity of handling and low relative cost. As a result of these tests, a preparation of calcium hypochlorite containing sixty-five percent of available chlorine was selected. When mixed with water in proper proportions, it furnished a one percent hypochlorite solution which bacteriological tests proved to be effective in killing the spores of the most resistant ringworm organisms in fifteen seconds. Rubber foot tubs, two feet in diameter and four inches deep, with a capacity of eight gallons, were filled with the solution and placed wherever showers were used by the athletes, and attendants were instructed to prepare a fresh solution every morning. Signs over the tubs directed the athletes to step into the solution before and after taking showers. As a result of these measures, very few cases of "athlete's foot" were reported.

The sewage system in the Olympic Village was of the cesspool type. The toilets were of the dry chemical type. The chief problem here was the elimination of odors. Many chemicals were tried without complete success. To the Director of the Village belongs the credit for adopting the use of crude oil, which was almost one hundred percent successful in its operation.

Wrestling mats used in training and exhibitions were protected by freshly laundered covers, which were changed frequently.

Garbage cans were placed in fly-proof, screened inclosures. All dining rooms and kitchens were given daily inspections by the Olympic Village management.

DENTAL SERVICE

In arranging for the medical care of the athletes, the Medical Director felt that great emphasis should be placed on the importance of dental hygiene, and a Dental Section was organized. The Los Angeles Board of Education granted permission to station one of its traveling "Healthmobiles" in the Village, equipped with a modern dental office, complete in every respect. Fifty-seven local dentists volunteered to serve for a day or more each, but it was not necessary to call on so many, and twenty-seven working in shifts furnished ample service. Thus a free emergency dental service was provided for the Olympic athletes in close proximity to their living quarters. Toothaches, decayed teeth, exposed nerves, and other dental troubles which might impair the efficiency of the athlete on the eve of contest, received immediate and competent attention.

RED CROSS SERVICE

A vital part in the medical arrangements for the Games was the provision of first aid service by the American Red Cross Society. The Chairman of the Los Angeles Chapter undertook the responsibility of organizing the first aid work and securing the corps of nurses necessary.

The gathering of equipment was begun considerably before the first stations were opened. Thirty-three first aid kits were borrowed from local industrial concerns, to supplement the Red Cross supply. Thirty-five stretchers were borrowed from the United States Army. One hundred cots and two hundred blankets were procured, and other material, such as Red Cross flags, was assembled. Signs, assignment sheets and other required forms were printed or mimeographed. Some forty local industries and Los Angeles city departments, in which the Red Cross Society had conducted first aid courses, were contacted regarding the possibility of some of their trained men serving as first aid men on their off time. All of these groups responded freely and a call list of four hundred and thirty certified men was made up. A special office was opened, telephone installed, and detailed charts of the assignments to be filled were prepared. Four full-time volunteers were appointed as assistants, in charge of training center and event personnel and training center and event equipment, respectively. Bulletins were sent to all of the available men, asking them to report on specified days for detailed assignments.

On July 18, two full weeks before the opening of the Games, the first station was opened at the training field at Manual Arts High School. Every day thereafter showed the installation of two or three stations, until July 30, when fourteen stations were installed for the Opening Day's ceremonies.

In addition to the regular stations which were maintained during the entire sixteen day period, for all events at the stadiums, first aid stations were installed and operated at the training fields prior to the main event. Special stations were also maintained in connection with the Marathon, Equestrian Events, Road Cycling Race, Cross Country Run, and 50,000 Metre Walk, each of which required special equipment and personnel. The Los Angeles City Life Guard Service and the Los Angeles County Life Guard Service furnished emergency cars, and the First National Motion Picture Studios furnished a mobile first aid unit for these events.

Four hundred and thirty first aid operators and one hundred and twenty Red Cross nurses volunteered their services. In all, sixty-five different stations were installed, with a maximum of thirty-three nurses and eighty-two men on duty simultaneously. Thirty-five first aid stations were in operation at one time.

Five hundred and eighty-nine cases were reported treated, fifty-five of these being athletes. Twenty-six cases required ambulance transportation.

The following summary shows the total volunteer hours of service rendered:

FIELD SURGEONS

The care of the athletes during events at all of the various stadiums was placed in the hands of forty official field surgeons. These were primarily responsible not alone for the athletes but also to co-operate with the American Red Cross Staff in caring for the public.

The field surgeons were a carefully selected group of men who had had practical experience in caring for athletic injuries in addition to possessing a knowledge of orthopedics, and of industrial and accident surgery.

Prior to the Games, several meetings of the field surgeons were held. Athletic injuries and their treatments were discussed at length, also the medical supervision of such special events as the Marathon and Road Race Cycling. First aid supplies and equipment to be carried by the field surgeons were considered and standardized so as to be prepared for every emergency.

OLYMPIC STADIUM

The Chief Surgeon of the Los Angeles City Receiving Hospital was the field surgeon in charge at Olympic Stadium. He was assisted by four other field surgeons, two being assigned for care of the public and two for care of the athletes. The Stadium was provided with nine first aid stations for the public, strategically placed near the main exits. First aid stations for the athletes were located in the men's and women's dressing rooms. An ambulance was posted at the rear of the dressing room building, with a wheel stretcher and attendants on the field near the athletes' entrance. First aid operators were stationed at the inside entrance of passageways, each being responsible for a certain section of the grand stand. Boy Scouts carried messages from the nurses in the first aid stations to the doctors stationed at specified locations. Fourteen minor injuries to athletes were treated in the Stadium and two cases of exhaustion. During the course of the Games, over five hundred public cases were given treatment in the first aid stations at the Stadium.

THE MARATHON

In view of the special hazards connected with the Marathon Race, extraordinary precautions were taken and every effort was made to be prepared for emergencies. The Assistant Chief Surgeon of the Los Angeles Receiving Hospital was placed in charge of the medical supervision of this event, assisted by a staff of six physicians.

Two days before the contest, all athletes entered in the Marathon were assembled in the Olympic Village Hospital. Four heart specialists, in addition to the chief surgeon and his assistants, conducted a complete physical examination on each entrant, to determine his physical fitness. The runners were given a thorough routine examination, including urinary analysis, and a special examination of heart, lungs and blood pressure was made. Any abnormal conditions were considered by the medical examiners and passed on by the group before the medical certificates permitting participation in the run were issued.

In view of the possibility of serious accidents, and even fatalities, which might result from the tremendous exertion exercised in this gruelling event, extensive preparations were made to give the participants the best medical service during the competition. At each of the seven official control stations along the twenty-six mile course, where the official timers, judges and attendants were stationed, a medical aid station was established and staffed with two American Red Cross first aid men and one physician. Along the course at control stations five, six and seven, two physicians were on duty. Additional medical assistance along the return course was made possible by the moving of doctors, after all runners had passed and the medical aid station had been evacuated, from their first assignment to a second post of duty.

Two American Red Cross ambulances, each carrying one stretcher, followed the runners, and a mobile hospital unit with accommodations for four persons brought up the rear, accompanied by the pick-up bus provided for transportation of those athletes who withdrew from the race with no disability. The ambulances and mobile unit were manned by Red Cross first aid men and were instructed to report each case assisted to the physicians at the medical aid stations, who directed treatment. Any serious case was transported immediately, accompanied by a physician, to the Official Hospital. Arrangements were made for radio broadcasts through the local police department to the head physician's automobile, which carried a radio receiver.

Physicians upon completing their station assignments proceeded along the course to the finish line and were thus available for service at the termination of the race.

Altogether, ten entrants in the Marathon were given medical attention, mainly for cramps and exhaustion. A final report on all athletes participating in the race, prepared three days after the event, showed that none were in any way disabled and all stated they were ready to repeat the test of endurance.

SWIMMING STADIUM

This Stadium was provided with all necessary apparatus for resuscitation, with trained personnel to operate it. A supervisor was present in charge of inhalator and heating appliances. There were no cases, however, requiring this apparatus and not a single accident occurred to any of the contestants.

50,000 METRE WALK

Two physicians were in charge of the medical supervision of the 50,000 Metre Walk. First aid stations were established at all the control stations, with stretcher and first aid equipment.

This event proved to be a gruelling contest, and although there were only fifteen entries, four of these required medical attention due to exhaustion before the end of the race.

Two ambulances, as well as a motor equipped first aid unit, cruised along the course. These gave first aid to any contestant seen to be in distress. Four cases were treated on the course, three of which were then brought in for further treatment.

Full advantage was taken of the water and refreshments at the various control stations along the course. The refreshment stands were busy places. Rarely did a contestant pass one by without taking some water not only to drink but to rinse his mouth and to pour over his head. The officials gave permission to offer water to contestants from the ambulance as it passed them and toward the close of the race water was passed out constantly.

OLYMPIC AUDITORIUM

One physician was always present at the Weightlifting, Wrestling and Boxing events in the Olympic Auditorium.

All entrants in the wrestling events were given physical examinations at the Auditorium on August 1, the first day of the bouts. Medical supervision of the bouts extended through the 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th of August, six cases, one a hospital case, being treated.

Physical examinations of all entrants in the boxing tournament were held at the Olympic Village on August 9, and medical attention rendered during the 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th and 13th of August, at both afternoon and evening sessions. Six minor cases of injury were treated.

CROSS COUNTRY RUN

One physician was in charge of medical aid at the Cross Country Run. Although the day was hot and the course difficult, there were no cases requiring medical attention.

EQUESTRIAN EVENTS

Medical supervision of the Equestrian events was in charge of one physician, who was assisted by three field surgeons.

The hazards connected with the Steeplechase were great, and special care was given to planning the mobilization of medical units and patrol services at strategic points. All units were so stationed that they moved on a parallel course with the riders and spectators arriving at the various phases of the course, coincidentally with both first and last horsemen. The medical corps consisted of four doctors, seven first aid assistants, ten ambulance attendants and four ambulances. Doctors and first aid assistants were stationed at points of vantage in proximity to the most hazardous portion of the course. During these events three rather serious accidents received attention.

The following medical arrangements were made for the 5,000 Metre Cross Country phase of the Pentathlon. Stationed at the beginning of the course were a doctor and an ambulance; on a near hilltop was another doctor overseeing six to eight jumps, and on another point of vantage was a first aid man with a doctor nearby; at the end of the Pentathlon course, a doctor, ambulance and two attendants were stationed. The chief surgeon, mounted during the event, patrolled the entire area.

For the Dressage events, the chief surgeon stationed himself in the center of the grand stand, placing a first aid man at each end with an ambulance alongside. A first aid room was prepared under the stand, and a mobile hospital unit stationed opposite the stand, the latter capable of taking care of four patients.

For the first day of the Three-day Endurance competition, the same set-up was utilized as for the Dressage events.

Arrangements for the second day of this event, the Steeplechase, comprised a corps of eleven men and four ambulances. Action was so planned and timed that as the last horse finished the first phase of jumps, the chief surgeon departed in a motor car and arrived at the third phase at the same time as the first rider. One of the ambulances stationed at the first phase left for the third phase of the course just prior to the completion by the first horse of the first phase of sixteen jumps, leaving one ambulance and doctor in charge to take care of the remaining crowd. As soon as the field was emptied, this remaining unit also joined the cavalcade moving on towards the third phase or concluding series of jumps.

At the mid-way station, "B," as the last horse passed, the medical corps started its march toward the third phase of jumps, traveling by another route and arriving as contestants were ready to go into action, at the same time checking back by telephone for a report of any casualties. This brought all units from unoccupied sections to the last section of activity, the third phase of jumps. As mentioned, the chief surgeon arrived to take up his position as the first rider entered the terminal thirty-five jumps, and soon after, the second ambulance arrived to take its position.

During all the Equestrian events, ambulance drivers were cautioned while in stationary positions to maintain lookouts from the tops of their vehicles, thus providing additional patrol service. All surgeons carried Red Cross flags on their cars, for identification. Since the number of medical units and attendants was adequate for casualty handling and these were so stationed that they could arrive at the scene of an accident without delay, traffic police were asked to do nothing themselves in the way of first aid treatment but immediately to summon an Olympic surgeon.

YACHTING AND ROWING

For the medical supervision of the Yachting events, the United States Navy furnished a boat in command of an officer, to stand by the morning races. During the afternoon races, one doctor was placed on a Coast Guard's boat and another on board a private yacht stationed near the course. This boat carried an inhalator and crew furnished by the Los Angeles Fire Department. Seven local physicians provided voluntary service in connection with the Yachting events.

The Health Officer of the city of Long Beach was in charge of the medical service at the Rowing Stadium. He was assisted by a staff of six doctors, three nurses, and six Red Cross first aid operators. Thirty-six spectators and three athletes received treatment during the contests, all minor cases.

CYCLING

For the Road Race Cycling one head physician with two field surgeons directed the medical service. Additional personnel included nine first aid men, two ambulances and four Red Cross cars. The field surgeons were stationed at intervals along the course, one following the last contestant.

The other Cycling events occurred at the Pasadena Rose Bowl with the Chief Surgeon of the Pasadena Emergency Hospital in charge of medical service. A local field hospital was set up with doctors and nurses in attendance.

The Organizing Committee expresses its appreciation of the whole-hearted support and co-operation given by the medical profession, the local health departments, the nursing profession, the American Red Cross, the Los Angeles Board of Education, the Los Angeles Fire Department, and similar organizations, in the medical problems of the Games of the Xth Olympiad.

OLYMPIC

ORGANIZING COMMITTEE
GAMES OF THE XTH OLYMPIAD
LOS ANGELES, U. S. A., 1932

NUMBER ONE

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

Los Angeles is Ready for Games

Next Olympic City Being Built on Pacific Shores

LOS ANGELES is prepared to celebrate the Tenth Olympiad.

Thus modern Olympism, founded in 1894 by Baron Pierre de Coubertin, takes another step toward circling the globe.

Out on the shores of the beautiful Pacific Ocean, another Olympic city is being built.

Like the westward march of civilization itself has been the course of the spirit of modern Olympism which, in the 34 years since its founding, has rallied to its banners the youth of 62 nations.

IXTH OLYMPIAD CLOSED

In accordance with the Protocol of the International Olympic Committee, the Games of the Ninth Olympiad at Amsterdam were officially closed when Count de Baillet-Latour uttered the following words:

"In the name of the International Olympic Committee, after having offered to the Queen of Holland and to the Dutch population and to the authorities of the City of Amsterdam and to the organizers of the Games our deepest gratitude, we proclaim the closing of the Ninth Olympiad and, in accordance with tradition, we call upon the Youth of every country to assemble in four years at Los Angeles, there to celebrate the Games of the Tenth Olympiad. May they display cheerfulness and concord and thus the Olympiad torch may be carried through the ages for the good of a humanity more eager, more courageous, and more pure."

FLAG IN AMSTERDAM

The Olympic flag, symbolic of that cheerfulness and concord referred to in the closing ceremonies at Amsterdam, now reposes in that city.

In 1932 it will be raised above the great Olympic Stadium in Los Angeles, which city, in 1920, extended its first invitation to the International Olympic Committee to celebrate there the next Olympic Games.

The story of how Los Angeles was awarded the Games of the Tenth Olympiad is told elsewhere in this publication. The authorities and citizens of Los Angeles are grateful to the International Olympic Committee for its selection of their city for the celebration of the Tenth Olympiad.

President, International Olympic Committee

CONGRATULATE the Organizing Committee of the Games of the Tenth Olympiad for the splendid work accomplished already and I trust that backed not only by the support of the American Olympic Association and of the American Athletes but by the whole Country they will be a great success and help to promote Olympic ideals in far distant countries, who do not often enough have the opportunity of joining in the quadrennial tournaments.

AN EXPRESSION

Founder of Modern Olympism

THE main issue in life is not the victory but the fight; the essential is not to have won but to have fought well. To spread these precepts is to pave the way for a more valiant humanity, stronger, and consequently more scrupulous and more generous. These words extend across whole domains and form the basis of a healthy and happy philosophy.

The Olympic movement gives the world an ideal which reckons with the reality of life, and includes a possibility to guide this reality toward the great Olympic Idea: "Joie des muscles, culte de la beauté, travail pour le service de la famille et de la société; ces trois éléments unis en un faisceau indissoluble."

May joy and good fellowship reign, and in this manner, may the Olympic Torch pursue its way through the ages, increasing friendly understanding among nations, for the good of a humanity always more enthusiastic, more courageous and more pure.

principles of modern Olympism.

"OLYMPIC" will be published several times a year until the celebration of the Games in 1932. It will be mailed free of charge to members of the International Olympic Committee, members of the National Olympic Committees, and to sports federations and associations and to the Press of all countries.

Any one desiring to receive "OLYMPIC" may do so by making application to the Tenth Olympiad Committee, W. M. Garland Building, 117 West Ninth Street, Los Angeles, California, U. S. A.

Awarding of 1932 Games Described

Task of Organizing Games
Delegated to Xth
Olympiad Committee

THE history of the awarding of the Games of the Tenth Olympiad to Los Angeles begins in 1920, when William May Garland, prominent citizen of Los Angeles, attended the Olympic Games in Antwerp.

He carried with him invitations to the International Olympic Committee to hold the Games of the next Olympiad in Los Angeles. These invitations were from state, county and city officials, and from civic, business and athletic organizations of California.

He was informed, however, that the Games for 1924 and 1928 had been pledged to Paris and Amsterdam, respectively, and that the next unassigned celebration would be in 1932, the Games of the Tenth Olympiad.

RECEPTION FRIENDLY

His reception by the International Olympic Committee was cordial and friendly. Two of the United States members, Dr. William M. Sloane of Princeton, New Jersey, and Judge Bartow S. Weeks of New York, were present at the time Mr. Garland presented the invitations. Judge Weeks died the following year, and in 1922 Mr. Garland was elected his successor.

He first met with the Committee as a member at its annual meeting in 1922. At that time General Charles H. Sherrill of New York was elected to take the place of Allison V. Armour, the third member from the United States, who had resigned. The president of the Committee at that time was Baron Pierre de Coubertin of Lausanne, Switzerland, who founded modern Olympism at a meeting at the Sorbonne in Paris in 1894.

U. S. A. SELECTED

From his first meeting with the Committee, Mr. Garland began to describe to the members the advantages of Los Angeles. At its meeting in Rome in 1923, the Committee unanimously selected the United States as the nation to which would be given the Games of the Tenth Olympiad, to be celebrated in 1932.

Mr. Garland thereupon suggested that a city touching the shores of the Pacific Ocean be selected, as never in the history of Olympism had the Games been held near these great waters. He accordingly moved that Los Angeles be selected as the Olympic city, and his recommendation was unanimously approved by the Committee.

PRESS DEPARTMENT — ADVERTISING AND PROMOTION

IN PREPARING for the celebration of the Games of the Xth Olympiad, the Organizing Committee was confronted with certain problems which had not presented themselves in previous Games. Because of the distance to Los Angeles from the majority of the Olympic countries, the Committee realized that sufficient sentiment had to be aroused in the various countries to insure their sending representative teams to participate in the Games. It was necessary to establish proper relations with the World Press far in advance of the Games, and consequently the Press Department was organized in December, 1929.

The Press Department had three distinct functions, first, to increase interest in foreign countries, second, to educate the people of the United States to the significance of the Olympic Games, and third, to provide suitable accommodations and facilities for the representatives of the World Press who would come to Los Angeles to report the outcome of the Games.

INTERNATIONAL CAMPAIGN

The Department began immediately to carry out the first phase of its work, the international press campaign. Even with the exceptionally low steamship and railway rates which the Committee was able to obtain for Olympic delegates traveling to and from the Games, it was necessary to assist each National Committee in arousing sentiment in its country favorable to the raising of the funds required to send a team. Also, since many of the athletes worked in shops and factories, it was necessary to induce their employers to grant them sufficient time off from their work to make the journey. Since the National Olympic Committee of each country had the responsibility of its own arrangements for participation, the Organizing Committee felt that its press propaganda should act as a background against which the National Committees could project their own campaigns for governmental subsidies or private subscriptions towards their budgets. The Committee also felt that the confidence of all countries in its ability to carry out its duties could be built through this campaign.

WM. M. CREAKBAUM

Wire Services: The Press Department established a policy of utilizing wherever possible the co-operation proffered by the regular established news channels, such as the wire news services, the national news photographic syndicates, and the newsreels. The wire news services, — the Associated Press, United Press, International News Service, and Universal Service, — agreed to use whatever news they were able to handle over their direct wires or in their mail letter services.

News Bulletins: Supplementing these facilities, the Department decided to issue twice a month news bulletins covering the Committee's preparations. Consequently, a list of approximately 6000 foreign periodicals was assembled, including newspapers, magazines, sports publications and trade journals. A list of several thousand sports organizations, aside from the regular Olympic groups, was also assembled. In this work the Press Department enjoyed the hearty co-operation of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the United States Department of Commerce, the local steamship and railroad offices, and the foreign consuls. These bulletins were sent also to the members of the International Olympic Committee, the presidents and secretaries of the National Olympic Committees, and the presidents and secretaries of the International Sports Federations.

The first news bulletin outlining the Press Department's policies was sent out to all publications in English, and to it was attached a questionnaire asking each publication to designate in which of five languages, English, French, German, Spanish or Italian, it would prefer to receive future news releases. All subsequent releases were printed in those five languages, as designated.

In order to insure correct translations, a staff of competent translators was organized and their work was thoroughly checked by members of the consular corps in Los Angeles. In publishing its news bulletins the Department decided to lithograph them from typewritten copies of its stories, thus eliminating the necessity for typesetting and proof-reading. Later the Department evolved a process of illustrating its news releases in a manner which permitted the illustrations being reproduced by the publications receiving them.

Official Publication: It was also decided to publish at frequent intervals a periodical to be known as "Olympic," the official publication of the Organizing Committee. This also was to be sent to the entire list. It was planned to publish "Olympic" in English, with a brief résumé of the contents in French. However, it was found necessary in two instances to publish issues of the periodical in four languages, namely, English, French, German and Spanish. For this publication a special brand of paper was used in order to insure arrival at its destination in the best possible condition. Also, only the finest illustrations were used, to permit reproduction of the engravings by other publications.

Photographs: In the matter of photographs, the Committee also decided to deal so far as possible with the established news photographic syndicates, namely, Acme Newspictures, Associated Press Photos, International News Photos, and Wide World Photos. Consequently, all the main offices of the regular syndicates were contacted and urged to build up their files of Olympic subjects. Photographs of the various stadiums were offered and other co-operation of the Press Department was extended to these organizations in completing their files. This same co-operation was proffered to the foreign syndicates which had no connection with American syndicates and therefore had no access to such a supply of pictures.

As before mentioned, both the illustrations in the news bulletins and in "Olympic" were of such a character as to make their satisfactory reproduction possible. The Committee gave consideration to a programme of distributing newspaper matrices but abandoned this plan in favor of the use of illustrations in its news bulletins and in "Olympic." In the matter of photographs, the Department had the hearty co-operation of local photographic syndicates, and of the photographic department of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

Motion Pictures: As in the case of news photographs, the Committee worked closely with the local representatives of the established newsreels, namely, Fox-Hearst Corporation, Paramount News, Pathé News, and Universal Newsreel. Every possible subject which could be recorded in motion pictures and sound, having any bearing whatsoever on the Olympic Games, was used by the department in spreading the story of the Committee's preparations.

Numerous propositions were submitted to the Committee by commercial moving picture organizations for the making up of films to be used as propaganda for the Games. However, owing to the enormous expense involved as compared to the results obtained, this type of publicity was not utilized. Nevertheless, the regular motion picture producing companies in many instances built short subjects around the Olympic Games and aided materially in arousing world-wide interest in the event.

Visiting Journalists: The Department during the Committee's entire preparations assisted all Press representatives who came to Los Angeles. One group of fourteen journalists representing continental Europe visited Los Angeles under the auspices of the Carnegie Foundation, and the Press Department assisted in their entertainment during the four days of the party's visit. A representative collection of photographs, maps and supplementary data was prepared for each

Los Angeles, Californie -- Le Stade de Natation de Los Angeles, où auront lieu les concours de natation, plongeon et water-polo des Jeux de la Xème Olympiade qui seront célébrés dans cette ville, du 30 juillet au 14 août 1932, inclus, est près d'être terminé dans le Parc Olympique, tout près du Stade Olympique. Débutant par la course du "Pentathlon Moderne", le 5 août, les sports nautiques dureront 11 jours. La piscine qui fut construite selon les règlements Olympiques, aura 50 mètres (164 pieds) de long, 20 mètres (65 pieds) de large, et variera en profondeur de 1 mètre 50 (4 pieds 11 pouces) à 5 mètres (16 pieds 5 pouces). L'eau proviendra des réservoirs d'eau fraîche de la Ville de Los Angeles et de agencements modernes de filtration et de purification seront employés. Le Stade sera construit en béton armé et pourra contenir 10.000 personnes.

FOR TWO YEARS NEWS BULLETINS, IN FIVE LANGUAGES, KEPT THE PRESS INFORMED of the visitors, and through arrangements with the Carnegie Foundation, these packages were handed to them on their departure from New York. This was considered the best method of distributing these pictures, avoiding the hazard of having the packages cast aside in favor of newer material which might be handed them on their return trip across the United States. Considerable space was devoted to the Olympic Games by these journalists in their respective papers, utilizing the photographs and material supplied them. Several hundred journalists visited the Press Department during the three years of its preparations.

Resident Correspondents: The Department immediately upon its organization contacted local correspondents for foreign publications. While many of these were free lance writers having no definite connection with foreign publications, the Department assisted them in every way possible by furnishing them information in addition to that already furnished to the foreign publications through the regular news channels established by the Department. The Press correspondents in Washington, D. C., were also contacted and in many cases they rendered valuable assistance to the Committee in telling the world about its preparations for the Games.

Consuls: The foreign consuls, not only in Los Angeles but in other cities of the Pacific Coast, were supplied regularly with all publications and news releases. These were sent by them to their own countries so that the various governments which they represented were kept fully informed as to the work being done by the Organizing Committee.

Radio: Owing to the international as well as the amateur nature of the Olympic Games, the amateur radio operators of Southern California, numbering approximately fifteen hundred, volunteered their services to the Press Department in handling communications through amateur operators in foreign countries. Southern California operators were supplied with complete information on the Games, which was utilized by them in their nightly conversations with amateur operators in all parts of the world. People who wrote to the Olympic Committee seeking information about the Games were informed through the amateur stations that the information they sought was being sent them immediately. Messages from the clubwomen of Southern California to their friends in all parts of the world, urging them to attend the Olympic Games, were also handled by the amateur radio operators of Southern California.

Poster: In an effort to produce an official poster which would be novel, and at the same time attractive enough to justify its being displayed over a period of many months, the Committee accepted the design offered by Julio Kilenyi, internationally known medalist and sculptor and designer of the commemorative

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

AND THE Olympic games

...means your greatest vacation

... You can do it in two weeks

ANY YEAR, Southern California offers you more summer playtime joys than half-a-dozen ordinary vacations. But this year, the Olympic Games are added! Probably never again in your lifetime will they be held in America, certainly never again in settings like these:

The cool, blue waters of the friendly Pacific... its exotic playground islands near the shore. The grandeur of mile-high forested mountains, crystal lakes and shaded pools. The foreign-land glamour of ancient Spanish Missions, palms, orange groves, a harbor where ships from the seven seas lie at anchor, Old Mexico close-by.

In the midst of this world playground centered by big, cosmopolitan Los Angeles you'll find famous resorts and cities like Pasadena, Beverly Hills, Santa Monica, Glendale, Long Beach, Pomona... and gay Hollywood where you'll mingle with the stars. Every kind of vacation play, with summer days comfortable and rainless, nights so cool you'll sleep under blankets.

Here champions and celebrities from all the world will gather for the world's greatest sport spectacle. The finals will be held from July 30 to August 14—sixteen days and nights of continuous thrills, 135 separate events—the most elaborately-planned Olympic Games in their 1535-year history. Southern California has been planning this vacation for you for ten years.

Come for the finals if you can. But come this summer, anyway. Southern California, heart of Fiestaland, will be in holiday mood, promising you that real vacation you need to send you back fit for the months ahead.

Let Southern California give you a vacation you will remember all your life. Advise anyone not to come seeking employment lest he be disappointed, but for the tourist the attractions are unlimited.

Note low costs medal of the Games of the Xth Olympiad. Mr. Kilenyi modelled the design for the official poster in clay, and a photograph of this model was colored and reproduced by lithograph. The poster depicted the ancient Grecian custom of sending a youthful athlete out to announce the forthcoming celebration of the Games. Several thousand copies of the poster were displayed.

NATIONAL CAMPAIGN

Approximately a year before the opening of the Games, the Organizing Committee announced that it was ready to receive ticket reservations. This launched the intensive Press campaign in the United States. The Press Department staff was increased, and stories were furnished at more frequent intervals to the wire news services as well as to the Los Angeles and metropolitan newspapers. Likewise more subjects were made available for the photographic news syndicates and the newsreels. Through the splendid co-operation of the country's largest commercial "mat" service serving the country weekly and small daily papers of the United States and Canada, considerable information was carried into the rural districts which was of great value in acquainting the people of North America with the Games.

Localizing News Interest: Owing to the size of the United States and the diversity of interests represented in various localities, the Press Department was faced with the problem of arousing interest, in all sections of the country, in this international event to be held in a locality considerably removed from the larger population centers of the nation.

The Department began a campaign of contacting athletic directors of the leading colleges and universities of the country, urging them to supply the newspapers in their territories with pictures and stories concerning their students who had competed in past Olympic Games or who might possibly become competitors in the forthcoming Games.

Auxiliary Press Service: The Eyre Powell Press Service, a Los Angeles organization serving pictorial news to the photographic press syndicates of the United States, rendered an invaluable service during the two years preceding the Games by featuring Olympic Games preparations and activities in their releases. The Publicity Department of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce performed a valuable service during the same period through its extensive press and commercial connections.

Citizens' Committee: The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce formed the Citizens' Committee to co-operate in every way possible with the Organizing Committee in educating the people of the United States regarding the Olympic Games. The activities of the Citizens' Committee were directed by a small executive group consisting of representatives of men's service clubs, women's clubs, civic bodies, fraternal organizations, church groups, boys' and girls' organizations, and the transportation, hotel and restaurant interests. All groups falling into these categories were organized and were supplied with information about the Games.

The clubwomen of Southern California banded themselves together in an organization known as The Hostesses of the Olympic Games, and hostess clubs were made up of women who had come to California from different States of the Union and from different foreign countries. Each of these groups appointed a chairman, established headquarters, and started a campaign of inviting the clubwomen of their respective states or countries to visit Los Angeles during the Games of the Xth Olympiad. The men's service clubs extended a similar invitation to their affiliated groups throughout the world, and also suggested that they hold Olympic Games programmes featuring outstanding athletes as speakers and honored guests.

The splendid work done by the Citizens' Committee was of great assistance in impressing upon people everywhere the importance and significance of the Olympic movement.

The California State Chamber of Commerce utilized in its monthly publication an eight-page gravure supplement which was reproduced and thousands of copies sent to Chambers of Commerce all over the United States. This was of great benefit in bringing the Games to the attention of the American public.

Advertising: The Committee did not feel that it should undertake an extended campaign of paid advertising. However, it took advantage of the generous offer of the All-Year Club of Southern California to utilize its regular advertising space for a national campaign in the interests of the Games. This Club, a non-profit civic organization, uses national advertising space annually to interest tourists in visiting Southern California. The Olympic Games were considered a sufficient attraction to tourists to form the theme of the All-Year Club's advertising from January 1, 1932, until just prior to the Opening Ceremony.

Advertising Tieups: The Press Department also contacted the large advertising agencies as well as the advertising departments of leading industrial firms and pointed out to them the value of utilizing the Games as background for their advertising copy. At the same time the Department was able to acquaint advertisers with the ethics governing the use of Olympic references in advertising copy. While at first the response to this campaign was slow, more and more as the Games drew near advertisers and advertising agencies began to recognize the value of tying into their copy a subject of such live news interest.

Transportation Advertising: Realizing that the economic conditions existing prior to the celebration of the Games had caused a curtailment by the transportation companies of their advertising schedules, the Department approached these companies with a programme of co-operation which could be carried out and still stay within the limitations of their regular advertising budgets. They were asked to urge the public, in whatever advertising space they used, to attend the Olympic Games in Los Angeles; they were asked to devote space in their time tables and to utilize the Committee's official poster in lieu of producing any travel poster of their own. The transportation companies gave the Organizing Committee splendid support in this manner.

Radio Broadcasts: A number of large radio advertisers built their programmes around the Games. One series of broadcasts, given weekly, consisted of dramatizations of recreated past Olympiads beginning with the first Games of which there is record and moving swiftly to the Games of the modern era. Other programmes featured the Olympic Games in music, talks by athletic experts and interviews by past Olympic champions.

LOCAL CAMPAIGN

Four months prior to the opening of the Games, an intensive local campaign was started. The metropolitan papers of Los Angeles and San Francisco, as well as the newspapers in other parts of the State, were supplied with all possible information concerning the preparations for the Games, the entries in the various events, and the schedules of arrivals of the different teams.

Organization Co-operation: All types of organizations, service, social and civic, gave the Committee liberal co-operation in its campaign to familiarize people with the story of the Olympic Games. Co-operation was extended by all the club publications published in Southern California.

Speakers' Bureau: A large number of speakers were supplied with information concerning the Games, and assigned to various organizations which had asked for people to talk before their meetings. A wide variety of types of speeches was thus available with the Games the central theme. Some of these speakers in their talks discussed international goodwill subjects, while others chose to dwell on such subjects as sportsmanship, clean-living and proper training of youth. In organizing its group of speakers, the Press Department had the co-operation of the Advertising Club of Los Angeles and of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

Window Displays: Immediately prior to the opening of the Games the large merchandizing establishments of the city began vying with each other in producing striking window displays featuring the Games. Local interest was thus stimulated and the people of Los Angeles familiarized with the significance of the Games and their historical background.

PRESS SERVICE

At Olympic Stadium, seats and permanent benches accommodating seven hundred and six Press correspondents were provided. One hundred and ninety-eight Dow, Jones electric printing machines were installed, to make available instantly, from the Sports Technical Department, the actual result of each event in any of the stadiums. Directly behind the Press section, separating it from the Sports Technical Department, was the Press telegraph section occupied by the commercial telegraph companies. A corps of messengers was maintained by each of these companies to serve the correspondents.

Press Credentials: For the convenience of visiting Press representatives, the Press Credentials Headquarters was opened immediately adjacent to the Olympic Games Ticket Office. Two of the Dow, Jones electric printers were installed to supply bulletins of all Olympic results for the Bulletin Boards erected for the convenience of the visiting correspondents unable to attend some of the events. A complete registration service was also installed and every correspondent was required to register and present proper credentials and identification. This work was made easier because of the fact that many of the correspondents carried the regular Olympic identity card issued by the Organizing Committee, in lieu of passports.

Official Pictorial Souvenir: Early in its preparations for the celebration of the Games, the Committee realized that it would not be in strict conformity with the Olympic ideals to produce the usual type of souvenir programmes containing paid advertising. It was decided to produce a pictorial souvenir which, by the selection of its illustrations and text, and by the artistry of its compilation and production, would reflect the ideals of the Olympic movement. A competent lithograph company entered into an agreement with the Committee to produce such a book, and a carefully planned schedule was made which enabled the printers to have the book ready well in advance, except an eight-page insert, which was held open and printed a few days prior to the Opening Ceremony, describing the arrival and training activities of the athletes as well as their housing quarters. This Pictorial Souvenir was sold to the public at all Olympic events.

FRANCES M. GILLAND
SECRETARY, PRESS DEPARTMENT

Government Postage Stamps: In commemoration of the Olympic Games, the United States Post Office Department issued two values of special commemorative stamps, of three-cent and five-cent denominations. The three-cent stamps depicted a sprinter crouched for the start and the five-cent depicted a discus thrower. These stamps were released for public sale on June 30, 1932, and besides purchases for regular postal use, millions of the stamps were purchased by collectors and by stamp dealers, many of whom had opened temporary offices in Los Angeles in order to have these stamps bear the "first-day" postmark of the Olympic City on envelopes sent them by stamp collectors in all parts of the world.

Novelties: As in the case of other big events a great variety of novelties was produced for sale as souvenirs of the Olympic Games. The Organizing Committee had no connection whatsoever with the production or sale of these novelties and did not participate in any way in the profits. It endeavored at all times to keep the element of commercialism out of the Games.

THE OFFICIAL POSTER

Stickers: Two types of stickers were produced and given wide distribution prior to and during the celebration of the Games. One type was designed by commercial firms desiring to tie their products in with the Games, such as the large oil companies and tire manufacturers, who printed and distributed free of charge many thousands of attractive stickers. The other type of stickers was produced by private interests which profited by their sale. Several meritorious designs were included in this category.

Conventions: A total of sixty-two conventions was held in the city during the period of the Games, enabling the delegates to enjoy a part or all of the contests.

Maps: Many useful maps were produced by various organizations and companies showing the facilities for the Olympic Games. The Automobile Club of Southern California was particularly helpful to the Organizing Committee in this respect. Two hundred thousand copies of a highway guide carrying the official Olympic poster on the back cover were distributed by this organization. Several of the large oil companies also produced and distributed large quantities of attractive maps and cartographs.

ENTRY, CUSTOMS, AND TRAVEL ARRANGEMENTS

THE Games of the Xth Olympiad were the first to be held outside of Europe in which a considerable number of nations participated. Instead of involving merely a day's trip, or an overnight journey into a neighboring country, participants in the Xth Olympiad were faced with the problems of traveling many thousands of miles, under unfamiliar conditions and in strange territory. Also, in entering the United States, they must encounter complicated entry and customs regulations.

The Organizing Committee, appreciating these facts, undertook, through the government of the United States and through the transportation companies, to simplify all travel problems and in every way possible facilitate the travel arrangements of all official delegations to the Games.

Identity Cards: To simplify entry into the United States of contestants and all others officially connected with the Games, and to identify them quickly and easily, the Committee drew up a simple form of Identity Card which, when filled in and properly signed, the Government agreed to accept as a valid travel document in lieu of passport. The Government further agreed that persons presenting these Identity Cards would be granted the privilege of free entry and the usual customs courtesies and facilities accorded distinguished foreign visitors; and also, that there would be no visa charge by the consular officers of the United States and no head tax.

The Identity Cards were serially numbered. A supply, consecutively numbered, was forwarded to each National Olympic Committee, and each Committee became responsible for the proper issuance of the cards to athletes, managers, coaches, team attendants, members of Committees or Federations, members of Juries, accredited Press representatives, and members of immediate families and personal servants. Complete records were kept of those to whom Identity Cards were issued, and the card number in each case became an identification number. This number was used on all travel certificates and on all entry forms and became the key to the identification of all Olympic representatives. The lists of persons to whom Identity Cards were issued were used by the Credentials Department in preparing credentials, at the Olympic Village in checking reservations and assigning quarters, and in many other ways.

DEPARTMENT OF GOVERNMENT

BY OFFICER OF GOVERNMENT

The following "Information for National Olympic Committees" covering the provisions for entering the United States, was mailed to all National Olympic Committees several months before the period of the Games :

INFORMATION FOR NATIONAL OLYMPIC COMMITTEES

XTH OLYMPIAD — LOS ANGELES — 1932

IDENTITY CARDS

The Identity Card when properly completed in accordance with the following instructions and indorsed by your Government as indicated on page 3 of the Card and issued to persons officially connected with the Games of the Xth Olympiad will, when visaed by an American consular officer abroad, be accepted by the Government of the United States of America as a travel document in lieu of a passport for entry into the United States. Such persons may, however, desire also to obtain a regular passport appropriate to their case from the Government of the country to which they owe allegiance. In such a case the visa if granted would be placed upon the passport rather than upon the Identity Card, and the visa will be without cost if an Identity Card is presented.

If the proper Department of the Government of your country will complete page 3 of the Identity Card, thereby approving the Card as a valid travel document issued to a citizen or subject of your country, it will be unnecessary for the person to whom the Card was issued to have in addition a passport or other travel document, and upon establishment of non-immigrant status by the applicant the consular officer of the United States to whom application for a visa is made will issue a temporary visitor's visa for which NO FEE will be collected.

The National Olympic Committee of any country may consult with the American consular officer in the city where the National Committee has its head office in regard to making arrangements to facilitate the examination of the persons to whom it is contemplated the Identity Cards shall be issued. It is suggested that arrangements be made for the members of the group to consult the appropriate consular officer to whom they will apply for visas sometime in advance of their sailing in order that sufficient time may be available in which the consular officer may make such inquiries as may be found necessary.

The Identity Cards, prepared and issued by the Organizing Committee of the Games of the Xth Olympiad in Los Angeles, are serially numbered. The Government of the United States of America and the Organizing Committee will expect your Committee to account for each and every one of these Identity Cards as follows :

(1) Make one complete list showing the numbers of the Identity Cards and the names of persons to whom the Cards are issued in the same classification arrangement as shown on page 2 of the Identity Cards where the eligible groups are classified, so persons in each classification, as "Athletes," etc., will be grouped together on the list;

(2) The Secretary or other official of the National Olympic Committee will bring the original and a copy of this list with him to Los Angeles and deliver these two copies of the list to the office of the Organizing Committee, and keep a copy of same in the office of his Committee and have with him on the steamer extra copies of same so that they may be furnished to, or examined by, government officials should the occasion arise, such lists to bear the name of the National Olympic Committee and the signature of its President and/or Secretary.

All persons coming under any one of the five groups or classifications shown on page 2 of the Identity Card will have to secure their Identity Cards through the office of the National Olympic Committee and your office will personally issue the Identity Cards to such groups, keeping a record of same on the above referred to lists, under the group or classification indicated, and be responsible for this procedure.

The Secretary or other official of your National Olympic Committee will deliver to the office of the Organizing Committee, at the same time the two copies of the list are delivered, all unused Identity Cards so that all of the Identity Cards issued to your Committee will thus be accounted for.

When the Identity Cards are being completed in the office of the National Olympic Committee if an error is made DO NOT ERASE OR OTHERWISE ENDEAVOR TO CORRECT SUCH CARD; cancel such Card, issue a new Card and return the cancelled Cards to the Organizing Committee as provided for above.

HEAD TAX

The Organizing Committee has been advised by the Government of the United States of America as follows :

“By an enactment of the Congress of the United States of America the Head Tax has been removed for all persons holding properly visaed Identity Cards. (We suggest that each National Olympic Committee be careful when purchasing steamship tickets to make sure that the amount of the customary Head Tax is deducted from the cost thereof.)”

TO CUSTOMS SERVICE OFFICERS:

The following Bureau letter No. 91004 dated August 3, 1931, addressed to the Collector of Customs, New York, N. Y., by Acting Secretary of the Treasury Seymour Lowman, relative to the extension of free entry privilege to foreign participants in Olympic Games, has been received through the office of the Deputy Commissioner, Division of Customs Agents, Treasury Department, Washington, D. C.

“In the year 1932 there will be held at Los Angeles, California, the International Olympic Games of the Xth Olympiad, and at Lake Placid, New York, the IIIrd Olympic Winter Games.

“In view of the international character and the purposes of these Games, the privilege of free entry and usual customs courtesies and facilities accorded distinguished foreign visitors will be accorded to the entire personnel of delegations duly accredited by the Olympic Games Committees of foreign nations participating in either or both of the above mentioned series of games.

"It is understood that the delegations will comprise athletes and their usual attendants, officers and members of the National and International Olympic Committees, persons designated by Olympic Committees to act in official capacities in the administration of the Games, official representatives of foreign publications and news organizations accredited by the Olympic Committee of the nation from whence they come, and members of the immediate families and servants of the foregoing.

"In addition to the exemption from duty authorized by paragraph 1798 of the Tariff Act of 1930, free entry without the requirement of bonds may be accorded all athletic and sporting equipment of contestants; horses to be used in contests and their equipment; vehicles and craft to be used in contests; uniforms, flags, banners, and similar articles; reasonable quantities of medicinals, surgical supplies, special foods and foodstuffs; cameras and press equipment; and other articles which may reasonably be supposed to be intended for use solely in connection with the Olympic Games and which are not prohibited from importation into the United States.

"The visitors to whom these courtesies are extended should be required to file with customs officers on arrival a detailed list of all articles imported, and should be advised that no articles accorded free entry may be sold in the United States, and that all such articles not consumed or totally destroyed must be exported from this country.

"Works of art and other objects imported for competitions and exhibitions to be held in connection with the Olympic Games are not contemplated by the foregoing.

"Circulated by the Customs Information Exchange.

Respectfully,

H. K. VAIDEN,
Supervising Customs Agent."

Following is a copy of an Act of the Congress of the United States of America providing for the various measures of assistance as previously described in this booklet :

"JOINT RESOLUTION

"To permit the temporary entry into the United States under certain conditions of alien participants and officials of the IIIrd Olympic Winter Games and of the Games of the Xth Olympiad to be held in the United States in 1932.

"Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That alien participants, officials, and other accredited members of delegations to the IIIrd Olympic Winter Games and to the Games of the Xth Olympiad to be held in the United States in 1932, and members of the immediate families and servants of the foregoing, all the foregoing who are non-immigrants, if otherwise admissible into the United States under the immigration laws, shall be exempted from the payment of the tax of $8 prescribed by section 2 of the Immigration Act of 1917, and exempted from the fees prescribed under the law to be collected in connection with executing an application for a visa and visaing the passport or other travel document of an alien for the purpose of entering the United States as a non-immigrant, and such aliens shall not be required to present official passports issued by the governments to which they owe

STEAMSHIP, RAILROAD REDUCED RATE CERTIFICATES

The National Olympic Committee is requested to place on the two special certificate forms which are being furnished permitting members of your party to obtain the reduced steamship and railroad travel rates, at the place designated on said certificates, the number of the Identity Card which has been issued to such person.

It is important that the same Identity Card number be used on all forms or certificates issued to any one person.

The National Olympic Committee, in complying with these requests, will make it possible for the Organizing Committee to assist in these arrangements.

CONCLUSION

Because all actions taken by the Government of the United States of America to facilitate the entry of groups of persons officially connected with the Games of the Xth Olympiad into the United States from the many countries are limited to those groups classified on page 2 of the Identity Cards, it is important that all persons who are to benefit from these special arrangements shall possess an Identity Card properly filled out.

Shipment of Horses: With the co-operation of the United States Cavalry Association, complete information concerning the shipment of horses, including steamship and railroad data, customs, public health, and quarantine regulations, conditions along the routes to Los Angeles as well as in Los Angeles, and the results of the experience of the United States in the shipment of horses to foreign countries, was compiled and distributed to all National Olympic Committees and National Equestrian Federations.

The New York National Guard extended an invitation to all visiting equestrian teams to stable their horses en route in their splendid quarters in New York City, at no expense. This made it possible for the various countries to concentrate their horses in New York, in the event they were shipped across the Atlantic on separate boats, so that they could be transported across the United States in the same cars, thus affording the advantage of greatly reduced rates for carload shipments.

Representatives of the United States Cavalry Association met the teams at their port of entry and assisted in the transfer of the horses and equipment. All horses arriving in Los Angeles by train were unloaded within a half-mile of their stables at the Riviera Country Club.

Travel Arrangements: Through the co-operation of the International Olympic Committee, the Transatlantic Steamship Conference granted official Olympic representatives a twenty percent reduction below off-season steamship rates. American railroads made a special round-trip rate of one hundred dollars for the trip from New York to Los Angeles and return, and co-operated with the National Committees in many ways, such as permitting foreign chefs to supervise the preparation of meals on the trains and serving meals at reduced rates. Inasmuch as there are no Transpacific or South American steamship conferences, it was suggested that the Organizing Committee advise the countries sending representatives to Los Angeles via these routes to get in direct touch with the steamship line of their own selection. In all cases these lines co-operated with the National Olympic Committees and satisfactory arrangements were consummated, in line with the action of the Transatlantic Steamship Conference.

Steamship and Railroad Identification Certificates were prepared by the Organizing Committee and a supply sent to each National Olympic Committee. These were countersigned and issued by the National Olympic Committees to representatives of Olympic groups, and were surrendered to the transportation companies at the time of the purchase of reduced rate tickets.

SPORTS ENTRY FORMS AND REGISTRATION

THE question of Entry Forms for the Xth Olympiad was given consideration several months previous to the date upon which it was necessary to dispatch the official forms to the various National Olympic Committees.

In previous games it had been customary to provide a separate entry form for each event in each sport, involving a total of one hundred and fifty separate forms. It had also been customary to print all entry forms in at least four different languages, bringing the grand total up to at least six hundred different forms. This was expensive, and presented a difficult and complicated problem for the secretaries of the National Olympic Committees to handle.

The Sports Technical Department, which was charged with the responsibility of handling the entries, determined to produce a simplified system of forms which would entail a minimum of expense and be comparatively easy to handle.

The first step was to reduce the language problem. Obviously, if a type of form could be produced which would be understandable in any language, the total number of blank forms would be reduced from the number used in former Games by seventy-five per cent. This problem was solved satisfactorily. Alphabetical symbols were adopted, each letter indicating that the same information should be furnished on all entry forms where the symbol appeared. For example: (A) indicated in all forms that the name of the Nation should be inserted; (B) the Sport; (C) the name of the Event, and so on. An explanatory handbook in four languages made everything clear to the secretaries charged with filling out the forms.

In working out the language problem, it became evident that there were really only three basic Entry Forms required, one for individuals, one for teams, and one for countries. These three, with a special form needed for Yachting data and another special form for Equestrian data, were adopted, with the result that a total of five types, each understandable in all languages, took the place of the six hundred or more forms used in previous Games.

By means of these five simplified forms, the secretaries of the National Olympic Committees were enabled to do their work with a minimum of confusion and error and the work of the Organizing Committee and of the Sports Federations was likewise simplified. The success of the plan is shown by the fact that remarkably few errors were made in filling out the forms for the two thousand athletes of forty nations competing at the Games.

After the closing date for entries, the Sports Technical Department compiled a master list of entries in all sports, and various individual lists segregated by sports, events and nations, which were reproduced in mimeographed form for the convenience of those concerned. The information given on the forms as filled out was also communicated to the card index department at the Olympic Village, where a complete file of all persons connected with the Games was maintained.

A special combination card was developed which served both as a registration card for the Village and as a signature to the Olympic Amateur Oath. Thus the contestants' signatures to this oath were secured immediately upon their arrival at the Village, without trouble or confusion. Chefs de Mission of the various teams were charged with the responsibility of securing the signatures of representatives of their countries not residing in the Village.

THE OLYMPIC VILLAGE IDEA

IN THE conception of the Olympic Village plan, it was hoped to achieve something more than the mere comfortable housing of the athletes, something deeper than simply the provision of proper cuisine and of facilities for hygiene, comfort, health, and preparation for the contests.

It was hoped that in the Olympic Village the sons of many lands, a true cross-section of the nations, could find a common ground of understanding, in a manner divorced from political internationalism, as men among men, leading a common life under a single roof: that here would be a crucible of inherited emotions in which the barriers of race or creed could not be distinguished.

Because the idea of the Olympic Village was born from a deep sentiment, it is natural that these words should arise from emotions that reflect the pulsated thoughts of some two thousand residents of that international community which existed and succeeded by virtue of the true expression of the principles and ideals of modern Olympism.

When first proposed, the Village plan promptly met the anticipated skepticism that doubts that nations are, after all, only members of one great family — the human family. This skepticism was gradually subordinated to a form of sufferance. It must be said, nevertheless, that the smaller nations more willingly embraced the plan.

Then came the period of sports-technical skepticism. The different national temperaments have always been expressed by the different ways in which the national teams have housed and trained themselves while in the city of the Games, preparatory to the actual contests.

The quiet and self-contained temperaments of those countries in the colder and quieter parts of the earth have led their athletic teams, in past Games, to select isolated and well protected training quarters, while the livelier and more expressive temperaments of the warmer countries have been reflected in less desire for privacy and isolation. There have also been evidences of jealously guarded training secrets and theories opposing the levelling touch that comes from intermingling. As self-discipline is fundamental in the development of an athlete, so it follows that nationalistic discipline is necessary in preserving the athletic perception of a country.

All of this, with the force of generations of precedent behind it, was to be abandoned in the innovation of the Olympic Village. Consequently, it is not surprising that an attitude of polite dubitation arose in some official circles. But as we have said, with this attitude there was a deferential feeling that at least permitted of encouragement to the plan.

In the last analysis, the success or failure of the Village plan would rest with the athletes themselves. Here was the inspiration to carry on — in the fervent belief and faith that the children of the nations, unscarred by maturity and assumed nationalism, would find in each other brothers in the flesh, regardless of color, race or creed, and react accordingly.

Can it be gainsaid that in a partially enthusiastic but generally quiescent official approval of the Village plan by the world-wide Olympic organizations, there fell upon its proponents the responsibility of materializing its physical side in a manner so perfect as to leave open no avenue for failure save that of failure of human nature itself?

In the conviction that human nature, if given the opportunity, will respond in the right direction, the Olympic Village was carried through to completion two months before the Games. A miniature city, replete with modern conveniences and facilities, had arisen magically atop the hills, within eyesight of the great Olympic Stadium — atop the modern Mount Olympus, below which lay the modern Plains of Elis.

The doctrine under which this plan was to be consummated, reduced from its complexities, was that here would be the home of the sons of many nations, made homelike for them and its sanctity protected as at home. Every rule and regulation was conceived in the interest of the Village residents. All were treated alike. A miniature world was here set up by itself, rigidly protected from the world outside.

It is amazing now, to even the most ardent advocates of the plan, how spontaneous and complete was the adoption of this home and all of its conditions by its residents, as they arrived nation by nation.

The greatest compliment the Olympic Village will ever have is that as they arrived, hundreds at a time, the stalwart young Olympians immediately evidenced that happiness and pride in their surroundings which distinguishes every true home. Before the Games got under way the athletes had proved the success of the Olympic Village plan.

A volume could be devoted to the story of the "inside of the Olympic Village." Here was a great happy family of forty nationalities putting the politicians of the world to shame; and not a single athlete forgot for a moment the country and blood from which he sprang, nor that shortly he would pit his skill and character against his brethren from other lands for the honor of country and sport. Night after night, within the portals of the Village, victor met vanquished in the embrace of true personal friendship and the understanding of man to man. As to the efficacy of this consolidated plan of housing and training, from a purely sports-technical viewpoint, the answer is written in the heretofore unheard-of record of superlative performances by athletes of all of the nationalities entered in the many Sports competitions.

As to the admitted test to which Olympic discipline was to be put, in respect to harmonious commingling of the many nationalities and varying temperaments in the Village, it can be said that human nature found in the Olympic Village plan an unsullied outlet through its true expression of the Olympic doctrine and ideals.

Innumerable stories could be told of the homely and heart-touching incidents that occurred day after day within the quiet confines of the Village —

A group of robust fellows in vari-colored uniforms strolling down the central promenade of the Village after dinner, arm in arm, talking, gesticulating and laughing together — and no two understanding a single word of each other's language —

A little fellow sitting on the porch of his house quietly sobbing, because he had lost his badge and when stopped at the entrance gate had been gently reprimanded but given a new badge. The boy was afraid it might be thought he had done something wrong, and his country was a new member in the Olympic family and he wanted ever so much to do only the right thing —

Two veteran athletes, from old-time Olympic countries, dining together a few hours after one of the epochal events of the Sports programme, when in the great Stadium teeming with excitement, a close and unusual finish of one of the memorable races of the Games had caused the officials to issue a debatable decision, one that caused the press of the world no end of controversy, but the boys taking it all in friendly spirit —

One of the two-roomed Village cottages, one room occupied by an official who was a wealthy nobleman in his own country, the other by an athlete who was a humble blacksmith —

EVENING SHADOWS

Standing in the observation tower over the main entrance gate to the Village one balmy sunny morning, still possessing a lingering wonderment about the outcome of it all; thousands of friends of athletes and curious spectators intermingling in a colorful scene at the gate; auto busses arriving home with an early party from the training grounds. Bronzed athletes of three nationalities alight and one of their members, a huge good-natured fellow, gives sharp commands in mimicry. They all line up with hands on each others' shoulders; the big fellow takes the head of the column, whips out a harmonica and starts playing his favorite air, while the entire column passes through the gates and up the main street of the Village singing happily together.

In the middle of the Games, with the competitions at their apex, and with spirit and emotions running high, among hundreds of athletes competing almost hourly, a resident returned to the Olympic Village at midnight. Only the dimmed ground lights were burning; the five hundred houses were dark. Walking quietly along the winding promenades, he came finally to the high point of the Village. Here he stood, enthralled by the peace and quiet of it all.

Casting his eyes to the east he beheld the beautiful cyclorama of vari-colored lights that were the never-sleeping city, fading into the black mantle of the night. Straight ahead, on the plain below, there arose out of these myriad lights a great illuminated ellipse, at one end of which was a golden flame, the center jewel of this crown of light. This was the Olympic Stadium, being prepared for the next day, and the flame was the Olympic Torch.

Fascinated, the eyes of the beholder gradually lowered to the portals of the Olympic Village, and thence traveled over its shadowy streets and house tops. Here, under the soft blanket of night, lay "the nations of the earth," sleeping quietly and peacefully together, like infants in the lap of some maternal goddess of Olympia.

ARRIVALS

LOS ANGELES had become accustomed to the preparations for the Games. The long-awaited thrill was the actual arrival of the Olympic teams and important officials from all parts of the world.

Finally they came. Great ocean steamers tying up to crowded docks — long railroad trains gliding into the depots — flags, bands, reception committees — throngs of citizens enthusiastically extending the welcome of the Olympic City!

Scenes were enacted that will not be forgotten by the delegations. Here, at last, was the city of the Games! The visitors felt instantly the touch of a hospitable populace.

A team struggles through the crowd to the waiting auto busses. Baggage is loaded on special vehicles. All faces are turned toward the Olympic Village, and the city, teeming with Olympic fervor, is left behind for the moment.

Arriving at the Village, the teams first engage in the ceremony of raising their national flags on the high masts arranged in front of the Administration Building. Then men with baggage are escorted to their section of houses in the Village, where everything is in readiness for them. From this moment the participants are "at home" and the orderly procedure of preparing themselves for the Games is begun.

THE OLYMPIC VILLAGE

TO THE cause of promoting international goodwill Baron Pierre de Coubertin has devoted his life. As a means to that end he brought about the revival of the Olympic Games, which were the chief unifying influence of Hellenic civilization. During those ancient festivals Greeks from many small city-states, hereditary enemies for centuries, put aside immemorial grievances and met at Olympia in a spirit of fraternity and friendly rivalry. Such a spirit Baron de Coubertin sought to foster among nations through the modern Olympiads.

In the plan of the Organizing Committee for an Olympic Village a novel problem had to be met in a novel way. For the first time in history men from all lands, speaking many tongues, were to live together in one communal establishment. Many factors had to be considered.

It was plainly out of the question to attempt to serve special food wanted by the various national groups, in a single dining hall and out of a single kitchen. Not even a Swiss hotel-keeper could achieve that feat. It was also obvious that, with a cantonment plan similar to army camps, it would be impossible to give privacy to those who might desire it. Also in the building of a village of the cantonment type there would be little or no salvage, and, since the funds were limited, the question of salvage played an important part in the design. And it was desirable that, whatever kind of accommodations should be provided, they be installed in a setting of natural beauty, enhanced with lawns, flowers, and shrubbery.

Climatic conditions were an important factor in the choice of the Village site. It so happened that the summer of 1931 was one of the hottest ever experienced by Los Angeles. Hence, much thought was given to measures for insuring the comfort of the visiting athletes in the year to come. The majority of them, of course, would be accustomed to lower temperatures than might prevail in Southern California, and the management wished, so far as lay in its power, to offset any such handicap. Several sites were under consideration. On each of them recording thermometers were placed and a twenty-four hour daily temperature record was obtained for the months of July and August. These records revealed that the temperature in the Baldwin Hills averaged ten degrees cooler than in any other spot tested, and that site was chosen for the Olympic Village.

The tract selected contained approximately two hundred and fifty acres of rolling terrain which sloped downward toward the city of Los Angeles and at its highest point of elevation rose four hundred and twenty-seven feet above sea level. It embraced a view, not only of Los Angeles, but also of the Pacific Ocean, the Santa Monica Mountains and the far-flung Sierra Madre range. The location was admirably central, being but a twenty-five minute drive from the heart of the city, ten minutes from the Olympic Stadium, twenty-five minutes from the ocean, and a trifle over forty minutes from the rowing course.

"THE BURGOMASTER"—H. O. DAVIS

Many difficulties, naturally, had to be surmounted. The tract was donated by its owners for temporary occupancy. It was necessary, therefore, to create the Village without disturbing the contour of the hills by needless grading either in the erection of buildings or in the construction of streets and roadways. A contour map was accordingly made of the property and the Village was plotted on lines which avoided marring the landscape. As the rear of the site had the greater elevation, the outcome was that the entire community had a wide outlook.

The tract lay beyond the municipal boundaries of Los Angeles. To secure water a contract was made with the City of Los Angeles whereby permission was granted to tap the city mains half a mile to the south of the Village. Using nearly forty thousand lineal feet of welded steel pipe, a complete underground water system was installed.

The Committee wished to give each nation its own dining room and kitchen so that each could be supplied with its particular native food prepared by its own chef. When it came to designing these separate dining rooms several problems had to be solved. With four men to a cottage, it would require five hundred cottages to accommodate two thousand athletes and their trainers and attendants. Each cottage was fourteen by twenty-four feet, including the porch. To lend privacy and reduce the general fire hazard the houses must be well spaced. It was decided to place them ten feet apart. This meant over three miles of houses for which dining rooms must be located as close as possible to the national groups they were to serve. Another difficulty which confronted the management was the fact that, while the design was taking shape, it was impossible to ascertain how many men each country would send in its delegation. It was therefore necessary to adopt an elastic plan so that any nation might be given ample accommodations even if its entries were not made until the eleventh hour.

DURING SIX WEEKS A HALF MILLION PEOPLE VIEWED THE VILLAGE

It was determined that twenty square feet per man would be sufficient kitchen and dining room space. A general design was adopted, giving a width of forty feet, twenty-eight of which were devoted to dining room and twelve to kitchen. The tables were thirty-seven inches wide and twenty feet long, each seating twenty men. Since twenty square feet of floor space were allowed per man, it followed that six lineal inches lengthwise of the dining room building would include twenty square feet of floor space and would equal the unit of space needed for one man. If a country entered twenty men, a partition was run through the building, giving a dining room ten by twenty-eight feet and a kitchen ten by twelve. For each additional unit of twenty men ten feet were added.

In equipment the kitchens were most modern. Virtually all utensils were of the finest grade of aluminum. Vitreous china was used and the silverware was of heavy plate. Refrigeration was by ice. The fuel used for cooking was bottled gas. In kitchens and dining rooms alike the windows were screened to exclude flies and insects.

Even though the Village was to be occupied only about thirty days, the Committee carried out its plan to give it a setting at once restful and beautiful. Six months before the opening of the Games a small nursery was started containing twenty-five thousand geraniums and some five thousand shrubs. Approximately sixty acres of the Village site, including a large central plaza, were sowed and planted in lawns and flowers. Eight hundred Phoenix palms of an average height of six feet were set out along all paths and roadways.

The roadways were built on the surface with an inch of decomposed granite packed down by a heavy steam roller. The underground work, water system and drains, was started on the first day of February, 1932, and was completed on the fifteenth of March following.

The small house now known as the "Olympic Cottage" was evolved. For its construction material high in insulating quality was selected, which came in boards, of half-inch thickness. While not strictly fire-proof, this material is fire-resisting and cannot initiate a blaze. It was used for roofs as well as walls in order to give further protection from the heat of the sun. This cottage, designed to shelter four men, contained two ten-by-ten-foot bedrooms, each room with an entrance from the outside, and provided with a two-by-four foot closet, a wash basin and a hundred-watt electric lamp. Each house had its cold-shower bath. Copper tubing was used for all the plumbing.

The management felt it was of paramount importance that the athletes be supplied with the best beds obtainable. A contract was entered into for the purchase of two thousand studio couches. These couches, consisting of a box spring with an attached inner spring mattress, represented the highest type of bed manufactured in the United States. Each bed had a cover of material matching the window curtains. All sheets and pillow cases were of the finest quality, and the special blankets were of virgin wool. Athletic towels were selected measuring twenty-two by forty-four inches. A peel and grass chair, made in Hongkong, was selected because of its comfort and good design. Small reading tables stood by the beds. All windows were screened but unglazed, and thus the rooms enjoyed a free circulation of air and full natural ventilation.

A HAPPY GROUP FROM SEVERAL NATIONS

The houses, all portable, were built in templets in the lumber yard, transported in sections to the site, and erected by bolting the sections together. Bath houses were conveniently placed throughout the grounds. Each, with its attendant, had hot and cold showers, hot and cold tub baths, steam baths, scales and four rubbing tables for training purposes. After searching investigation it was decided, in order to avoid sewers, to use community latrines of the type known as the chemical dry toilet.

Construction and equipment began on the first day of April, 1932, and ended on the first day of June. By the last named date the Village, surrounded by two and three-fifths miles of eight-foot woven wire fence and with a complete electrical equipment, was ready to function.

Particular attention was paid to safeguarding the health of the athletes. An Emergency Hospital, with modern laboratory, X-ray and physiotherapy equipment, and a Red Cross first-aid service, was centrally located. A traveling Dental Office, loaned by the Los Angeles Board of Education, was stationed near the Hospital. Sanitary measures were taken to prevent the spread of any disease. To allow for thorough ventilation the houses were set on foundations above the ground. Nearly ten miles of drain pipes were laid to carry off surplus water and the flow from the shower baths. Foot-tubs containing a fungicidal solution, prepared daily, were provided for the showers. A vermin exterminating company was contracted to assign men for regular visits to rid the village of rats, ants and pests of every nature. Covered garbage cans were provided and set in boxes, which in turn were covered with cloth so that flies could not infest the outside of the cans. Distilled water in bottles, fresh every day, was placed in each cottage and, in order that the athletes might suffer no ill effects through change, the same drinking water was supplied in all the dining rooms and training fields and throughout the competitions in the several stadiums.

These sanitary precautions, coupled with daily inspections of foods, kitchens, baths and toilets, proved highly effective. Although the Village housed two thousand men, coming from every part of the globe, not a single case of any contagious disease developed.

A complete Fire Department, manned by firemen of the City of Los Angeles, was installed within the Village with a comprehensive fire-alarm system. Fire hydrants were located at convenient points. Within the enclosure, too, was a United States Post Office. The Village had its own radio facilities, a short-wave station equipped to send messages, without charge, to all countries of the world. This was operated by enthusiastic amateurs. An open-air Theatre was provided, situated in a ravine, with stage and moving picture screen and a seating capacity of two thousand.

The Administration

Building, seven hundred and fifty feet in length, housed the general offices, the public lounge, a vault for the safe-keeping of valuables belonging to the athletes, a baggage room, linen rooms, the laundry and commissary. In this structure, also, a separate office furnished with a table, chairs and a telephone was put at the disposal of each Attaché. A complete Telephone Exchange was set up and through the Village switchboard it was possible to communicate with every manager's house and all dining rooms throughout the grounds. Outside the gates were the Press Building, a shop for the sale of souvenirs, and a canteen where meals were served to the general public at all hours.

A salient feature of the Administration Building was the Lounge, where the public, barred from the Village proper, could meet the athletes and their friends. Arts characteristic of the American Southwest struck the prevailing note in the furnishings of this spacious room. It was colorful with Navajo Indian rugs, and the Mission furniture, while modern in origin, was based on Spanish-Colonial models used by the Franciscan fathers and other early California pioneers.

In the operation of the Olympic Village, as in its construction, the lack of a precedent was both a handicap and an advantage. The management of the Village, which remained unchanged during the life of the community, consisted of the Managing Director, the Operating Manager, and the Assistant Operating Manager. Directly responsible to the Operating Manager were the various heads of divisions.

These were the Chief Steward, who had charge of the Commissary and of all dining rooms; the Superintendent of Housekeeping and Service; and the Chief Inspector of the Sanitary Organization. Under control of these division heads were the staffs of all departments. The general office force comprised three desk or room clerks, two relay men who also acted as guides within the Village for visiting delegations, an auditor, a bookkeeper, and secretaries for the Managing Director and Operating Manager. The duties of all employees were well defined.

No casual visitor realized how many employees contributed to the smooth functioning of the Village. In the Commissary were the Chief Steward and Sanitary Inspector, two clerks, three men who received and filled orders for the several kitchens, and two truck drivers who delivered supplies. In the kitchens were four stewards, twenty-three chefs, sixteen cooks and one hundred and five helpers. The linen department was staffed with a housekeeper, three men, a truck driver and thirty-seven houseboys.

while, from the first gate to the Administration Building, twelve officers in the employ of the Village, six by day and six at night, cleared the way for the busses and automobiles transporting the athletes and saw to it that the cars of visitors

Ten attendants looked after the bath houses, and the care of sixty acres of lawn and seven acres of flowers required the services of a head gardener with eleven assistants, and the driver of a truck.

For policing, a force of fifty-four guards, watchmen and gatemen was provided. Throughout operations, State motor-cycle officers controlled traffic in all public roads leading to or from the Village, either made use of the parking place or drove on and out. The main portal of the Village, placed in the center of the Administration Building, was guarded continuously by three gatemen, three interpreters and three private detectives, working in eight-hour shifts. Five private detectives, all told, were at hand in the neighborhood of the Administration Building and about the grounds for the protection of the athletes and of the general public.

In the daytime eleven guards in uniform patrolled the Village streets to direct the athletes, to question all callers, inspect their passes, show them to the section which their passes permitted them to visit, and make sure that they wandered nowhere else nor invaded the privacy which the management sought to maintain. These guards were charged to keep order and to be on the lookout for accidents and fires. They were not armed in any manner. Their sole mission was to aid the guests. Within the gates also were three guards, not in uniform, whose duty it was to circulate through the grounds to note any irregularities and to register at hourly intervals the thirty-two fire alarm control boxes. At night two men checked the fire controls and nine uniformed guards watched over the Village. Besides these policing arrangements, the extensive fence surrounding the grounds was patrolled by eight men on horseback, four by day and four at night. These fence riders saw to it that no one entered or left the Village except through the officially appointed gates.

The central Commissary, from which all supplies were distributed to the thirty-one separate and distinct dining rooms, was a vital part of the organization. By one o'clock each day the various chefs drew up their menus for the morrow and on requisition forms made out their orders covering the food required for three meals. The kitchen steward went over the menus and orders with them, cutting down or adding as was necessary. By two o'clock all these orders reached the main Commissary, where they were classified. The commissary clerk would then call on the telephone five leading purveyors of the perishable foods on his list and receive their quotations. The quotations were turned over to the Chief Steward, in charge of the Commissary and all kitchens, who at three o'clock placed the order. These supplies reached the Village between four and six o'clock the next morning, where from large bins they were assorted in boxes in accordance with

ish. A large walk-in refrigerator safeguarded the meat deliveries and carried a reserve stock for emergencies. Chilled boxes for fish and green vegetables were the previous day's requisitions and distributed to the several kitchens by two noiseless electric trucks. The first delivery at six o'clock carried milk, cream, eggs and fruit for breakfast. The trucks then returned to the Commissary and took on meats and supplies for the noon and evening meals. These were delivered at nine o'clock.

In the Commissary was a storeroom stocked with condiments, tinned goods and dry vegetables. These supplies were checked after the daily deliveries and if they had run low in any particular, orders were placed to replenish. Stationed at the Commissary also was a refrigerator truck stocked with milk, cream, butter, eggs and cheeses. After the day's orders were filled and the kitchen stewards were certain that they had a sufficient supply of these products, the truck went back to the dairy for reloading and returned to the Village at four o'clock in the morning. This refrigerator truck, in charge of a man furnished by the dairy, was operated like a small store, the Commissary issuing requisitions for whatever supplies it drew.

The Sanitary Inspector examined all refrigerators in the Village twice daily to assure himself that they were clean and fresh, that the food stuffs were properly stored, and that any questionable foods were rejected and thrown out. He saw to it that kitchens and dining rooms were sanitary; that the kitchen crews were cleanly in their persons; that precautions were taken to exclude flies and other insects from kitchens and dining rooms; and that garbage cans were kept closed and in their screened receptacles. The four stewards of each kitchen were responsible to the Inspector in enforcing the hygienic rules regarding the chefs and the storage of supplies. The stewards were also charged with the duty of seeing that the food was properly cooked and properly served.

The Housekeeping Department was conducted in the same manner as that of any large hotel. As the furnishings were delivered at the Village they were arranged in the cottages under the supervision of a housekeeper. The bed linen, blankets, mattress protectors and towels were held at the main linen room until needed. Linen service closets, twenty-two in number, were built throughout the Village and stocked with one complete set-up for each cottage of the quota they were to serve. As the guests arrived, the rooms were made up by the houseboy in charge of the section to which the arrivals were assigned. Thirty-five houseboys, each caring for twenty-eight rooms, were employed when the population of the community reached its maximum. Two of this staff acted as foremen, supervising the boys under them, and helped in emergency work. All linen was changed daily.

PORTUGAL

As a rule, the athletes went to breakfast between seven and eight o'clock. At that time the houseboys stripped the beds, collected the used towels and made up the rooms with supplies from the service closets. The soiled linen was counted and bundled, carried by truck to the main linen room where it was again counted, and by ten-thirty o'clock was picked up by the Laundry. It was returned between four and five o'clock in the afternoon, counted, checked in, and the next day's quota was distributed to the regional closets. Three men handled the checking in and out of linen and household supplies. Under the Housekeeping Department, also, were the ten bath-house attendants. They kept the baths clean and regulated the temperature of the steam-rooms. Each bath-house had its linen closet completely stocked with towels, soap and liniment, which were furnished to the athletes whenever required.

The Olympic Village was operated under a time schedule which conveys a picture of a typical day. The first employees to arrive in the morning were the gardeners. These men, at five o'clock, began to wet down the parking lot for automobiles and then raked and watered the lawns and walks in front of the Administration Building. At five-thirty the electric trucks backed up to the Commissary to load supplies for the kitchens. Fifteen minutes later came the bath-house attendants, who changed into their white uniforms and promptly at six o'clock opened the bath rooms for the early rising athletes.

By six o'clock there was a general stir. The guard was changed, all night guards, gatemen, watchmen, fence riders and traffic officers being relieved by the day watch.

AT THE SWISS HEADQUARTERS

A GROUP OF AMERICANS

Each of these watches had its captain. Inspection of all men going off duty, as well as those coming on, was held by the Chief of the Guards immediately in the rear of the Administration Building and the incoming detail received instructions for the day. The Post Office employees arrived and sorted the mail for the seven o'clock delivery. At six o'clock also, two men assigned to that duty raised the American flag, the Olympic flag, and the flags of competing nations which for twelve hours daily flew from the Administration Building and the masts in the outer plaza. No special hour was set for raising the flags before the managers' cottages. These were in the care of the managers themselves. Usually flying by seven-thirty o'clock, they were taken down at sunset by some member of the team.

AMERICANS STARTING A CROSS COUNTRY JAUNT

At six-thirty the kitchen employees had arrived and were at their posts. At seven o'clock the night clerks, auditors and messengers were relieved by the day-time detail as were the doctors and nurses who had been on duty in the Hospital. The Laundry office opened to receive and return personal laundry belonging to the athletes, and at the linen room the houseboys checked in, received their white uniforms and went to the service closets about the Village to sort the linens delivered the previous night in preparation for their room work. At seven-thirty, the Sports Technical and Transportation offices were ready to answer all questions, and convey the athletes to the points called for in their programme for the day.

At eight o'clock the electricians, carpenters, plumbers, and maintenance men in general came on duty to relieve the night shift, since this service functioned throughout the twenty-four hours. The Fire Department, which worked twenty-four hours on duty and twenty-four hours off, also now changed watches. Between eight and nine the athletes, having breakfasted, called for their mail, and were loaded into the busses and transported to the various stadiums or training fields.

At nine o'clock the gardeners entered the Village to water and mow the lawns, and the sprinkling wagon began its rounds. The gardening work was delayed until this hour so that the athletes who wished to sleep late might not be disturbed. The drinking water now arrived and all water bottles were replenished as needed. By nine-thirty, when nearly all athletes had left the enclosure, the garbage trucks collected refuse from the kitchens, performing their task so expeditiously that they were in and out of the Village within an hour.

The athletes returned for lunch between eleven-thirty and twelve-thirty. The busses were sent out again between one and one-thirty and returned between four and five. By four o'clock the gardeners were out of the Village, no lawns being watered after that hour. At six the guard was changed and the night doctor and nurses relieved the day force. The Post Office and the Laundry office closed at eight o'clock.

Dinner was served for two hours beginning at five-thirty. The dining rooms were cleared by eight, but were kept open until ten for those who wished to use them as writing and reading rooms. The Theatre opened at seven forty-five, with band concerts, motion pictures, and vaudeville acts provided free of charge for the entertainment of the athletes. These performances were concluded at nine o'clock. The floodlight system in the Village was turned off at ten, as were the street lights with the exception of one light every two hundred feet, which was so placed that its rays were directed on the road and away from any cottages. The guards and fence riders went quietly on their rounds. The stillness which wrapped the community was that of a village actually rural.

The transportation of the athletes was methodically handled. All visitors arriving in automobiles left their machines with attendants in a parking space and made their way on foot to the Administration Building six hundred feet distant. In this building, as has been said, were offices for the Attachés of the several countries. If a visitor wished to see an athlete he was referred to the proper Attaché, who would telephone the team manager at his office in the grounds. The team manager might direct the athlete to meet the caller in the Administration Building or request the Attaché to issue to the visitor a pass to enter the Village. Such a pass specified the date and hour when the visitor was to be admitted, the hour when he must leave, and the exact location where he was to go, the latter being designated by cottage number.

This pass, signed by either the Attaché or the team manager, was presented at the main gate where, retaining half of the pass, the gateman admitted the visitor. As he walked up the main road from the Administration Building the caller would meet guards who directed him to his destination. If he went astray a guard would set him right or conduct him to the cottage of which he was in search. If a wandering visitor had already made his call, he was escorted back to the gate. No visitor could enter without a pass and after eight o'clock in the evening all visitors were barred. The management of the Village at no time issued passes. This was the sole prerogative of the Attachés and team managers.

In the interest of privacy, all rules were made applicable to the representatives of the Press. If a Press representative wished to interview an athlete or team manager he was treated in precisely the same manner as any caller and could visit no part of the Village save that designated on his pass. Ample accommodations, however, were furnished the newspapermen. There were offices for all local newspapers and for the national news-gathering associations as well as a large central room where any duly accredited correspondent might write his story. All these offices had telephones, and immediately adjoining the Press Building were offices of the telegraph and cable companies. Detailed to the Press Building were three guides who at certain hours of the day would escort Press representatives and photographers about the Village. These guards had specific instructions not to allow the newspapermen or photographers to interview or photograph any athlete without the permission of the team manager. In the framing and enforcement of rules for visitors and the Press, the welfare of the athletes was the sole consideration. They themselves were answerable to no authority save that of their own officials, to whom the management looked to preserve order.

There was a fixed charge of two dollars per day per person living in the Village, which included housing, meals, transportation, entertainment, and all other services provided for by the Organizing Committee.

The formal opening of the Olympic Village was set for July 1, 1932, and all nations were so notified. Some members of the team from India, however, reached Los Angeles on June 11, to be followed on the 16th by a contingent from Argentina, on the 21st by Australians and on the 27th by the lone contestant from Colombia. This made it necessary to assemble an operating staff sooner than was planned. Among early arrivals in July were athletes from Haiti, New Zealand, Sweden, Japan, the Philippines and the United States. From the middle of the month, nearly every day witnessed the arrival of delegations and picturesque flag-raising in the plaza before the Administration Building. By July 27, with the coming of the teams from Yugoslavia, Spain and China, the thirty-nine competing nations were all represented.

With whatever misgivings these men from many lands may have entered the Olympic Village, it can be truly said that they left it with regret, and also with the knowledge that they had contributed their share to something new and inspiring. Like the competitions in the Games themselves, it was for them a test of sportsmanship and character. High-strung from training, nervously anticipating the contests to come, swayed no doubt in some instances by racial and national prejudices, they found themselves members of a community without prohibitions or class distinctions.

In all likelihood the Olympic Village presented the purest cross-section of the world ever assembled and each delegation in turn was a cross-section of a nation. The athletes came from all social strata. Twenty-three scions of nobility conformed to the same rules as their fellows, lived the same life, and liked it. For many of the athletes it was their first encounter with genuine democracy. All were quick to grasp the prevailing spirit and all gave it their whole-hearted co-operation.

EMPLOYEES' INSTRUCTIONS

TO OUR EMPLOYEES:

You represent part of the Olympic Village personnel, and by your appearance and manner toward our guests and by following these rules you prove your loyalty to the Management.

(1) Courtesy must be uppermost in your mind at all times. THE GUEST IS ALWAYS RIGHT. No matter what the provocation is, do not argue with the guest. Refer the guest to the Front Office and inform your immediate superior of any irregularity that may come up at any time.

(2) Personal cleanliness must be maintained at all times. Men and boys must be cleanly shaven at all times.

If you wear a uniform it must be clean and properly pressed.

(3) We request you to give our guests the best service with the least noise and confusion. Wrangling between employees, loud talking, singing, whistling, rattling of the tools, and all unnecessary noises must be avoided. The chewing of gum, use of intoxicating liquors, smoking or reading while on duty will not be tolerated, and under no circumstances will liquor be allowed to be brought on the premises.

(4) Do your work as quickly as possible. Do not converse with guests except to answer their questions.

(5) Do your work the way you are instructed.

There is a reason for it. We will be glad to have your suggestions for changes that will improve the service or decrease the cost, but do not make any changes until they have been approved by your superior. Never use anything in a room or public room or anything belonging to a guest or to another employee.

(6) NEVER TELL A STRANGER WHERE ANY ROOM IS, or give strangers any information regarding a guest. Refer them to the Office and watch to see that they go there. If they do not, notify the Office at once. Always avoid discussing or commenting on the guests or the management either with a guest or with each other. Be careful not to give any information regarding any of our guests either to other guests or to outsiders. Refer all inquiries to the Office. Do not discuss your personal affairs with guests. They are not interested. These are very serious offenses and will not be tolerated.

(7) All articles left in rooms or found anywhere on the grounds shall be turned in to the Department Head with a statement of where they were found, under what circumstances, by whom found, and any other information that might enable the Management to make proper disposal of same.

(8) Under no circumstances shall any employee do laundry work, pressing, leave the grounds, or do any form of personal service for guests except upon written directions from the superior officer. Do not accept tips from anyone.

(9) At all times try to co-operate with your fellow employees and the other Departments. Give them any information that may be useful. Turn in reports on anything you find out of order. Post yourself regarding all services furnished by the Village so that you can inform the guests. If asked some service not included in your work or contrary to your orders you will inform your superior as soon as possible so that it may be attended to properly.

(10) Your station is the place you are to work. Learn your station and STAY ON IT except where work calls you to and from it. If absolutely necessary to leave your station during your shift do not do so until you have notified your superior officer and secured permission.

(11) Employees' visitors are not permitted to enter the grounds. Anyone calling for an employee can leave word with the Timekeeper. Discharged employees are outsiders and are not permitted in the grounds. All packages carried out by employees shall be checked in and out by the Gateman on duty who shall open package and check contents. This rule applies to all employees and to all packages.

(12) All employees shall ring in and out at the beginning and end of their shifts at all times when entering or leaving grounds. Time that is not rung in on the clock will not be paid for. No overtime will be allowed to any employee except upon written order from the Department Head.

(13) No employee under any circumstances can handle or secure liquor for anyone. Every person accepting employment in the Olympic Village does so with full knowledge and understanding that the Management will not allow or tolerate the furnishing or handling of liquor under any circumstances. Employees must understand fully that should they violate this rule in any form they will not only be discharged at once but the Management will advise the legal authorities of such violation and will offer every legal help possible in securing conviction.

(14) Please remember that you are valuable to the Olympic Village only as long as you abide by these instructions. Always ask your superior officer for any information whenever you are in doubt about anything.

WELCOME TO OLYMPIC VILLAGE

The Olympic Village has been built specially for you. It will be your home for the next several weeks.

Here for perhaps the first time in history, the chosen youth of all nations dwell in one community and share a common life.

This plan is in accord with the Olympic ideal "to increase friendly understanding by bringing the youth of the nations together".

The discipline in the Olympic Village is left to you and your friends who live here. Let us all demonstrate to the world that Olympic self-discipline can produce a record of peace and happiness among the two thousand inhabitants of the Village.

It is the desire of the Olympic Village management to render you every possible service for your health and comfort during your visit with us.

We extend to you our best wishes.

Cordially yours,

Xth Olympiade Committee

WOMEN'S HOUSING

ALTHOUGH the women competitors of the Games of the Xth Olympiad were outnumbered by the men nearly ten to one, preparations for their housing, training, and entertainment were made with the same painstaking care as was taken with the plans at the Olympic Village where the men were to live. The Organizing Committee early abandoned any plans it might have had for housing the women contestants in the Olympic Village or in a village similar to that of the men. It was felt that feminine needs could be more completely met in some permanent type of residence.

Several plans had been formulated, and were under consideration, when the management of the Chapman Park Hotel, in Los Angeles, volunteered to reserve the hotel exclusively, at a very reasonable rate, for the housing of the women athletes during the period of their residence in the city. The hotel was ideally located in the beautiful Wilshire District, convenient to training grounds, shops and theatres. Its appointments were of the highest class and it was apparent that the management was willing and anxious to do everything possible for the health, comfort and convenience of the guests. Facilities were adequate and the atmosphere of the establishment was refined and pleasant.

An agreement was accordingly entered into between the Committee and the Chapman Park Hotel for the exclusive use of the hotel by the women members of official delegations attending the Olympic Games. The arrangement provided a fixed daily charge, of which the hotel was to collect the sum of two dollars per day from each guest, and the building were lounge rooms where the women athletes might get acquainted with one another and meet their friends from the outside. The public was excluded from part of these to afford privacy.

In the beautiful private garden adjoining the hotel, tea was served each afternoon until the day of the Opening Ceremony. After that time the Olympic guests were away at the various afternoon competitions. Meals were served in a large, beautifully decorated dining room. A general menu, prepared in American style, was served to all, and in addition, special dishes were prepared Organizing Committee agreed to pay the difference out of its own funds.

Each room accommodated two guests, except in the case of a few larger rooms which accommodated three and several suites of two rooms which comfortably accommodated four or five. Each room had a private bath and a single bed was provided for each guest. On the ground floor of the

A young woman was selected as Manager of Women's Housing, with another young woman as assistant who spoke several languages and acted as interpreter. The Manager of Women's Housing endeavored to meet all women teams upon their arrival and assist them in their arrangements at the hotel. Her desk was in the lounge on the main floor where she kept in close contact with all those living in the hotel, assisting in such ways as giving information, helping with transportation and training schedules, arranging for entertainment, acting as liaison between the guests and the hotel management, and in many cases as a personal advisor.

In arranging for entertainment for the women athletes, and in assisting them in entertaining themselves, the most difficult problem was that of choosing things to do. Literally hundreds of invitations of all kinds poured into the manager's office, only a small percentage of which could be accepted. An official entertainment at the hotel was ordinarily offered daily in the dining room after dinner. This consisted of a variety of music and dancing, and on one occasion a birthday party was held for all guests whose birthdays occurred during their absence from home. Motion picture stars were frequent guests. On one evening, those who cared to go were taken to Wrigley Field to a night baseball game, and on another they were taken to the Hollywood Bowl to hear a symphony concert.

Some of the women athletes wished to do their own laundry, so facilities were set up in the basement of the hotel for this purpose. This proved to be very popular and the ordinarily deserted basement became a center of activity and industry.

As with the men at the Olympic Village, the women athletes at the hotel seemed to catch the full spirit of the Games. They were happy and enthusiastic, and each evening there was sportsmanlike applause when any fortunate winner in the afternoon competitions entered the dining room. Altogether, one hundred and seventy-seven women members of official delegations lived in the hotel, and the Organizing Committee feels that they returned to their homes throughout the world enriched with new friends and memories of pleasant experiences, and with a better understanding of their sisters of other lands.

HOTEL ACCOMMODATIONS

MORE than two years in advance of the Games, at the suggestion of the Organizing Committee, the Southern California Hotel Association passed a resolution to the effect that member hotels would not raise their prices during the period of the Olympic Games. The hotels further assured the Committee that they would co-operate in every way possible in entertaining visitors who came to Los Angeles for the Games.

Several months before the Opening Ceremony, complete information was compiled concerning hotels, with a map designating those centrally located as well as the relative positions of the various Olympic facilities. This material, containing a hotel reservation form, was sent out to the official groups in all Olympic countries and to the world Press. Machinery was set up whereby the reservation forms could be returned to the Hotel Reservation Committee of the Organizing Committee, and then referred to the hotel indicated and the reservation completed.

TRAINING ARRANGEMENTS

WILLIAM M. HENRY
SPORTS TECHNICAL DIRECTOR

AS EARLY as two years before the Games of the Xth Olympiad it became evident that the athletes would begin to congregate in Los Angeles considerably in advance of the opening of the Games. In order to recuperate from the effects of their long journeys, and to attain their best form physically and psychologically, they must be able to train under satisfactory conditions.

It was apparent that if the matter of securing training fields was left to the individual nations, the same difficulties would present themselves as would have been the case had the visiting countries made their own arrangements for housing. The Organizing Committee therefore felt called upon to make arrangements for a large number of training facilities for all sports, assign the countries to these training locations, arrange training schedules, and organize a complete transportation system to and from the fields. This task and responsibility fell to the Sports Technical Department.

SPORTS TECHNICAL DEPARTMENT, OLYMPIC VILLAGE—CHECKING THE DAILY TRAINING SCHEDULE

ONE OF THE TRAINING FIELDS

A complete survey was made of the athletic facilities in and around Los Angeles, and arrangements were made with the Board of Education, the City Recreation and Playground Department, and similar groups controlling athletic fields, pools and buildings, for the use of such facilities as might be required to take care of the training needs of the athletes. Following this general survey and the establishment of preliminary contact with the authorities, final arrangements were delayed pending selection of the site for the Olympic Village. Once the exact location in the Baldwin Hills had been definitely settled upon, arrangements were concluded for the use of those facilities most suitable from the standpoint of —

- (1) Adequacy and comfort;
- (2) Similarity to the Olympic competitive facilities;
- (3) Proximity to the Olympic Village.

The headquarters of the Sports Technical Department was established in the Olympic Village six weeks before the Games, in an office located just inside the main gate, and this office promptly became the focal point for activities of the contestants as well as the main information center for athletes, officials, press and public.

Charts of all training facilities, showing their size, equipment, location, distance from the Village, etc., were prepared, and as the entry blanks arrived, training programmes were drawn up, always with the thought in mind that each country should have the facilities best suited to its own peculiar needs and desires, whatever they might be. These training charts for each individual country were completed in duplicate, and as each team arrived, the Sports Technical Department contacted the Chef de Mission and explained the training schedule. With one or two minor exceptions, the training schedules as laid out were accepted and followed by all teams.

Not only was the Sports Technical headquarters at the Olympic Village the center of all training and transportation activities for the Games, but it developed into the main source of all Olympic information and contact. A complete card index was maintained of all individuals having any Olympic connection whatsoever, and this information was made available to the press and public as well as to the Olympic groups. Each individual was catalogued as to his official connection, and in the case of athletes, not only were records kept of the events in which they were entered but all available information regarding their best competitive records was compiled, and as the daily competitions took place a progressive record of their performance was carefully noted.

BOXERS AT ONE OF THE MANY GYMNASIUMS

The Chefs de Mission of the various countries, and in many cases the individual managers of the various teams, called at the Village Sports Technical Headquarters for special information regarding interpretation of rules and other technical matters, requests for the loan of special equipment, information regarding arrangements for meetings of the International Federations, and information regarding arrangements for transportation, whether for training, competition or other purposes. Every possible service was extended and rendered at all times.

TRAINING AT THE CYCLING STADIUM

All officials from the countries accredited to the various International Sports Federations made their contact with these Federations largely through the Sports Technical Office, notifications of time and place of meetings of all kinds

AT THE RIVIERA COUNTRY CLUB

were given out through this Department, all entry lists were checked for completeness and correct spelling in this office, and the Credentials Department also made this the headquarters of its activities at the Village. All contacts between the athletic teams and all other official groups, including the Organizing Committee, the Sports Federations, and outside bodies wishing to entertain the athletes, were also made through the Sports Technical Department.

The following is a summary of the Sports on the Olympic programme and the training facilities which were made available:

Athletics: All fields chosen for training of the Track and Field athletes had 440-yard tracks of clay similar in composition to the track in Olympic Stadium. The tracks were all marked in metric distances. This peculiar clay composition was new to all the Olympic athletes with the exception of the few resident in Southern California. While the tracks had to be softened considerably in order to provide suitable training conditions, their use gave the visiting athletes an opportunity to familiarize themselves with the type of surface on which they would actually compete during the Games. Use of the Olympic Stadium track was denied to the athletes by the officials of the International Athletic Federation, to whom the track was turned over several weeks before the Games. Athletes were, however, permitted to examine the track in order to satisfy themselves regarding its composition and its general condition.

Each training field was equipped with hurdles, jumping standards, crossbars, and other equipment for training, all being furnished free of charge. At each training field the athletes were provided with large comfortable dressing rooms, lockers, massage tables, hot and cold shower baths, special drinking water and towels, and each field was in charge of a supervisor who made it his business to look after the comfort and wishes of the teams training on that particular field.

For the women contestants a special training field was provided for the exclusive use of athletes of their sex with a woman supervisor in charge. This field was used by most of the larger teams. In the case of countries having a limited number of women athletes desiring to train with the men athletes, special dressing room accommodations were arranged in the training quarters at certain fields.

The existing athletic fields of the following schools and colleges were used for training purposes preparatory to the Games of the Xth Olympiad:

IN THE FENCING STADIUM

NUMEROUS GYMNASIUMS WERE AVAILABLE FOR THE TRAINING

Los Angeles High School	Inglewood Union High School
Jefferson High School	Jacob Riis High School
Manual Arts High School	University of Southern California
John C. Fremont High School	Los Angeles Junior College (for Huntington Park High School	Women)

Boxing: Through the courtesy of three large Los Angeles clubs, the splendid modern facilities of these organizations were made available to the Olympic Boxing contestants. Thus the teams could train and work out in an actual boxing ring. Each of these clubs also was fully equipped with punching bags, pulley weights and other necessary equipment. The contestants sparred with their own team mates, or with outside sparring partners. Daily training was scheduled to give each Boxing team the exclusive use of the facilities in one of the clubs for a certain period, proportioned to the number on the team. Most of the road work done by the boxers took place on the paths at the Olympic Village.

The gymnasiums of the following Clubs were used by Boxing contestants for training purposes:

Los Angeles Athletic Club	Hollywood Athletic Club
Elks Club of Los Angeles

Cycling: The only board Cycling track in Southern California available to the Committee was the special track constructed in the Rose Bowl, Pasadena. Upon completion, the Cycling contestants were permitted to use the Rose Bowl track at all times for training purposes.

As each Cycling team arrived in Los Angeles, arrangements were made to transport the team in a special motor coach to the starting point of the road Cycling race, approximately forty-five miles from Los Angeles. An official accompanied the team for the full length of the course, pointing out the dangerous crossings and other hazards. In this manner each team was enabled to familiarize itself with conditions. Many of the contestants rode the course daily but some of them trained on the concrete highways in the vicinity of the Olympic Village.

Equestrian: Organized training for the Olympic Equestrian events was undesirable as well as impossible. Training over the actual Cross Country course was prohibited by the regulations, and the same was true of the Prix des Nations Jumping course. Training facilities made available to Equestrian contestants at the Riviera Country Club consisted of adequate level turf for training of the

ON THE ROWING COURSE

Dressage horses, a sample course of standard Jumping obstacles, and a certain area of flat country and mountain trails similar to those to be utilized in the actual Cross Country competition. These were available to all contestants and use was made of them without pre-arranged schedule. The riders co-operated in a fine spirit of good sportsmanship. All the facilities were located in the immediate vicinity of the Riviera Country Club, headquarters for the Equestrian events, where practically all the Equestrian teams were housed.

Fencing: Official specifications for the Fencing competition called for strips of cork carpet fifty metres in length. The only strips of this length available were the four in the Fencing Stadium. Absence of other strips of this length led to the fear that training facilities in this sport might prove to be inadequate.

However, the co-operation of the various teams in adjusting their training schedules to the convenience of all concerned, solved the training problem satisfactorily through the use of the Fencing Stadium and the large gymnasium at the University of Southern California where shorter strips suited for practice were laid down.

Field Hockey: With only a few teams entered in the Olympic Field

Hockey competition, it was a comparatively simple matter to arrange a training schedule for these contestants. The University of California at Los Angeles made available its campus, with complete Field Hockey facilities. Here the teams played their practice games. The only training feature lacking in this sport was real competition, Field Hockey being practically unknown in Southern California.

AT THE SHOOTING STADIUM—THE TARGETS

Gymnastics: The fact that the Olympic Gymnastic competition was held out of doors somewhat complicated the training problem in this sport. However, at Los Angeles High School and Manual Arts High School there were well equipped outdoor gymnasiums, and these were made available for such teams as desired to use them. These facilities, together with equipment brought by the various teams and set up by them at the Olympic Village and at one or two outside points, enabled the contestants to secure adequate outdoor practice in practically all events on the Gymnastic programme. Complete equipment was available indoors, in the gymnasiums of many local schools and clubs.

The Gymnastic facilities of the following institutions and organizations were used for Gymnastic training:

Los Angeles High School
Manual Arts High School
Jacob Riis High School
Turnverein Germania
L. A. Athletic Club

THE FIRING LINE

Modern Pentathlon: Without question, the contestants in the Modern Pentathlon event faced the most difficult training problem of any participants in the Games. The varied nature of the competition, and the fact that its supervision is divided among five different International Federations, have in the past resulted in a situation where the Pentathlon contestants have been largely left to shift for themselves so far as training facilities were concerned.

In arranging for the Pentathlon training, the Organizing Committee recognized the principle that the men of each country would want to train with their fellow countrymen participating in the five sports involved. In order to meet the peculiar requirements of this Olympic competition and make things as easy as possible for the contestants, arrangements were made to have a special bus for participants in the Pentathlon leave the Olympic Village early each morning and go directly to the Pistol Range. After remaining an hour at the Range, the bus went directly to a nearby swimming pool where it remained for another hour, then went to the Fencing Pavilion, and from thence returned to the Olympic Village. Thus, a contestant in the Modern Pentathlon could, if he so desired, practice Shooting, Swimming, and Fencing each morning, and then be free in the afternoon for his Running training, in the neighborhood of the Olympic Village, or for Horseback Riding at one of the nearby riding academies. Transportation schedules were so arranged that this programme could easily be varied in any way desired. For example, it was possible to go to the Shooting Range and then return directly to the Olympic Village without continuing to the Swimming Pool or the Fencing Pavilion. Thus the contestants were enabled to arrange their schedule to suit their individual tastes.

ONE OF SEVERAL SWIMMING POOLS USED FOR TRAINING

The arrangement of this special training schedule was greatly appreciated by the vast majority of the contestants in the Modern Pentathlon and was particularly well adapted to the smaller teams for whom it would have been difficult to make their own arrangements.

Rowing: All training for the Rowing events was concentrated at the Long Beach Marine Stadium, which was the scene of the Olympic Rowing competitions. The boathouse, dressing room and dock facilities proved to be adequate for all purposes, and the competitors, as a general rule, arranged their training schedules in such a way as to be of the least possible interference with each other. The

THE SWIMMING STADIUM WAS ALSO USED

International Rowing Federation cooperated efficiently in arranging for practice starts, and in other ways.

Shooting: Arrangements were made for all contestants in the Shooting events, both pistol and rifle, to practice at the Los Angeles Police Revolver Range, the site of the actual competition. The original plans permitted the pistol and revolver contestants to use the lower deck and the 25-metre targets, at the same time that the riflemen were shooting from the upper deck at the 50-metre targets. Later it was decided that the riflemen should shoot from the lower level, and matters were considerably complicated for a time, but the officials of the two branches of the Shooting competition succeeded in making arrangements which were entirely satisfactory.

Swimming: Needless to say, it was the desire of every participant in the Aquatic events of the Games to train in the pool in the Swimming Stadium in which the actual competitions were scheduled to be held. This was difficult because of the large number of teams involved. The first preference was the privilege of the Water Polo players and of the Divers because no other pool in the Los Angeles area had either a water polo area of Olympic dimensions or a diving tower of Olympic specifications.

In planning the Olympic pool the Sports Technical Department had arranged for movable goals for Water Polo which would permit the teams to use a full-sized water polo area at one end of the pool while the deep end was available for Diving. A rotating schedule for the morning hours was arranged which permitted all divers to participate, in groups of approximately the same number, for one hour each morning while the Water Polo teams were practicing at the same time at the other end of the pool. The hours from seven o'clock to twelve o'clock noon were set aside for this purpose, and the teams rotated so that no one team or group of teams was forced to take the comparatively undesirable early morning hours exclusively, but on the other hand each took these less desirable hours in turn.

"MERRILY WE ROLL ALONG"

The hours from twelve o'clock noon until evening were set aside for special Swimming exclusively. The various countries were divided up into groups of approximately the same size, the larger teams, such as those of the United States and of Japan, having the exclusive use of the pool at certain times, and the smaller teams being combined with other small teams to use the pool at other hours. As in the case of the Water Polo and Diving groups, the hours were rotated daily so that the less desirable training periods were taken by each group in turn.

As soon as the first Swimming teams arrived, it became apparent that the swimmers desired more time for their daily training than that allowed them in the Swimming Stadium pool. Arrangements were therefore made, through the courtesy of the Los Angeles Playground and Recreation Department, to use a number of the municipal pools in the morning, and this same courtesy was extended by other groups. The morning hours from eight to twelve, when the Stadium pool was being used by the Divers and Water Polo teams, were set aside in these outside pools for the various Swimming teams, and thus they were enabled to secure two hours of practice in the outside pools and one hour of practice in the Stadium pool, daily.

Contestants in the Olympic Swimming events practiced in the following pools:

Los Angeles Swimming Stadium	La Cienega Pool
Evergreen Pool	Los Angeles Tennis Club Pool
West Los Angeles Pool	Los Angeles Athletic Club Pool
North Broadway Pool	Hollywood Athletic Club Pool
Central Pool	Inglewood High School Pool
Manchester Pool	Ambassador Hotel Pool
Griffith Pool	Deauville Club Pool

Weightlifting: The Committee was fortunate in having two well-equipped club gymnasiums available in Los Angeles which included among their facilities Weightlifting equipment of a more or less standard variety. These facilities were placed at the disposal of contestants in the Weightlifting events, and with the equipment brought by the participants themselves, proved satisfactory for the training of contestants in these events.

Weightlifting practice was conducted in the gymnasiums of the following clubs:

Los Angeles Athletic Club	Elks Club of Los Angeles
---------------------------	--------------------------

Wrestling: Numerous athletic clubs and high schools were used for training purposes by the Wrestling contestants. There was some difficulty owing to the absence of large mats of the standard four-inch thickness required by the Olympic rules, but by combining the standard American two-inch mats with smaller mats used for Tumbling and Gymnastics, it was possible to provide equipment at all locations which was adequate. In making out the Wrestling training schedule, an attempt was made to have boxers, wrestlers and weightlifters of the same countries train at the same clubs or schools at the same hours, so that athletes of each country could train under as congenial circumstances as possible.

The gymnasiums of the following Los Angeles schools and clubs were utilized and equipped for Wrestling practice:

Inglewood High School
John C. Fremont High School
Hollywood High School
Huntington Park High School
Jefferson High School

Jacob Riis High School
Polytechnic High School
Hollywood Athletic Club
Los Angeles Athletic Club

Yachting: Practice was permitted on the inner harbor and close off-shore waters at Wilmington Harbor, the scene of the Yachting competitions. Boats and rigging for the Monotype competition were provided for all contestants. These craft were borrowed and chartered and all equipped with new gear. Many of the competing yachtsmen lived near the harbor during the Games, and all those living in the Olympic Village were provided with transportation to and from the harbor by regularly scheduled bus service.

TRANSPORTATION ARRANGEMENTS

THE Organizing Committee provided, at no additional charge, a complete transportation system for all contestants and officials living in the Village and the Women's hotel. Parking facilities for a maximum of seventy motor coaches of thirty passengers capacity were provided outside the Olympic Village, together with a small office building, repair pits, wash rack and service station. The first coach was placed in service on the third of July and additional coaches put in operation as the contestants arrived and training activities increased.

During the training period regular transportation schedules were operated to the thirty training locations, and these schedules provided frequent service with a minimum number of coaches. In addition to these regular schedules, special coaches were operated to those training locations where the size of the team or other circumstances made this necessary. All competitors were thus enabled to travel to and from their training fields comfortably and quickly on the transportation provided by the Committee. Thousands of interested spectators visited the Olympic Village daily to watch the arrival and departure of the busses carrying the athletes. The early morning hours, when busses were coming and going at an average of one every minute, attracted the most attention.

Transportation needs reached their peak on July 30, the date of the Opening Ceremony, when it was necessary to transport all contestants, regardless of where they might be living, to Olympic Stadium. Working on a carefully arranged plan and with the efficient co-operation of the Los Angeles Police Department, a total of sixty-eight busses carried nearly two thousand athletes and officials from four definite meeting points to Olympic Stadium and back without a minute's delay en route, despite the terrific concentration of traffic in and around Olympic Stadium including a hundred thousand spectators with the attendant jam of motor cars.

After the opening day of the Games, all training activities were concentrated in the morning, and in the afternoon the motor coaches carried athletes and officials to the various fields where competitions were taking place. Special arrangements were made to transport athletes who had finished their competitions, back to the Olympic Village or the women's residence at Chapman Park Hotel, without waiting for the end of the athletic programme of that particular day.

Despite all the complications involved and the intensity of the motor traffic of Los Angeles during the period from July 3 to August 15 inclusive the motor coaches covered a total of 83,360 miles, and carried more than 68,000 athletes and officials, without injury to a single one and without delay to any event due to the failure of the transportation system. The system set a high mark for speed and efficiency, and through it all the teams were provided with all necessary transportation from the moment of their arrival until their departure.

In addition to the transportation arrangements provided by the Organizing Committee, other transportation of a public, semi-public, and official nature was arranged for by the Committee. When the first groups arrived at the Olympic Village, many weeks before the Games, a motor coach line connecting with the regular street-car transportation system was operated from the Olympic Village. As soon as popular interest in Olympic Village activities warranted such a service, a regular bus transportation line connecting the center of downtown Los Angeles with the Village was put in service and remained in operation until some time after the Games were over. During the Games, a special autobus service was provided running between Pershing Square in downtown Los Angeles and Olympic Park. These busses, which were exclusively for members of the International Olympic Committee, National Olympic Committees and Sports Federations, Juries, Attachés, and Press representatives, ran to Olympic Park during the hour before each programme and returned to Pershing Square during the hour immediately following each programme. They made only one stop, and these special traffic arrangements provided Olympic officials with the equivalent of a taxi service at a nominal cost. In addition, special arrangements and schedules were made on the interurban railroads for officials and press representatives desiring to attend the rowing events at the Long Beach Marine Stadium.

INTERNATIONAL OLYMPIC COMMITTEE MEETINGS

IT IS traditional for the International Olympic Committee to hold a formal inaugural meeting in the city of the Games a few days before the Opening Ceremony. In Los Angeles this meeting was held at ten o'clock in the morning of July 28, in a room, specially arranged, in the top of the tower of the City Hall. This room is at the point of highest elevation of any building in the city and, as many of the members had arrived only a few hours previous to the meeting, offered a splendid view and dramatic first impression of Los Angeles.

Those invited to the meeting were the members of the International Olympic Committee, and the members of the Organizing Committee and California Olympiad Commission, with their wives, and a limited number of officials of state.

LOS ANGELES CITY HALL
THE FORMAL INAUGURAL MEETING OF THE INTERNATIONAL OLYMPIC COMMITTEE WAS HELD IN THE ASSEMBLY ROOM IN THE TOP OF THE TOWER

The Honorable John C. Porter, Mayor of the City of Los Angeles, officially welcomed those present. Count de Baillet-Latour responded, and then delivered the following speech :

SPEECH OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE INTERNATIONAL OLYMPIC COMMITTEE AT THE OPENING OF THE SESSION OF 1932 — CITY HALL OF

Mr. Mayor :

Anxious to live up to an ancient European tradition, you have invited the International Olympic Committee to hold this meeting in the City Hall of Los Angeles. You have welcomed us and commended our work in terms such that my colleagues and myself are more than justified in their conviction that you fully appreciate the real significance of the Olympic ideal, as well as the benefit which a clean and wholesome spirit of sport is able to confer upon those who "play the game."

For this please accept my deepest gratitude. May I also thank you for the opportunity you have given me to explain to this distinguished gathering the supreme objective of the Olympic Games.

Ladies and Gentlemen :

The Games set forth the highest ideals of sportsmanship and athletic excellence in amateur competition. Throughout these quadrennial events it is our aim to stimulate, on the part of the youth of all lands, a love for clean sport, and to provide an opportunity for the best products of each nation to compete, on a basis of equality, with the best of other lands. Thus an example is afforded for all nations, embodying not only the very finest traditions, but also a uniform interpretation of the rules governing the many various activities comprised in the four-yearly Olympic programme. The Olympic Games in reality constitute a meeting of the "league" of the best athletes of the world.

But however great is the importance attached to the Olympic Games themselves, there is another far greater object that we must bear in mind. The practice of sport must be carried on by every one and even when athletes are no longer young enough to compete in championship events. It is preferable, particularly as one grows older, to partake in sport rather than to watch it, but the required effort for that purpose can be obtained only from amateurs and not from professionals.

That is the reason why we have no interest whatever in sport except insofar as it is exclusively amateur both in spirit and in practice. If disguised professionalism is allowed to follow its normal course, it inevitably ensues that there is constantly held before the boys the ambition to excel in one or more lines of sport as quickly as possible, this with a view of capitalizing their talents by selling their athletic services to the highest bidder.

The possibility of such earning tends to make the lad unwilling to apply himself to his studies or with that measure of application to his chosen vocation which is essential to success. It is also liable to give him a false standard of values. The money received for participation in sport, if he is a star, is altogether too easily earned as compared with the amount of work required to get a regular wage, whereas the hopeless difficulties to which it leads in the event of failure is disastrous for his future.

In the great majority of instances the net result is that the young man, on the very threshold of life, gets a wrong start and is led to adopt false standards which permanently interfere with his own fundamental interests in later life. Play assumes an importance out of all proportion with the benefit it bestows. Instead of being a pastime after the day's work or during holidays, sport becomes the consuming passion. The wholesome love of play as a recreation is displaced by an inordinate desire for mercenary gain through a series of victories which set an undue premium upon winning. This is a vicious influence because of the pernicious cycle which it engenders and to which it inevitably leads.

What a different picture this presents as compared with that of young and old alike engaging in all forms of wholesome play and recreation solely because of the physical, social and moral benefits directly derived therefrom.

It is interesting to note that a recognition of this simple truism is growing rapidly amongst the youth both of Europe and America. The development of this point of view in the minds of the younger generation is one of the forces that will require to be reckoned with, and will rapidly put a stop to the disloyal practices adopted by those leaders who were out to win at all cost.

The great difficulty is to bring about a general understanding of the amateur principle, because amateurism is, in fact, a matter of spirit rather than of law. The only reason for having a definition for amateurs as against professionals is to enable us to make an individual classification. But the rule does not make the difference, this being determined rather by the attitude and conduct of the individual.

That is why a professional in one sport cannot be considered as a true amateur in other sports, even if no account is taken of the extreme difficulties which arise in attempting to administer any such ruling. From the standpoint of administration, there is little difficulty in dealing with individuals who, by reason of their own attitude and conduct, are readily classified by themselves as "out and out" professionals on the one hand, or amateurs, in the strictest sense of the word, on the other hand.

The difficulties arising from the interpretation and application of the amateur principle are most frequently incurred in connection with those who do not come definitely under either of the two categories. If we were to regard as professionals all who admit they are participating for personal gain, it would not be difficult to classify all individuals into either one of these two groups. But another problem arises because of the so-called "contamination" principle, which provides that in the event of a recognized amateur competing with or against professionals, he thereby loses his amateur status.

Why not simplify the whole matter by doing away with the compulsory disqualification of an amateur simply because he may have competed against a professional regardless of the circumstances? The foregoing problem would be much less complicated if we were to differentiate between organized competition and social or informal competition. In my opinion, we should disregard the latter entirely insofar that participation in such competition should have no bearing upon the amateur or professional status of the individuals. We should recognize the right of human beings to engage with others in physical activities of a friendly, social or recreational nature, this even if the said activities are athletic pastimes, provided of course that such participation is not part of an organized programme in the nature of a tournament or series of scheduled events in which records are kept of the standing of the competitors, awards are given, championships determined, admission fees charged and special publicity made. Professionals and amateurs should be allowed to intermingle promiscuously regardless of past or present practices in such informal recreation where fellowship is the chief incentive.

Under an arrangement of this kind we should be concerned with an individual's classification only in organized competitions. In this manner there would be no intermingling of amateurs with professionals except in the most unusual circumstances when special authorization is granted by the Federation governing the sport.

I do not see in what way this could be detrimental to the amateur principle and it would, at the same time, prevent many really good boys from being forced, against their will, into the ranks of professionalism. It would also facilitate the task of those who are not versed in all the technical aspects of the interpretation and administration of the amateur rules, as for instance the presidents of colleges and universities, the principals of schools, the members of boards of education, as well as business and professional men who have the general welfare of youth at heart and who look upon sport as a wholesome pastime.

I wish the question to be taken up by my Council with the Delegates of the International Sports Federations, and I am convinced that, if there was not more diversity of theory and procedure with regard to the amateur rule, it would be much easier to adopt an attitude of wise and firm discipline. It would, moreover, provide an opportunity for that natural and wholesome recreation which both men and boys always derive from amateur games and, at the same time, assure for their lifetime the physical well-being of those who engage, when they are young, in competitive sports exclusively for "the love of the game."

Executive sessions of the International Olympic Committee were held in the Music Room of the Biltmore Hotel, at which such matters as pertained to the forthcoming Games, and other regular business, were disposed of. The schedule of executive sessions was as follows :

Thursday . . . July 28 — 3:00 P. M.

Friday . . . July 29 — 9:30 A. M., 3:00 P. M.

FEDERATION CONGRESSES

MANY of the International Sports Federations take advantage of the presence of their members from various countries, in the city of the Games, to hold a congress of their Federation. At these meetings the Federations consider any special situations that may have arisen with an effect upon the technical administration of the Sports in the immediate Games, and transact other important business.

The following is the schedule of the Congresses held in Los Angeles :

THE TRADITIONAL CEREMONIAL DINNER ON THE EVE OF THE OPENING OF THE GAMES

ENTERTAINMENT

AN IMPRESSIVE programme of formal and official entertainment has become an important and traditional part of the celebration of the Games. These affairs are punctiliously arranged, and, in some instances, have a prescribed protocol of their own from which there can be no departure.

The Organizing Committee, realizing the care with which it would be necessary to arrange this programme of events, appointed, from its own membership, a special Entertainment Committee consisting of its president, William May Garland, and two of its vice-presidents, Maynard McFie and LeRoy Sanders.

The General Secretary prepared for this Committee an outline of the prescribed affairs and a protocol, which he had effected previously in consonance with the President of the International Olympic Committee.

CHARLES CURTIS, VICE-PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (CENTER), THE GUEST OF HONOR

THE GRAND RECEPTION

A special department was organized, to deal solely with these matters, and this department was placed at the disposal of the Committee under the active direction of Mr. Sanders.

CEREMONIAL DINNER AND GRAND RECEPTION

The Organizing Committee tendered the traditional Ceremonial Dinner in the Ballroom of the Biltmore Hotel of Los Angeles, on the eve of the Opening Ceremony of the Games, at seven o'clock, July 29. Honorable Charles Curtis, Vice-President of the United States of America, was the guest of honor.

The guest list, following the established protocol, consisted of the members of the International Olympic Committee, officers of the National Olympic Committees and International Sports Federations, members of the Organizing Committee and California Olympiad Commission, and their wives, and heads of state and their wives.

Following the Ceremonial Dinner, the Reception and Ball was held in the Sala de Oro of the Biltmore Hotel at nine o'clock, to which those present at the Ceremonial Dinner adjourned and where a reception committee awaited them, followed by the introduction of the official personages. The gorgeous Gold Room presented a gala scene, with some fifteen hundred guests present.

On the evening of August 4, Mr. William May Garland, senior member of the International Olympic Committee for the United States, tendered the traditional dinner to the members of the Committee and their wives. The affair was held at the exclusive Bolsa Chica Club, some forty miles from Los Angeles on the seashore, which provided the opportunity for a delightful auto tour beforehand.

A programme of great interest to the members of the official Olympic Committees and their wives was the luncheon on August 6, at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Motion Picture Studios, tendered by Mr. Louis B. Mayer, a member of the California Olympiad Commission. The great studios were opened to the guests for several hours and special arrangements made for them to view the actual making of several cinematographic plays. The tour of the studio was followed by luncheon, with members of the Olympic Committees and their wives as guests of honor, and several hundred notable guests, including many of the celebrities of film land.

HOLLYWOOD BOWL
WHERE SYMPHONY CONCERTS AND OTHER PROGRAMMES OF ENTERTAINMENT WERE PRESENTED

On the evening of August 9, a formal dinner was given by Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks at "Pickfair," their beautiful home in the hills above Hollywood, to the International Olympic Committee members, heads of National Committees and Federations, members of the Organizing Committee and of the California Olympiad Commission, and their wives.

In addition to the above affairs of the official programme, there were many formal and informal dinners and garden fêtes tendered the various Olympic groups by members of the Organizing Committee and other prominent citizens of Los Angeles. Also, some of the National Olympic Committees tendered dinners to other National Committees, and foreign societies in Los Angeles arranged an extensive programme of entertainment for their respective native Olympic groups.

THE PRIZE MEDAL

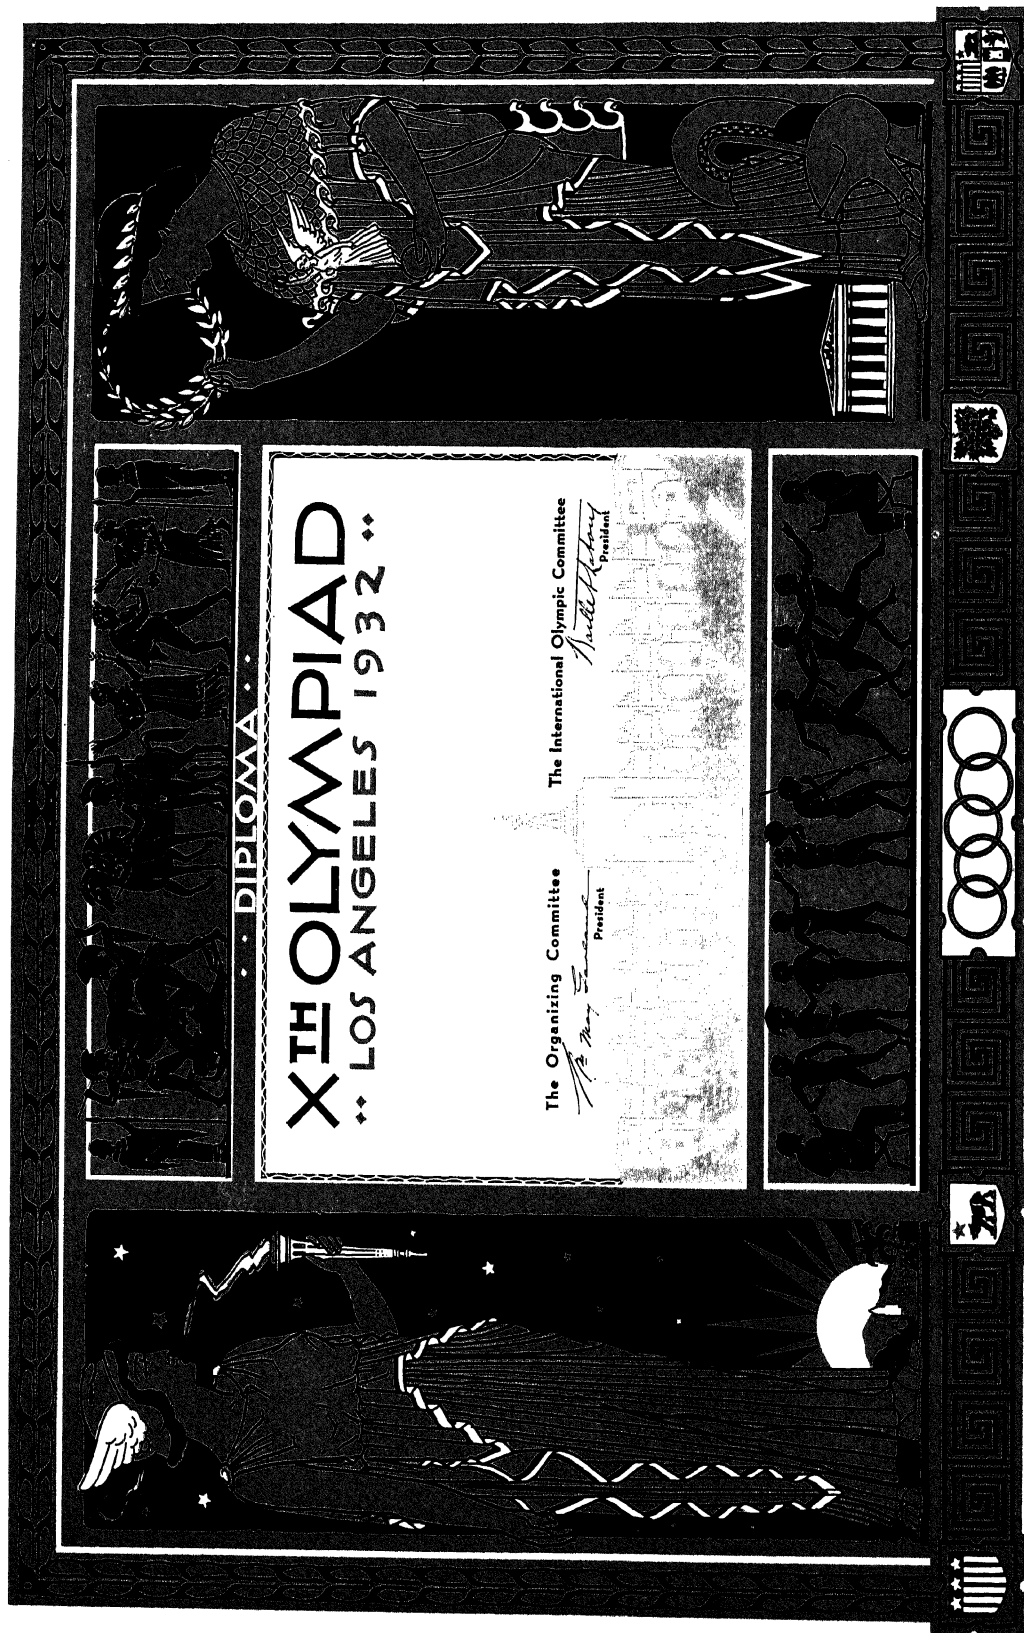

MEDALS AND DIPLOMAS

THE dies with which the Prize Medals for the Games of the Xth Olympiad were stamped were cast from the official Olympic hubs used in previous Games. The only alteration made was that of changing the wording to "Xth Olympiad Los Angeles 1932." The medals themselves were stamped in the United States, and finished in gold, silver or bronze, according to the requirements of the Protocol.

Commemorative Medals: The design for the Commemorative Medals was produced by Julio Kilenyi of New York. On the face of the medallion is a figure representing the international athlete carrying the banner of the Xth Olympiad. On the reverse side are two figures supporting the shield of the United States. One of these figures is holding an olive branch and the other a shield bearing the seals of the State of California and of the City of Los Angeles. On the side is the California poppy, and on the margin, at the top, appear the words, "Los Angeles, California." The medals were of bronze.

Diplomas: A new design was required for the Diplomas. Many artists submitted sketches, and for more than a year proposed designs were examined, but none were found fully satisfactory. The Committee finally went to Mr. H. M. Kurtzworth, Art Curator of the Los Angeles Museum, to enlist his help in producing an appropriate design. He was immediately interested and undertook the task himself.

The design, the color scheme, and many of the details of the Diploma were directly inspired by the classic art of the Greeks, through examples of vase painting found, for the most part, in the Victor Merlo Collection of Classical Antiquities in the Los Angeles Museum, dating back to the period of the beginning of the ancient Olympic Games. The border of olive represents the branch of sacred leaves taken from the tree within the temple walls, the highest award any man could receive in the Games, or for service to the State. Columbia, the modern Athena, symbolizing the United States of America, with the torch of the Olympiad in her hand, stands in an attitude of welcome to the nations of the world. She is clad in the Doric chiton and wears the Phrygian cap of freedom on her head. The stars of aspiration, and the rising sun of progress form her background, and at her feet the mountains, the palm and orange groves, and the Los Angeles City Hall, symbolize the State and City of the Xth Olympiad.

Athena, the Olympian patroness, goddess of civic virtue, the arts, victory, and the home, represents the ideal of the Olympic Games, wherein athletics and the arts of war were practiced to insure adequate protection and full enjoyment of all the arts of peace. The goddess is garbed in the classic chiton and himation. About her shoulders is the ægis or scaly skin of a monster, indicating her power over enemies of man. On her brow and in her hand are victors' wreaths of sacred olive and she also holds a statue of Nike, goddess of victory. Athena's shield and spear have been omitted, for here she appears practicing the arts of peace, but at her feet is shown her war helmet. In the distance is the Temple of Athena at Athens.

MARTIN J. JACKSON
OFFICIAL ILLUMINATOR AND ENGROSSER

JULIO KILENYI, SCULPTOR, WHO DESIGNED THE COMMEMORATIVE MEDAL AND THE OFFICIAL POSTER FOR THE GAMES

The Olympic Stadium, appearing as seen by contestants from the middle of the arena, shows the entrance surmounted by the Olympic Torch amidst flying flags and thronged spectators.

The frieze at the top of the Diploma represents various aspects of the Games as depicted on vases of the Sixth Century, B. C., — a judge; a contest in full armor; equestrian sports; drama, music and the dance; flanked by another judge, spear in hand.

The lower frieze represents other aspects of the classic Games; a seated judge; physical examination as prescribed both before and after contests; a discus thrower in the first position, from a vase in the Munich Museum; a javelin thrower, from a vase in the Boston

Museum; the finish of a race, as depicted on an original Olympic trophy vase of the Fifth Century, B. C., in the Los Angeles Museum; and a judge making a decision, from the same vase. The lower border is composed of the typical Greek "fret," meander, or "key" motif, embellished with the coats of arms of the United States and of the State of California, the Olympic insignia, the symbolic grapes of Los Angeles County, and the four flags showing the historical development of the City of Los Angeles.

The terra cotta and black color scheme was inspired by Fifth Century vases in the Los Angeles Museum.

THE OPENING CEREMONY OF THE GAMES

ON THE morning of July 30, 1932, the Gods smiled on Los Angeles. Into the measureless azure vault of the heavens the sun, a golden ball, pushed slowly and majestically as though the great Zeus himself were riding in his shining chariot from his home on Mount Olympus.

This was the day of the Opening Ceremony of the Games of the Xth Olympiad. The Olympic Torch, undimmed by its passage across the shadowy pages of Time, was to blaze anew. The flower of the world's youth was assembled on the shores of the Pacific in a new and modern Olympia.

It was the day that marked the climax of years of intensive preparations on the part of Olympic groups all over the world.

Some forty nations had responded to the invitation to participate and the athletes in the peaceful Olympic Village atop the hill, overlooking the Stadium, were in readiness to give of their best for the honor of their countries.

The dawn of the Opening Day for the officials, athletes and spectators marked the beginning of sixteen days of competition in as many sports and demonstrations.

To the Organizing Committee it meant the end of preparations and the fruition of their plans. Success or failure of the Opening Ceremony might well mean the success or failure of the Games. No effort had been spared to insure the perfection of every detail in the magnificent pageant shortly to be unfolded.

And the Gods on Mount Olympus seemed to have sensed the importance of the occasion. Nature conspired with man to provide a glorious setting for this brave attempt to present the Games on a site removed by the distance of half the world from the Plains of Elis.

Before noon the great throng began to gather on the grounds about the Stadium, spurred into enthusiasm by the Olympic activity radiating from the colorful and mysterious international city on the hill.

With the opening of the gates, fortunate ticket holders streamed through the shadowy tunnels into the soft sunlight that flooded the great arena and promptly found their seats, while their less fortunate brethren sought points of vantage outside the Stadium, from which they hoped to catch a glimpse of famous personalities. The magical presence of the athletes had, in a few short weeks, shaken a great community, from lethargic preoccupation in its routine of existence into intense anticipation.

AN INSPIRING PANORAMA OF THE OLYMPIC STADIUM

From all over Southern California an unnumbered horde of motor cars swarmed toward the Olympic Stadium and, as if guided by an unseen hand, were smoothly shunted here and there to convenient parking locations near the great amphitheatre.

Over on the hill the Olympic Village was a beehive of activity. While fifteen hundred athletes lazily stretched their beautifully muscled bodies in the coolness of their cottages, to conserve their energy for the long and eventful afternoon, officials busied themselves with the thousand and one details of preparations.

Thousands of inquisitive individuals, anxious to see what they could of the personnel of the great international spectacle, wended their way by motor car and on foot to the Village, to swarm around under the hundreds of gorgeous flags streaming in the freshening breeze before the Administration Building.

Inside the guarded portals of the Village, and stretching far up the esplanade, motor coach after motor coach, in a long murmuring line, waited to carry the athletes to the Stadium.

As one o'clock approached, anxious officials assembled their athletes and marched them from their houses down to the long line of coaches, where, without confusion, they were seated and, as rapidly as groups of half a dozen coaches were filled, were whisked out through the gates behind the screeching sirens of motorcycle police. As if by a miracle, the waves of motor and pedestrian traffic parted, and in an unbroken journey of less than ten minutes they whirled through miles of cheering spectators to the sheltered parking space reserved for them in the very shadow of the great Stadium.

Joined en route, on a carefully timed plan, by motorbusses of their confrères from the Rowing Course at Long Beach and of the women athletes from their Hotel, the great motor cavalcade converged upon the Stadium in miraculous consummation of carefully arranged plans — a splendid omen for the Games.

Meantime, within the huge concrete bowl the tiny individual specks that were the early comers had been spreading slowly over the inner face of the basin, until the thirty miles of seats disappeared from sight beneath a mass of humanity, eager, wondering, breathlessly expectant.

It was a gorgeous and never-to-be-forgotten sight as the moment arrived for which the Olympic world had waited four long anxious years.

Overhead a friendly sun shines down from a cloudless sky, its rays dissipated in a cooling breeze. A fat dirigible and a lazy auto-gyro seem to hang suspended above the Stadium. Within the amphitheatre there is not a vacant seat. The waterfall of color created by the rainbow-hued clothing of a hundred thousand people spills down the sides of the great bowl from the flag-draped rim over eighty rows of seats to the emerald-green turf of the field, with its ivory ribbon of track and geometrically outlined runways and jumping pits. Over at the west end of the Stadium the motley jumble of color is punctuated by an expanse of pure white stretching half-way up the precipitous slope of the structure — the white-garbed Olympic Chorus of 1200 voices, and the 300-piece Olympic Band.

Far up on the south side of the Stadium long rows of counters identify the Press section, made audible to those within order of march, and so on, pours out of the automatic electrical writing machines in front of each correspondent.

Just below the Press section are the formally attired members of official Olympic Committees in the Tribune of Honor, accompanied by gaily dressed ladies shading themselves beneath colorful parasols. Statesmen and dignitaries of many lands mingle with brightly garbed military figures, completing the impressive scene.

Immaculately clad ushers quietly tend to the wants of all. In this mammoth congregation, there is no confusion. Everyone is seated. A great silence seems to settle upon the throng. It is 2:30 o'clock, the time set for the opening.

A hundred thousand pairs of eyes turn toward the East, where the smooth contour of the Stadium is broken by the graceful arches of the Peristyle.

Above the center arch on the great scoreboard there appears, as if by some colossal feat of legerdemain which permits him to address his people from his home far across the sea, the imperishable words of Baron Pierre de Coubertin, the founder of the Modern Olympic Games, slowly unfolding in rhythmic cadence, letter by letter :

"The important thing in the Olympic Games is not winning, but taking part. The essential thing is not conquering, but fighting well."

A crystallization of Olympic sentiment, that in an instant makes clear to the multitude that this is no ordinary event, no common spectacle.

It is the Olympic Games breathing a spirit capable of overcoming barriers of race, creed and color, — spanning the centuries from 776 B. C. with an all-pervading spirit of sportsmanship and good will.

There is a commotion beyond the center arch, beneath which the silk hats of the members of the International Olympic Committee and the Organizing Committee are glistening in the sun.

An excited whisper runs like a flash across the Stadium.

And then a hush.

A voice that fills every corner of the vast bowl breaks forth from the huge electrical announcer :

"Ladies and Gentlemen, the Vice-President of the United States is arriving to officially open the Games. If you will listen carefully you may hear him being greeted by members of the International Olympic Committee and the Organizing Committee at the Peristyle."

Thereafter an instant of silence, and then the voice of the Vice-President, "Gentlemen, I am most happy to meet you on this great occasion."

Another moment of silence, and then simultaneously the mighty roar of thousands of voices unloosing long pent-up emotion, and the martial strains of Sousa's immortal "Stars and Stripes Forever" as the group of officials headed by the Vice-President and his escort pours like a stream across the fore-court of the Peristyle and down the long and gaily decorated promenade to the Presidential loge.

AND THE FLAG IS RAISED

HUNGARY

A stirring moment, this! A day of days!

Outside the Stadium, unseen by the vast crowd within, the athletes are forming for their entrance. The medley of bright colors, caused by the intermingling of groups from many nations, slowly untangles into well-ordered lines. Newcomers to Olympic competition, the great majority of them, endeavor to control their excitement, while the veterans who have marched in other Opening Ceremonies feel a strange lump rising in their throats and try to hide it with a twisted smile as the groups form behind their national banners and move slowly towards the tunnel that leads into the great amphitheatre.

The Vice-President arrives at his box and for the first time is clearly identified to the audience. He waves his hand to acknowledge a renewed outburst of cheers.

His gesture brings a hush to the babble of noises.

The time-table on the daily programme is hastily consulted.

What comes next?

JUGOSLAVIA

The uncertainty ends when the crashing introductory chords of the American National Anthem burst with inspiring crescendo from the mammoth band.

No need to call the people to their feet — they've been standing ever since the Vice-President entered.

Following the introductory bars, the music of the band dies away to an accompaniment, and the mighty voice of the great chorus rises like the vox humana of a Gargantuan pipe-organ in the stirring strains of the Anthem, filling the Stadium with glorious sound to the final note, with half a thousand soprano voices rising in perfect unison, to send an electric thrill up and down the spine of the most blasé spectator.

A terrific burst of applause salutes the magnificent rendition by band and chorus, as the spectators sink back to their seats limp with emotion.

And then, the last notes of the Anthem still echoing in the far recesses of the Stadium, the band strikes up a stirring march.

All eyes turn to the mouth of the parade tunnel.

An erect young man in white, with a five-colored Olympic sash around his waist and bearing a banner, appears out of the shadows and heads down the straightaway of the track toward the Tribune of Honor.

Behind him a tall young man with dark blue blazer and white trousers is proudly carrying a flag with white cross on blue background.

Greece — Mother of the Olympic Games!

It is the Parade of Nations!

The athletes are coming!

Before the crowd has grasped the significance of the moment a compact group of swarthy Greek athletes are on the way down the track.

A wild cheer rends the air as someone far up in the stands recognizes the flag of his country.

The spell is broken. The crowd, uncertain regarding the proprieties of the occasion, tries to restrain its enthusiasm but finally breaks loose with a mighty roar of welcome to the athletes — Kings for a day.

Following closely behind the Greeks, who have been given preferred position as a tribute to the part their country has played in the history of the Games, come the stalwart Argentines, then the other Nations, one by one, in alphabetical order.

As the long lines of athletes, strikingly uniformed, pour from the tunnel in an apparently never-ending stream, the real significance of the scene is borne in upon the spectators. Enthusiasts and skeptics alike suddenly realize that here, in flesh and blood, are the greatest athletes of the world — come to Los Angeles to celebrate the Games of the Xth Olympiad.

Cheers and applause greet each team as it enters, and follow it on its journey around the track and into position on the grass facing the Tribune of Honor.

Thoroughly in the spirit of the occasion, the crowd gives impartial recognition to one and all, and during the entire half-hour of the parade applause sweeps the Stadium in great gusts until finally the teams are all in position and, in front of them in a semi-circle around a color-draped rostrum, are the members of the International Olympic Committee and the Organizing Committee.

The audience, glad for a respite, sinks into a restful silence.

The voice comes once more over the announcer. Mr. William May Garland, President of the Organizing Committee, is being introduced.

He speaks a few words of welcome and then calls upon the Honorable Charles Curtis, Vice-President of the United States, to officially open the Games.

A tense silence as all eyes swing from the rostrum on the field up to the Presidential loge.

The Vice-President speaks, and again the announcer picks up his voice and relays it to the waiting throng:

"In the name of the President of the United States, I proclaim open the Olympic Games of Los Angeles, celebrating the Xth Olympiad of the Modern Era."

The audience wants to cheer — and does.

Something in the air brings the cheering to an abrupt close.

From somewhere—from everywhere apparently—come the soul-stirring sounds of a fanfare of trumpets.

Searching eyes are raised and focused on the eastern rim of the Stadium, above the Peristyle, where, silhouetted against the blue of the heavens, high above the athletes on the field, stand six trumpeters in pure white except for their brightly colored sashes, the sun glinting from their long trumpets as the golden notes pour out.

The hush, as the plaintive music dies away, is punctuated by the roar of a distant cannon.

Then another blast, and another, and another, — ten in all, at intervals of five seconds.

Someone points high above the trumpeters, where the Olympic Torch rears its stately shaft.

From the brass bowl a wisp of smoke rises, then a tiny tongue of flame rapidly grows into a gorgeous golden glaze, symbolic of the Olympic spirit that has pursued its way down the ages, takes shape — to continue its illumination throughout the sixteen days of the Games.

Scarcely has the final echo of the ten-gun salute been lost in the air and the flame issued from the Torch when, from the white-robed chorus at the opposite end of the Stadium, there rise the majestic strains of Bradley Keeler's "Hymne Olympique," and from the tall flagpole on the field in front of the chorus an immense gleaming white Olympic flag with its five intertwined rings is flung to the afternoon breeze.

As the last notes of the Hymn die away the musical rhythm is carried on by the beat of wings, and from a flag-bedecked enclosure hidden in midfield, hundreds of doves take to the air, swing thrice above the athletes in ever-widening circles, making a last wheeling turn around the Olympic Torch, and then dispersing in all directions to carry the message of the Opening of the Games of the Xth Olympiad.

Murmurs of awe and admiration break into cheers and applause.

The announcer is heard again, introducing Dr. Robert Gordon Sproul,

President of the University of California, who delivers an inspiring dedicatory address and benediction, followed by a hymn rendered by the band and chorus.

The voice of the announcer sounds again. It is introducing Lieutenant George C. Calnan, of the United States Olympic Team, who will take the Olympic Oath.

A tall figure, erect and military, ascends the rostrum on the field as a hush spreads over the audience. He grasps the American flag with his left hand and raises his right to the sky.

All over the field the athletes raise their right hands.

Then, in a loud clear voice, come Lieutenant Calnan's words:

"We swear that we will take part in the Olympic Games in loyal competition, respecting the regulations which govern them and desirous of participating in them in the true spirit of sportsmanship for the honor of our country and for the glory of sport."

An inspiring pronouncement, sounding the keynote of the Games. It brings to a climax the Opening Ceremony exactly on scheduled time. Thousands in the audience who had entered the Stadium two hours previously with only a hazy understanding of the Olympic doctrine and ideals, have caught the Olympic spirit whole-heartedly, through the impressive ritual of the ceremony.

Once more the voice of the Chorus is raised in song. It is the Recessional — "Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet, Lest we forget, lest we forget." The great Chorus seems to lift the audience heavenward on its voice.

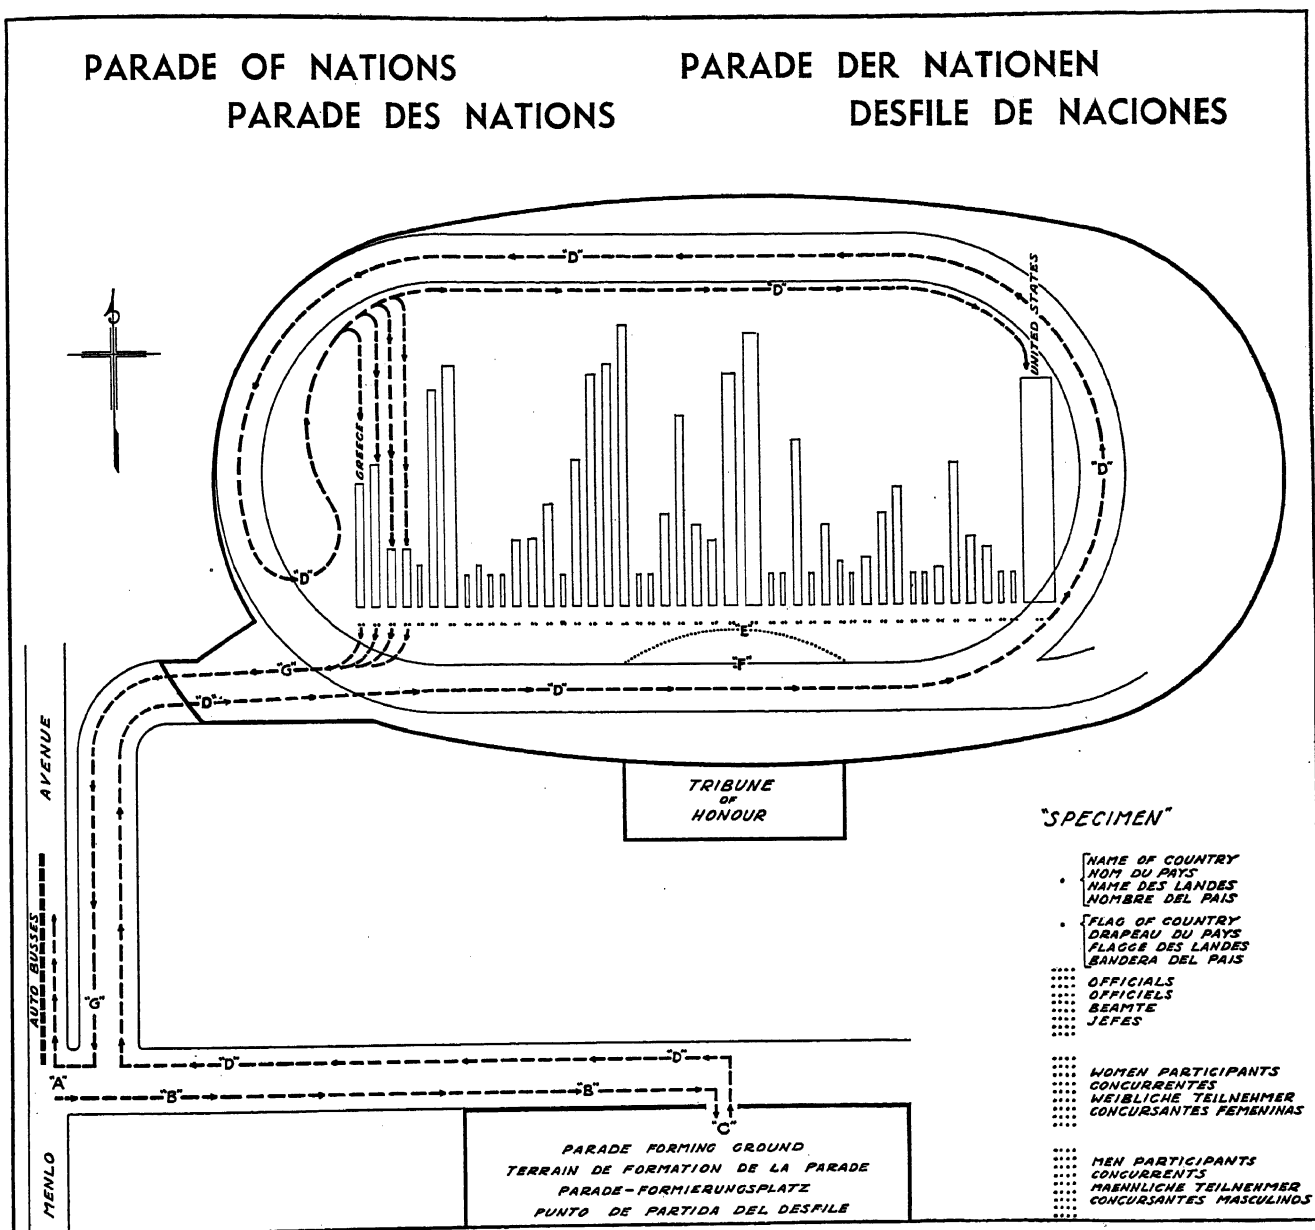

Many an eye is dimmed with tears.

The exit march of the athletes commences immediately after the Recessional. The announcer requests that the audience remain seated for ten minutes after the last athlete has left the field in order that all contestants may be enabled to return to their quarters without interference from the traffic following the simultaneous departure of a hundred thousand people from the Stadium.

The Band renders appropriate music and, led by the Chorus, the vast audience joins in the singing, continuing until assured by the announcer that all the athletes are safely out of the traffic and well on their way.

Truly a magnificent demonstration of the hold the Olympic spirit has secured, in the space of two hours, on a vast audience. That it was no temporary impression was evidenced many times in the following two weeks when the spectators demonstrated a spirit of international goodwill and sportsmanship which would have been an inspiration to the good Baron de Coubertin.

The Opening Ceremony had become history — but there lingered in the great amphitheatre a spiritual atmosphere such as must still hover over the ruins of ancient Olympia.

DETAIL OF ORGANIZATION — OPENING CEREMONY

Explanatory Note: Members of the Press, Olympic officials, and spectators in general who witnessed the Opening Ceremony have been generous in their praise of the smoothness and perfection of organization evidenced by the clocklike precision with which the beautiful ceremony was unfolded. In February of 1932 the script, time table, executive personnel, and individual cue sheets were completed and every executive given his detailed instructions for this important event, months in advance, and there were no subsequent changes. In the succeeding pages this document is reproduced in its original form in order to give the reader a peek at the machinery which was operating behind the scenes and upon which the successful presentation of this important event of the Games rested.

to show location of teams when they arrive, and will help the Musical Director put the flags and banners in place, according to alphabetical order of Nations in parade, with guards on same.

TRANSPORTATION MANAGER

Will be responsible to have necessary number of busses lined up at Village and get same loaded and started in four or six units, a minute or so apart, with police escort, to arrive at Olympic Stadium at 1:45 P. M. — all there not later than 2:00 P. M., the busses to unload at Menlo entrance of athletes' driveway, and park on Menlo. (Possibly seventy busses will be needed.)

PHASE II — PRINCIPLE OF OPERATION

SPORTS DIRECTOR

The Sports Director will give the "start and stop" by telephone on each item of the ceremony time table that requires same; certain items, like the arrival of the Presidential party, etc., being automatic and the timeliness of these automatic items, whether behind or ahead of schedule, will require him to retard or advance the controllable items. The Sports Director will do "key" announcing on loudspeaker.

TELEPHONE SETUP

House phone, switchboard in the Sports Director's department, with stations to scoreboard, Coliseum office, north office, Coliseum box, field manager's platform, band leader, Athletic building.

LOUDSPEAKER MICROPHONE

Central microphone in the Sports Director's department, branch mikes in main arch, Presidential loge and speaker's rostrum on field, with cut out switches for the three branches at the Sports Director's station.

Loudspeaker crew will have a man at each branch mike with telephone to their head man sitting with the Sports Director at central loudspeaker microphone in order to close the Sports Director's mike and open mikes through from branch stations and to close latter and okey the Sports Director back into central microphone.

NEWSREELS

Newsreels will be set up to catch arrival of Presidential party at main arch, with mikes on same pedestal with loudspeaker mike for introductions. These newsreels can thereafter shoot field views from Peristyle floor, but will not follow Presidential party to loge. They may go to points on field, to be designated later, if they have suit case portables.

Special newsreel set up at Presidential loge, with mikes on same pedestal with loudspeaker mike. These newsreel outfits must remain out of sight at this point until show is over, after taking arrival of official party and opening of Games remarks, or shoot field from nearby points to be designated by the Manager.

Field Newsreels will take actions at field speaker's rostrum, with mikes on same pedestal with loudspeaker mike.

TRACK AND FIELD ATHLETICS — MEN

THREE hundred and thirty men, representing thirty-four nations, took part in the twenty-three events comprising the Athletics programme of the Games of the Xth Olympiad.

When the final event was concluded and the champion stood at attention on the Victory pedestal while the flag of his country was unfurled over Olympic Stadium, twenty new Olympic or World's records had been established.

The responsibility for the many record-breaking performances has been generally attributed to a combination of circumstances, including the fine mental and physical condition of the athletes due to pleasant surroundings in the Olympic Village, the adequate training facilities, favorable weather conditions, excellent Track and Field facilities, and to the enthusiastic and sportsmanlike attitude of the spectators.

In addition, the quality of performance of the athletes was improved because many of the tiring preliminary heats could be eliminated. This was made possible, first, by the ruling of the Olympic Congress, Berlin, 1930, reducing the number of entries in each sport from each country from four to three, and second, by the factor of the expense and time involved in making the long trip to Los Angeles, which resulted in the teams representing the nations being limited and necessarily more carefully selected.

All of the events in Athletics, with the exception of the Marathon and the 50,000 Metre Walk, were held in Olympic Stadium. The Marathon started and finished within the Stadium. It had been hoped originally to start and finish the 50,000 Metre Walk also in the Stadium, but owing to the difficult traffic conditions it was found impracticable to attempt a complete closing of the necessary highways for more than one event. However, another course was found which proved entirely satisfactory.

Existing Olympic records, if any, escaped being shattered in only three cases. The Hammer Throw, the Broad Jump, and the High Jump records alone were not surpassed. In the Marathon and the 3000 Metre Steeplechase events, Olympic records have not been recognized because of the difference in the conditions of the courses over which these events have been contested in successive Olympiads. In each case, however, the best previous record made in the Olympic Games was exceeded. In the 50,000 Metre Walk, the time made was a record due to the fact that this was the first time that this event had ever been contested in the Games.

New Olympic records were set in every Track event and in five out of the eight Field events. Seven out of the seventeen new Olympic records were new World's records. In addition, three World's records were equalled, and in one other event, the 200 Metre, while there is no recognized World record for this when run around one turn, the time recorded was far below the best time ever made under similar conditions and was fully equivalent to a new World's record.

However, merely to state that the best previous Olympic performances were exceeded in twenty events out of twenty-three, is to give an incomplete picture of the record-breaking character of the competition, for many of these records were broken not alone once, but several times, and by several different individuals. Only when this fact is taken into consideration is it possible to gain a correct and full impression of the high quality of the competition.

In the 100 Metre Run, for example, the previous Olympic record of 10.6 seconds was equalled by three contestants, a Japanese, a South African, and an American sprinter, was then lowered to 10.5 seconds by sprinters from the Argentine and Germany, and was finally lowered to 10.4 seconds and then to 10.3 seconds by the ultimate winner, Tolan of the United States. Thus the previous 100 Metre Olympic record was tied three times and broken four times, during the course of the Xth Olympiad, no less than six different sprinters from five different countries participating in the shattering of the old mark.

The existing Olympic record of 21.6 seconds for the 200 Metres was beaten on seven different occasions by the winners of heats or finals, in many of these races the men finishing second, and sometimes third, also surpassing the previous mark. As in the case of the 100 Metres, the athletes of several countries succeeded in breaking the old mark.

It was not unusual for three or four individuals to break the existing Olympic record in events both on the track and in the field, and even the World record in the 4 x 400 Metre Relay was broken three times. The World record for the Decathlon was exceeded not only by the winner of the event but by the second place winner as well. It is doubtful, in the history of Track and Field athletics, that so many former records were ever equalled or so many new ones made.

There was perhaps no more spectacular performance than in the great Marathon run of 26 miles and 385 yards, in which the runners, after making approximately two turns of the track in the Stadium, disappeared from view, and then, on their return, re-entered from a tunnel and ran about 300 metres to the finish. So close was the competition in this event that before Zabala, the Argentine winner, had crossed the finish line, there were three other runners on the track, and the first three men to finish all exceeded the best previous Olympic Marathon record.

A guarantee of the correctness of these many wonderful performances was made doubly sure by the fact that all courses had been carefully measured and surveyed by the Sports Technical Department, and had then been checked and certified by properly qualified surveyors of the Los Angeles City and County governments. Coupled with the accuracy of the course measurements was the certainty of correct timing. Not only had the stop watches used in timing all Olympic events been specially examined and certified by a qualified observatory, but a double check by two electrical timing devices, one operated by hand and the other by a camera, made correct timing an assured fact.

In these days of hectic competition, the space of four years intervening between celebrations of the Games makes it increasingly difficult for champions of one Olympiad to return during another and again defeat the world. Despite this fact, six men who won seven Track and Field championships at Amsterdam in 1928 returned to seek victory again in the same events at Los Angeles in 1932, and in addition to these, two veterans who had won gold medals in previous Games participated. Thus winners of nine previous Olympic championships were competitors at the Los Angeles Games.

Of the defending title-holders from 1928, only one was able to retain his championship, Dr. O'Callaghan of Ireland, whose victory in the Hammer Throw was achieved on his final toss. All other title-holders fell by the wayside under the stress of competition.

Percy Williams of Canada, whose sensational double victory in the Sprints had been one of the outstanding achievements of the 1928 Games, entered both Sprint events at Los Angeles. In the first round he ran third in a 10.8 seconds heat, which incidentally equalled his winning time at Amsterdam, and again ran third in the second round, which was won in the new Olympic time of 10.4 seconds. In the semi-final, however, he could do no better than fourth, and then decided that his lack of form made it useless to compete in the longer sprint and therefore withdrew.

A similar fate befell Harri Larva of Finland, Olympic 1500 Metre champion in 1928. After barely qualifying in fourth place in his heat, Larva was unable to withstand the whirlwind rush of the younger athletes on the last lap of the finals and finished far back in the ruck. Paavo Yrjölä of Finland put up a brave struggle in the Decathlon, but his score of 7688.09 points, which was considerably below his winning mark at Amsterdam, was of no avail against his younger opponents, two of whom were able to exceed the previous World's record. Yrjölä finished sixth.

A BUSY VETERAN, LORD BURGHLEY, 1928 OLYMPIC CHAMPION, WHO PLACED IN THREE EVENTS IN 1932

Lord David Burghley of Great Britain, who scored the first track victory of the Amsterdam Games, did his best to repeat in the same event, the exhausting 400 Metre Hurdles. He coasted in nicely in his heat, in second place, and ran a well-judged race in the finals, being strongly in second place over the last hurdle but succumbing to the last-minute rush of his rivals in the final forty yards.

Two of the most interesting performances of the Games were made by champions of former years. F. Morgan Taylor of the United States, Olympic champion in the 400 Metre Hurdles at Paris in 1924 and a good third in 1928 at Amsterdam, reached the finals in this event for the third time in succession and performed the remarkable feat of nosing out his 1928 conqueror, Lord Burghley, for third place in the finals.

Another veteran to perform remarkably was Ville Pörhölä of Finland, Olympic champion in the Shot Put at Antwerp in 1920. Pörhölä staged his "comeback" in 1932 in another event, the Hammer Throw, and his toss of 171 feet, 6¼ inches, was not only better than O'Callaghan's winning throw at Amsterdam but was good enough to lead the Los Angeles competition up to the very final toss, when O'Callaghan, with a mighty effort worthy of a great champion, exceeded it by about five feet.

Perhaps even more noteworthy than Burghley's effort in the 400 Metre Hurdles was the fact that this great athlete participated in two other events, taking fifth place in the 110 Metre Hurdles and running a very fine lap on the British 4 x 400 Metre Relay team which took second place to the United States and broke the existing World's record in doing so.

The United States was victorious, as at Amsterdam, in the 4 x 100 Metre and 4 x 400 Metre Relays, Frank Wykoff being the only veteran of the 1928 squad to run in 1932.

From the standpoint of victories in the Track and Field events, the United States was outstanding, winning eleven championships. Finland won three championships, Great Britain two, Ireland two, and Japan, Argentine, Canada, Italy, and Poland, each one.

The United States, with its complete entry in all events, likewise was outstanding in the winning of second, third, fourth, fifth, and sixth places, but Finland, Great Britain, Japan, Sweden, Germany, Canada, and Italy also placed a number of athletes in the first six places.

Performances of some of the countries with very limited entry lists were equally remarkable. Ireland, with only four entries, won two first places and one fourth. Czechoslovakia, with only three entries, won a third place medal. Holland, with only two entries, won a fifth place. Latvia, with only two entries, won a second place, and her other entrant was third in the Decathlon when an injury to his ankle forced his retirement. The Philippines had but one entrant and he took third place in his event. Poland, with only four entries, won one first place. South Africa, with only three entrants, won a fourth, a fifth, and a sixth place. The showing of these smaller countries was indicative of the high quality of the few athletes they were able to send to the Games.

History repeated itself in Los Angeles when the only double winner of Athletics proved to be a sprinter, in this case Eddie Tolan of the United States. This honor may be shared to some degree, as was also the case at Amsterdam, with the 400 Metre winner, William A. Carr of the United States, who also captured a gold medal by running the final lap on the winning 4 x 400 Metre Relay team.

While double winners were scarce, many other athletes placed high in more than one event, a fact the more remarkable when it is considered that the general quality of the competition at Los Angeles was extremely high. To place in more than one event not only required most unusual ability but magnificent stamina as well.

The case of Lord Burghley has already been cited as one who placed in the first six in three different events. The 1928 400 Metre Hurdle champion ran three races at Los Angeles to finish fourth in the 400 Metre Hurdles, three more to take fifth in the 110 Metre Hurdles, and two more as a member of the British 4 x 400 Metre Relay team which ran a strong second. This is a remarkable feat of endurance as all these races are difficult and the competition was strong.

Still another veteran of the 1928 Games covered himself with glory in the person of Luigi Facelli of Italy. Facelli ran three races to place fifth in the 400 Metre Hurdles, two more to take third in the 4 x 100 Metre Relay, and two more to finish sixth in the 4 x 400 Metre Relay, a total of seven races in eight days.

Arthur Jonath of Germany exceeded the performances of Burghley and Facelli, at least as far as the number of appearances is concerned although his races were not so long. He ran four races to take third in the 100 Metres, four more to win fourth place in the 200 Metres, and two more to win second in the 4 x 100 Metre Relay, a total of ten races.

Just which athlete had the hardest task to place high in the Los Angeles Games in several events will always be a matter of debate, and one which can never be settled for the reason that it is a question of opinion, but Canadians will always consider the performance of Alex Wilson as the high spot of individual valor, closely followed by his countryman, likewise an Olympic veteran, Phillip Edwards.

Wilson's feat in finishing a yard back of Thomas Hampson of Great Britain in World record-breaking time in the 800 Metres, then taking a good third in the World record 400 Metres, and topping this off with a lap in the 4 x 400 Metre Relay race in which the first two teams, at least, broke the World's record, was a most astonishing feat of speed and endurance. He ran four races in the 400 Metres, two in the 800 Metres, and two in the Relay.

Phillip Edwards did not run as many races, but two of them were longer. The slender negro runner set the pace in both the 800 Metre and 1500 Metre Runs, and finished a good third in each, topping this performance off with a fast lap in the 4 x 400 Metre Relay. Edwards ran two races in each event.

One Japanese athlete demonstrating astonishing all-round ability was Chuhei Nambu, who, after disappointing himself with a third place in the Broad Jump, in which he is the holder of the World's record, entered the Hop, Step and Jump and set a new World's record to win that event, topping off his Olympic appearance with a fine lap on the Japanese 4 x 100 Metre Relay team which took fifth place.

Athletes who placed high in more than one event were quite numerous, some of the performances being sensational in the extreme and others being equally noteworthy but generally overlooked in the excitement over the victors.

Ralph Metcalfe and George Simpson, both of the United States, were able to place well in both Sprints. Metcalfe finished so fast in the 100 Metres that many thought he had won the race, but he got a poor start in the 200 Metres and could do no better than third after his close second in the shorter race had encouraged many to believe that he would win the longer Sprint. Simpson was a good fourth in the shorter race but found the curve to his liking and took second in the 200 Metres. Each of these runners, like Tolan, had to run eight races.

William J. Walters of South Africa, a long-striding runner, took sixth in the 200 Metres and fourth in the 400 Metres, and Yoshioka of Japan, whose speed for 50 metres was positively breath-taking, won sixth in the 100 Metres, brought his 4 x 100 Metre Relay team in fifth in that event, and also ran two races in the 200 Metres before being eliminated, bringing his total number of Olympic races up to eight.

Thomas Hampson of Great Britain, whose collapse after his record-breaking 800 Metres looked serious for a time, showed his recuperative ability by coming back and running a strong 400 metres on the British Relay team which broke the World's 4 x 400 Metre record in taking second place. Donald Finlay of Great Britain, whose third place in the 110 Metre Hurdles was one of the surprises of the Games, ran a lap on the British 4 x 100 Metre Relay team which took sixth place.

Long-distance runners who doubled up were, like the sprinters, much in evidence. Volmari Iso-Hollo of Finland, after being outsprinted by the sensational Pole, Kusocinski, in the 10,000 Metres and forced to take second place, came back in the 3000 Metre Steeplechase to win a notable victory.

Four runners from as many different countries doubled up in the 5000 Metre and 10,000 Metre Runs to capture third, fourth, fifth, and sixth places in each event. Lauri Virtanen of Finland was third in both races, and John Savidan of New Zealand fourth in both races, while Max Syring of Germany and Jean-Gunnar Lindgren of Sweden staged a duel of their own with Lindgren finishing fifth and Syring sixth in the 5000 Metres and their positions being reversed in the longer event.

E. Svensson of Sweden was a strong second in the Hop, Step and Jump, and surprised the most sanguine of his countrymen with fourth in the Broad Jump, while Hans Sievert of Germany scored twice with fifth in the Decathlon and sixth in the Shot Put.

The official time for all Track events was that obtained by the timers, appointed by the International Athletic Federation, by means of certified stop watches. Two auxiliary electrical timing devices were used for experimental purposes. Both of these were started by an attachment on the starter's gun. One was stopped by hand at the time the runners hit the tape. The other was provided with a motion picture camera which photographed the runner at the tape and the dial of the time indicator simultaneously. The following are examples of the comparative results obtained by the official timers, by the hand electrical device, and by the camera device.

TRACK AND FIELD ATHLETICS

WOMEN

COMPETITIONS in the Track and Field Athletics for Women, which were included in the programme of the 1932 Olympic Games, for the second time in modern Olympic history, brought a total of 54 actual participants from 11 different countries. The United States, with a full entry list in all events, had the largest number of entries with 15, while Australia, Mexico, New Zealand, and South Africa, had a single entrant each.

As was the case in the men's division, the quality of the competition was exceedingly high. In the four events which had been contested at Amsterdam, the Olympic records were shattered not by the winner alone but by numerous other contestants. It is sufficient to say that in each one of the six events a new World's record was set.

In the Javelin Throw the first three placed athletes all exceeded the previous World's record. In the 100 Metres, after two other women had tied the Olympic record, the ultimate winner set a new World's mark, and proved that this was no accident by making the same time in her semi-final and final races as well.

In the High Jump the first three women exceeded the Olympic record and the first two exceeded the existing World's record. The same thing exactly took place in the Discus Throw. In the 80 Metre Hurdles the World's record was first equalled and then beaten, and in the Relay both the first and second teams exceeded the existing World's record.

Peculiarly enough, not a single 1928 champion returned to the Games to defend her title, and the records indicate they would have had difficulty in retaining their championships if they had come.

Outstanding among the women athletes was Mildred Didrikson of the United States, who entered in three events and broke the World's record in each. She broke the World's record on her first throw in the Javelin contest and won that event. In the Hurdles she tied the World's record in her heat and broke it in winning the finals, a race which, by the way, was considered as sharing the distinction with the men's 100 Metres of being the closest finish of the Games. In the High Jump Miss Didrikson jumped as high as the winner, being tied for first place, but she was ruled out in the jump-off for illegal jumping.

Tilly Fleischer of Germany took third place in the Javelin and fourth place in the Discus Throw, and ran a lap on the Relay team which took sixth place, thus placing well in three events. Wilhelmina Von Bremen of the United States won third place in the 100 Metres and ran the final lap on the winning Relay team, and Hilda Strike of Canada took second in the 100 Metres and ran a lap on the Relay team which took second honors. Annette Rogers of the United States ran on the winning Relay team and took sixth in the High Jump. Ellen Braumüller of Germany took second in the Javelin and ran on the Relay team which finished sixth. Marie Dollinger of Germany won fourth in the 100 Metres and was on the German Relay team which finished sixth. Stanisława Walasiewicz of Poland won the 100 Metres and took sixth in the Discus Throw. Marjorie Clark of South Africa was third in the Hurdles and fifth in the High Jump. Violet Webb of Great Britain was fifth in the Hurdles and ran on the British Relay team which won third place.

The United States won five out of the six championships, the other title going to Miss Walasiewicz of Poland.

WEIGHTLIFTING

THE competitions in Weightlifting had the distinction of being the first sport contests to be decided during the 1932 Olympic Games, championships in two weight divisions being settled on the evening of the Opening Day.

All the Weightlifting events were held in the Olympic Auditorium, the contestants standing on a special platform raised above the floor in full view of the spectators. The system of competition was the same as that used for the first time at Amsterdam.

The general average of performance has never been better. In every weight division the previous Olympic record was either equalled or surpassed, and in the Middleweight and Heavyweight divisions the three first contestants all bettered the lifts of the 1928 champions.

Champions from previous Olympiads were much in evidence in the competitions, but were, without exception, unable to retain their titles despite the fact that in most cases they equalled or surpassed the performances which had won their titles for them.

Only in the Featherweight and Light-heavyweight divisions were the 1928 champions absent, and in two divisions the 1924 champions also participated. In the Lightweight division Hans Haas of Austria, who tied for the championship in 1928, and Pierino Gabetti of Italy, 1924 champion, both participated, Haas taking second place and Gabetti fourth.

In the Middleweight division Roger François of France, the 1928 champion, and Carlo Galimberti of Italy, the 1924 title holder, both participated. François, although he had injured himself in training, succeeded in equalling the record which won him the championship in 1928 but placed fourth at Los Angeles. Galimberti's surprisingly good performance won second place for him.

The Heavyweight division was the most closely contested of all and in the estimation of the Federation officials was outstanding in respect both to strength and technique. Joseph Strassberger of Germany, the 1928 champion, pitted his experience against two splendid athletes from Czechoslovakia. While he placed third, he exceeded his winning performance at Amsterdam.

In the opinion of Jules Rosset, president of the Federation in charge of the events, it was quite obvious that tremendous strides have been made in the sport of Weightlifting. This was evidenced by the improved performance of all the contestants. More attention to technique would, in Mr. Rosset's opinion, result in even better performances. He stated his belief that both Pšenička of Czechoslovakia and Olsen of Denmark, who finished second in their respective divisions, clearly possessed superior strength to the winners, failing of victory only through lack of technical skill. He also noted the fact that Hostin of France, Light-heavy-weight champion, would have surpassed the record even farther had he not failed to comply with one of the technicalities in the "Two Hands Military Press."

France, with three Olympic championships in five events, was outstanding in the competition, the two remaining titles going to Czechoslovakia and Germany. The United States, entering a team for the first time in this sport, won two third places. It was the judgment of Mr. Rosset that the American contestants showed sufficient native ability to warrant their placing much higher in future Games.

FENCING

MORE than one hundred of the finest fencers of the world, both men and women, competed in Los Angeles for supremacy at the Games of the Xth Olympiad.

The great hall of the Armory of the 160th Infantry, California National Guard, had been transformed into a "Salle d'Armes" unequalled in Olympic history. Four strips of cork linoleum, one hundred and seventy feet long and six feet wide, and spaced thirteen feet apart, formed the "field of honor."

The public responded enthusiastically, interested throngs occupying every available seat, morning and afternoon, for the full two weeks of the competitions. Large scoreboards at each end of the strips kept the audience advised of the progress of the events.

Sixteen nations competed in the Fencing competitions as follows: Argentina, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Germany, Great Britain, Holland, Hungary, Italy, Mexico, Poland, Sweden, Switzerland, and the United States.

The events consisted of Individual Foils for men and the same for women, Foils Team, Individual Sword, Sword Team, Individual Sabre, and Sabre Team. The Polish fencers competed only in Sabre, those of Sweden in Sword, those of Hungary in Sword and Sabre only, while the fencers of the other nations took part in all of the events.

In addition to the regular contests of the Olympic Fencing championships, the Sword event of the Modern Pentathlon was held under the direction of the officials in charge. Twenty-five men competed in this event, which was fought as a round robin in which each fencer in turn met all the others. The event lasted an entire day.

The various Fencing competitions were divided into preliminaries, semi-finals and finals, depending upon the number of entries in each.

France and Italy reversed their positions in Individual and Team Foils and Swords. At Amsterdam in 1928 France won the Individual champions in these two weapons, whereas the Team championships were won by Italy. At Los Angeles in 1932 Gustavo Marzi and Giancarlo Cornaggia-Medici of Italy took the Individual championships while France triumphed in the Team championships.

Hungary, with an imposing team, won both the Individual and Team championships in Sabre, repeating their Olympic victory of 1928 at Amsterdam, George Piller winning the Individual title.

The remarkable progress which had been made since the 1928 Games by the fencers of the United States was notable. Not only did they take second place in the Individual Foils, but they also scored third place in Foils Team and Sword Team. These results mark the interest in and the progress of the sport of Fencing in the United States.

In the Women's Individual Foil event, the fair fencer from Austria, Ellen Preis, triumphed over a very strong field in splendid fashion, Great Britain placing second and Hungary third. At Amsterdam the victory had gone to Germany's Helene Mayer, who was fifth at Los Angeles.

The conduct of the Fencing events was in charge of the International Federation of Fencing. The president of this organization, Eugène Empeyta of Geneva, was present and officiated for the first week of the games, when the death of his father called him back to Switzerland. In his absence, George van Rossem of Holland, former president of the Fencing Federation, presided.

There was some difficulty experienced in securing capable directors and members of jury, due to the fact that almost all of those experienced were themselves contestants. In Europe many men capable for this duty are available, but there are few Americans similarly qualified. This difficulty, however, was overcome by the splendid co-operation of the fencers themselves.

One of the features of the Fencing events was the entire lack of friction and of all conduct of an unsportsmanlike character. While the hall resounded constantly with the voices of the contestants, these were the cries of combat and not of dissension.

In the semi-final round, Mexico was eliminated in Pool No. 1 by Italy and Belgium. In Pool No. 2, Denmark lost to United States on points and then defaulted to France, thus moving France into the finals without having fought a match in the preliminaries. This placed four teams in the finals, namely Belgium, Italy, France and United States.

THE CHAMPIONS SCORE A GOAL WHILE PRACTICING

FIELD HOCKEY

THE Field Hockey competition in the Games of the Xth Olympiad was limited to three teams of which two, Japan and the United States, were newcomers to Olympic competition in this sport, and the third, India, was the defending champion.

The Indian team, as at Amsterdam, displayed an overwhelming superiority with a group of players who were individual stars at their own positions yet had the uncanny ability to submerge their individualities at the proper time in the interests of first-class team play.

Japan unquestionably provided the surprise of the tournament with a dashing team, several of whose members were individual performers of highest rank. Playing against India in the opening game, they succeeded in scoring against the champions, a feat no team was able to accomplish at Amsterdam, and against the United States they showed magnificent form. Field Hockey has been played in Japan for many years and this background of experience is of great value in international play.

The United States, entering a team for the first time, made a creditable showing, playing well against Japan and scoring a goal against India, although overwhelmingly defeated.

Three Hockey games were played, all in Olympic Stadium, and the spectators greatly enjoyed the contests despite the obvious superiority of one of the teams in each contest.

THE WINNING TEAMS WITH THEIR CAPTAINS ON THE VICTORY STAND

CYCLING

THE Cycling events of the Xth Olympiad were extremely well contested. The board track at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena proved to be well designed and constructed and the new record made in the 1000 Metre Time Trial is evidence thereof.

The Road Race, while on a surface unfamiliar to all the contestants, was ideal from the standpoint of smoothness and lack of obstructions, and unusually good time was made by all the contestants in this event. Careful regulation of traffic through the services of hundreds of police enabled the participants to travel the distance of 100 kilometres, or 62 miles, without interruption or accident.

In the Track events, first-place championships were evenly divided between four nations. Gray of Australia won the 1000 Metre Time Trial in new record time, Jacobus Van Egmond of Holland was victorious in the 1000 Metre Scratch Race, Maurice Perrin and Louis Chaillot carried the tricolor of France to victory in the 2000 Metre Tandems, and the sensational Italian team won their traditional victory in the 4000 Metre Pursuit Race.

In the Road Race the Italians made their outstanding performance, taking first, second, fourth, and seventh places — a remarkably even showing. A. Pavesi of Italy, the individual winner, was 1 minute, 16 seconds, faster than his nearest competitor, but the second, third, and fourth men were within half a minute of each other while less than five minutes separated the first nine to finish.

H. Hansen of Denmark, winner in the Road Race in 1928, found the pace over this shorter route too hot for him and could do no better than twelfth. Two of his teammates, however, finished fifth and ninth to give second place in the team standings to their country. Sweden had two contestants among the leaders in third and eighth places, these, with a third entrant finishing twentieth, giving Sweden third place in the team competition.

Eight full teams were entered in the Road Race as well as individual contestants from Hungary, Mexico, and New Zealand, a total of thirty-three entrants finishing the race.

WRESTLING

THE programme of Wrestling competitions in Free-style and Greco-Roman style extended over a period of one week and proved to be very popular. Amateur wrestling was something new to the local audiences, the Greco-Roman style never having been seen at all in the western United States, and the amateur rules for the Free-style being so unlike those of professional wrestling that the entire sport may be said to have been an innovation to people of Los Angeles.

Fortunately, the Federation in charge of the Wrestling events took cognizance of this situation, and one of its officials explained to the spectators many of the technicalities with which they were obviously unfamiliar. The result was that the audiences soon learned to await explanations and took them in fine spirit.

The Olympic Auditorium, in which the Wrestling competitions were held, gave the spectators a fine view of all the events, which took place on a specially constructed platform with sloping sides in the center of the vast building.

Previous Olympic champions had a rather hard time of it in the Free-style championships. Johan Richthoff of Sweden, winner of the Heavyweight championship at Amsterdam in 1928, retained his title, but Käpp of Estonia, 1928 Lightweight champion, was eliminated in the second round of his division and Thure Sjöstedt of Sweden, 1928 Light-Heavyweight champion, was beaten for this title by Mehringer of the United States. H. Pihlajamäki of Finland, winner of the Bantamweight championship in 1924, was eliminated in the Lightweight division at Los Angeles.

In the Greco-Roman style, however, the former champions were more successful. Väinö Kokkinen of Finland defended his Middleweight championship and was again crowned champion, while R. Svensson of Sweden, Heavyweight champion in 1928, entered and won the Light-Heavyweight championship at Los Angeles.

Most striking of all performances by previous Olympic champions, however, was that of Carl Westergren of Sweden, Olympic Middleweight champion in 1920, and Olympic Light-Heavyweight champion in 1924, who rounded out his Olympic career with a fine victory in the Heavyweight division. Westergren's record of winning three Olympic championships in three different divisions is without parallel.

Of equal interest was the performance of Ivar Johansson of Sweden, who performed the remarkable feat of capturing two Olympic championships in different styles of wrestling. This active individual won the championship in the Middleweight division in Free-style and the championship in the Welterweight division in Greco-Roman.

Ninety entrants representing eighteen countries participated in the 1932 Olympic Wrestling bouts. Of these, forty-nine competed in Free-style, making this the first Olympic meeting at which Free-style entries outnumbered those for the Greco-Roman style.

In all, one hundred and twenty-four matches, including one re-wrestle ordered by the Jury of Appeal, were contested, and of these, thirty-three in the Free-style were decided by falls, and in the Greco-Roman style twenty falls were gained. Matches decided by decision of the Ground Jury numbered seventy-one.

Sweden's predominance in the Continental style is indicated by the gaining of four first places and one third by that country. Germany, Italy, and Finland each secured one first place. Hungary, with a team of five, had the unusual experience of not being placed in the Greco-Roman but gained two seconds and a third in the Free-style.

In the Free-style type, the most prominent showing was made by the United States team, which accounted for three first and two second places. Sweden was a good runner-up with two firsts, one second, and two thirds. The remaining first places went to Finland and France respectively.

It may be noted that three of the four withdrawals on account of injuries during the Greco-Roman wrestling were of wrestlers who had previously taken part in the Free-style events.

Japan had entrants in the Greco-Roman wrestling for the first time in Olympic history.

The refereeing and judging were of a high quality throughout and generally satisfying, fewer protests to the Jury of Appeal being entered than at any previous Olympic Wrestling. The competitions were conducted with smoothness, despatch, and punctuality.

Olympic wrestling matches are scored as follows: The results of the bouts are counted on "bad points," that is, the competitor having won by fall will receive 0 bad points, while his opponent will be given 3 bad points. If the bout is decided by the vote of the Jury (decision), the winner receives 1 bad point, while his opponent receives 3 bad points.

The competitor having accumulated 5 bad points is eliminated, and the competitors who have been eliminated in the same round are regarded as eliminated at the same time. If it happens that candidates for the third place have been eliminated with equal bad points in the same round, they are paired, if they have not yet met each other, for the third place.

In accordance with the above scoring system as adopted by the International Wrestling Federation, it is possible for a man to win all of his bouts, by vote of the Jury (decision), and still be eliminated from the competition. The controlling system is based entirely on the award of "bad points" for defeats or victories by judges' decisions.

The case of Clodfelter, United States Lightweight wrestler in the Free-style competition, is a good example of how this scoring system works. In the first round, he defeated Pihlajamäki of Finland by decision, giving him 1 bad point. In the second round, he lost to Klarén of Sweden by a fall, giving him 3 bad points. In the third round, he defeated Kárpáti of Hungary by a fall scoring 0 bad points. The judges ruled for a re-match with Kárpáti in which Clodfelter won by decision, giving him another bad point. Thus his total of 5 bad points eliminated him from further competition.

THE CHAMPION'S COUNTRYMEN CELEBRATE HIS VICTORY

MODERN PENTATHLON

THE Modern Pentathlon consisted of five widely-differing events, a Cross Country Ride, Fencing with the Duelling Sword, Pistol Shooting, Swimming, and a Cross Country Run. Competitors were ranked, for the complete event, according to the sum of places won by them in each of the five sports. The victor was the competitor with the smallest total points.

A total of twenty-five athletes representing eleven different countries participated in the event, and it was unquestionably the most keenly contested of all Modern Pentathlon competitions in the history of the Olympic Games. The general average ability of the contestants was unusually high and the various tests were genuine trials of real ability.

There were at least a dozen first-class all-round athletes in the Modern Pentathlon competitions. Sweden's time-honored supremacy in the event was continued at Los Angeles, but only after a spirited challenge. This country entered a veteran team which had been chosen after strenuous trials. It included Lindman, winner at Paris in 1924 and runner-up at Amsterdam, Thofelt, the Amsterdam winner, and Count Oxenstierna, a new contestant.

The ultimate winner, Oxenstierna, was victorious because of real all-round ability. He was not able to place first in a single event of the five but finished lower than seventh in only one event, Fencing. The defending champion, Thofelt, was able to finish first in both Fencing and Swimming, but weakness in other events, particularly in Riding and Running, brought him down to fourth place.

Lindman, though handicapped in his training by an injury sustained on shipboard, put up a splendid average performance to win second place, only his unusually poor score in Shooting preventing him from winning the title. Mayo, the American who surprisingly led the field up to the last event, did so by his excellence in the first three events on the programme, weakness in Swimming and Running costing him the lead.

The tests took place in the above order, one day being assigned to each. The competition was very close, with five entrants so nearly even at the end of four days that no advantage apparently was held by any of them.

Oxenstierna of Sweden, new to this event of the Games, proved himself a worthy runner on the final day and won the championship. Following in second place was his compatriot, Lindman, who has not placed below second in three Olympiads. In third place came Mayo of the United States, a much-improved veteran of the Games of 1928.

Cross Country Ride. The length of the course was 4888 metres, and the time allowed for covering the distance was 10 minutes, 51.8 seconds. There were fourteen obstacles, requiring fifteen jumps. The obstacles were as follows: 1, Brush piled on ground; 2, Post and rail fence; 3, Posts set on end in ground; 4, Bank and ditch; 5, Watering trough; 6, Post and rail fence; 7, Posts set on end in ground; 8, Ditch with leaning fence; 9, Plank fence; 10, Aiken fence; 11, Farm gate; 12, Worm fence; 13, Farm wagon; 14, Railroad crossing. Each of the obstacles, except Number 8, had a height of 1.10 metres. The ditch of Number 8 had a spread of 3.50 metres.

The course was laid over irregular ground with many small hills and valleys. The ground was very hard except that of the last thousand metres, which had been under cultivation and was better footing for the horses.

The horses were well trained army horses and an unusually even lot, but were, of course, unknown to the competitors and drawn by lot only twenty-five minutes before each man was to start. Starting was individual, at five-minute intervals, the first man leaving at 9:15 A.M. Each rider received 100 points at the start, from which all penalties were deducted.

Fencing — Duelling Sword. Competition in Fencing was with the Duelling Sword, one-touch matches. All competitors were placed in one pool, in which each fencer met every other fencer in turn, thereby dispensing entirely with the luck of the draw.

In this competition a win was scored as two points, and a loss meant zero. In case of a double touch, the points were divided, each fencer receiving one point.

Shooting — Pistol. This test consisted of twenty shots at a distance of twenty-five metres, in timed fire, the target being exposed for three seconds, then concealed for ten seconds, during which time a competitor could reload. The shots for record were preceded by two sighting shots. The target was a full-size silhouette of a man, its general color being blue with red lines dividing the target into zones of value from 10 down to 1.

The firing took place between the hours of 9:00 A.M. and 12:30 P.M. The contestants were sheltered, while the targets received the direct light of the morning sun from a point approximately over the right shoulder of the firer. There was no wind.

Each shot was fired at the command, "Fire," which command also caused the target to appear. Until the word "Fire," the pistol was required to point at the ground, with the butt of the weapon resting against the thigh of the firer.

Competitors were placed according to the number of hits scored by them. In case of a tie in number of hits, the competitor with the highest point score was placed ahead of those with whom he was tied. If tied in the number of points, the tie was resolved in accordance with the scores made in the groups of five shots, counting from the last.

Swimming — 300 Metre Free-style. In the Swimming phase of the Modern

PENTATHLON CONTESTANTS DURING THE FENCING PHASE

A STIFF UPHILL CLIMB IN THE EQUESTRIAN PHASE

Pentathlon, the competition was held in the same stadium as the other Olympic Swimming events. It consisted of a competition at a distance of 300 metres, free-style, the time of each competitor being taken in his heat. There was no final, but placing was made in accordance with the time made by each swimmer.

Cross Country Run. The Cross Country Run of the Modern Pentathlon was held at 9:00 A.M. on the course of the Sunset Fields Golf Club of Los Angeles. The distance was 4000 metres, slightly less than two-thirds of which was laid on the fairways of the golf course, and over and through several of the natural washes and gullies to be found on the course. The remainder involved the climbing of a very steep hill, to the level of the Olympic Village, thence down a narrow draw by a winding path and across a wide ditch to the Golf Club property again. The start and the finish were a short distance in front of the clubhouse.

ROUND ROBIN COMPETITION

FENCING—INDIVIDUAL SWORD

The 26 participants fenced among themselves in 1 pool only. They were divided into 4 groups: A and B, 7 fencers each, and C and D, 6 fencers each. The contestants fenced on 4 strips. First, the fencers of Group A fenced among themselves on 1 strip, the fencers of Group B on the second strip, etc., and then Group A met Group B as in the team pools but the bouts were conducted on 2 strips. In the meantime, Group C met Group D on the other two strips. Then Group A met Group C on one side and Group B met Group D on the other. Fencers of the same nationality were placed in the same group.

CHAMPION OLYMPIQUE
"ANGELITTA," UNITED STATES, INTERNATIONAL EIGHT METRE

YACHTING

THE Xth Olympiad Yachting events were raced in the Pacific Ocean directly off the Port of Los Angeles, over a course used for the past eight years in local yachting. This course was selected because of its suitability for wind conditions, its freedom from tides and swift currents, and the clearness of its waters, with the added advantage of offering spectators a full view from the Point Fermin headlands. Constant winds were assured as in this locality the trade wind comes up about mid-day, bringing with it a true westerly wind varying from eight to fifteen knots in velocity.

The course had been accurately and elaborately prepared for the contests. The United States Lighthouse Service located large Government buoys at the turning points, and the restricted area in the kelp beds under the lee of Point Fermin was staked out by the United States Navy Department. The course was efficiently and constantly patrolled by the United States Coast Guard, keeping visiting yachts at a safe distance from the racing boats. The Navy also arranged to tow the various contenders each day from their anchorage to the course, returning them after the races.

Over this course, on the broad Pacific, in a sea moderated by the bulk of Santa Catalina Island twenty miles seaward, were raced the Eight Metre boats, the Six Metre boats, and the International Star Boats, while on a course sheltered from the open sea by the San Pedro Breakwater a two-mile triangle was laid off for the Monotype races.

The International fourteen-foot Dinghy was abandoned in favor of a small V-bottom Catboat locally known as the Snowbird Class. This is now designated as the Olympic Monotype Class. This boat has long been raced in California waters and found ideally adapted for the Monotype races. Due to the force of the trade winds in Los Angeles Harbor it was decided to race the Monotypes in the softer morning breezes. As it turned out there was virtually no wind at all on several of the mornings, necessitating the races being sailed in the afternoon under wind conditions that were very heavy for boats of this class. This change of programme really averaged up the sailing conditions of the Monotypes, proving the mettle of the skippers under varying circumstances. It is a credit to the sailors as well as to the boats that there were no swampings or accidents to mar the series.

In the larger classes the entry list included three countries in the Six Metre series and two in the Eight. The competition between these contestants was spirited, and all races were sailed with great skill and enthusiasm. The Monotype class was won by France, the Six Metre event by Sweden, and the Star and Eight Metre events by the United States.

The Star Boats represented eight nations, each eager and able to put up a hard battle for the medals. The boats from Holland, France, Sweden, and Great Britain had come long distances, and they received a well-earned ovation from spectators and contestants alike at the conclusion of each race. In several cases Star Boat skippers were also sailing in the Monotype class, so that a double responsibility was upon their shoulders. It was this class that gave the greatest evidence of the determination of skippers and crew to fight for the privilege of seeing their colors atop the Peristyle. Every trick and maneuver known to sailboat racing was used to advance the point score, and all in all the competitions were outstanding in keen and sportsmanlike rivalry.

Dates of Competitions

August 5 to 12, 1932

Maximum Number of Entrants Each Category 1 Yacht per Nation with a Crew and Number of Substitutes as below.

Events

- (a) Yacht of International 8 Metre Class, sailed by 6 Amateurs maximum (maximum number of substitutes 6).
- (b) Yacht of International 6 Metre Class, sailed by 5 Amateurs maximum (maximum number of substitutes 5).
- (c) Yacht of International Star Class, sailed by 2 Amateurs maximum (maximum number of substitutes 2).
- (d) Olympic Monotype Class, sailed by 1 Amateur alone (1 substitute).

The Olympic Monotype Race was held in boats supplied by the Organizing Committee. The choice of boats was decided by draw.

Entrants and Participants

Out of 71 original entries, representing 11 countries, 54 contestants competed in the 4 events.

Note: The winner in the Yachting competition was decided on the point system. A yacht was given one point for finishing and one point for each boat it defeated. The number of defeated yachts was figured on the number starting in any one race. A yacht that started and did not finish did not receive a point for starting, but was counted as a defeated yacht in awarding points to the other yachts. In case of a tie after all races were sailed, provision was made for an extra race between the two competitors tied. Where only one yacht was entered, it was necessary for her to sail over and properly complete the course in order to be awarded a place.

SWIMMING

THE Swimming events of the Games of the Xth Olympiad provided many of the most thrilling performances of the competitions. Contested in a magnificent new pool, approved as ideal by the International Swimming Federation, the events drew capacity audiences and Olympic records were shattered in practically every event. The 100 Metre Back Stroke for men was the only previous Olympic mark not surpassed.

Without doubt the performance of the swimmers from Japan was the outstanding feature of the competition for men. Japanese entrants won every race but one and their performance was remarkable for the high standing attained by all members of the team. With three swimmers eligible for each event, only one Japanese entrant failed to reach the final and thus finish in the first six.

In the 100 Metre Free-style the Japanese order of finish was 1, 2, and 5; in the 100 Metre Back Stroke it was 1, 2, and 3; in the 200 Metre Breast Stroke it was 1, 2, and 6; in the 400 Metre Free-style it was 3, 4, and 5; and in the 1500 Metre Free-style it was 1 and 2, with the third entrant not qualifying for the Final although in the Semi-final heat he swam faster than the sixth placed finalist. In the Relay the Japanese team finished first.

CROWDED STANDS DURING COMPETITIONS
OLYMPIC STADIUM IN THE BACKGROUND

The only other first place in the men's events was won by the United States, and in this case, the 400 Metres, Crabbe, United States, and Taris, France, finished so close that the judges had difficulty in naming the winner.

The United States was outstanding in the Diving events for both men and women, capturing the first three places in the two events for men and the first three places in the two events for women, thereby establishing their superiority in the Diving as completely as the Japanese men did in the Swimming races.

In the Women's races the Americans won four of the five events, Clare Dennis of Australia capturing the only first that did not go to the United States. The performance of the American women very closely approximated that of the Japanese men, as in only one race did they fail to qualify all three entrants for the Finals. It should be noted, however, that they would have failed to qualify one of their swimmers in the Breast Stroke Finals except for the fact that permission was given to start seven swimmers instead of the customary six.

Australian girls did very well with one first place and one second, while Holland took two second places. Other places were divided among several nations.

A VAST AUDIENCE WATCHES A FREE-STYLE RACE

It is of interest to note the manner in which previous Olympic marks were broken. Two Japanese swimmers broke the 100 Metre Free-style record but the real shattering of marks started with the 200 M. Breast Stroke. In this race the best previous Olympic mark was broken nine times, by swimmers from Japan, the Philippines, and Germany.

The 400 Metre Free-style record was broken oftener by more different individuals than any other record in the Games. Three Japanese swimmers, two Americans, two Australians, and a Frenchman took turns in lowering this mark, several of them on three different occasions, with the result that the existing Olympic record was broken eighteen different times, in itself a record and a very remarkable one.

GROTESQUE ACTION AT THE START OF A HEAT IN THE 100 METRE FREE-STYLE FOR WOMEN

Two Japanese, two Americans, and an Australian took turns in lowering the 1500 Metre mark and in the 800 Metre Relay the three first teams to finish all broke the existing record, the winning Japanese team lowering it by the startling margin of 38 seconds, or almost ten seconds per man.

Defending champions in the Swimming events were scarce. Of those who did return, to attempt a repetition of their victories of 1928, only one was successful. This does not refer to team events, where the same countries usually participate with different individuals on their teams, but even in the team events the defending champions had trouble. Germany, which had defeated Hungary for the Water Polo title in 1928, lost to Hungary in 1932. In the 4 x 200 Metre Relay for men, the United States, which had won in 1928 by defeating Japan, saw the situation reversed in 1932. The American women alone succeeded in retaining the team championship they had won in the 4 x 100 Metre Relay at Amsterdam in 1928. One member of this team, Eleanor Garatti Saville, swam both in 1928 and in 1932.

The successful defending champion was Yoshiyuki Tsuruta of Japan, in the 200 Metre Breast Stroke. Strangely enough, three of the first six placed in the Final at Los Angeles, namely, Tsuruta of Japan, first, Teofilo Yldefonzo of the Philippines, third, and Erwin Sietas of Germany, fourth.

The only other defending champion to participate was Maria Johanna Philipsen-Braun of Holland, who won her preliminary heat in the 100 Metre Back Stroke, but was taken ill and was unable to compete in the Final.

In the 100 Metre Free-style, Stephen Bárány of Hungary, who placed second in 1928, reached the Semi-final at Los Angeles. In the 100 Metre Back Stroke, Toshio Irie of Japan, who was fourth at Amsterdam, won second place.

SWIMMING STADIUM

In the 400 Metre Free-style, Clarence Crabbe of the United States, who placed fourth at Amsterdam, won the championship, and Andrew Charlton of Australia, winner of second place at Amsterdam, placed sixth, although he swam 5 seconds faster than he did in 1928. Crabbe, who won third place in the 1500 Metres in 1928, finished fifth in the same event at Los Angeles. In the Diving events, Galitzen of the United States, second in the Springboard Diving and third in the High Diving at Amsterdam, took first and second places in these same two events at Los Angeles.

Among the women contestants, only two who finished in the first six in any races at Amsterdam were able to place again at Los Angeles. These were Joyce Cooper of Great Britain, third in the 100 Metre Back Stroke in 1928 and sixth in the same event at Los Angeles, and Else Jacobsen of Denmark, fourth in the 200 Metres Breast Stroke in 1928 and third in the same event at Los Angeles.

In the Diving events, Georgia Coleman of the United States, third in the Springboard and second in the High Diving at Amsterdam, won the Springboard Diving and was again second in High Diving at Los Angeles. Dorothy Poynton of the United States, second in Springboard Diving at Amsterdam, won the High Diving Championship at Los Angeles. Ingeborg Maria Sjöquist of Sweden, third in High Diving in 1928, was fourth in the same event in 1932.

THE WINNERS—DOROTHY POYNTON, GEORGIA COLEMAN, AND MARION DALE ROPER, UNITED STATES

GYMNASTICS

THE Gymnastic competition of the Games of the Xth Olympiad brought together a talented and well matched group of contestants. Teams from Italy, Finland, Hungary, Japan, and the United States participated, as did individuals from Switzerland and Mexico.

For the first time in the history of the Olympic Games, individual competition was held in all apparatus events, and also in Tumbling, Rope Climbing, and

JUDGES WORKING ON THE SCORES

SOKOLS PERFORM IN THE DEMONSTRATION

Horizontal Bar, Parallel Bars, Pommel Horse, Rings, and Vaulting Horse proved to be very popular with contestants and officials.

In such special events as Rope Climbing and Tumbling, the visiting countries were not represented by specialists. The United States contestants in these events were of unusually high calibre and outclassed the few European gymnasts who entered, the latter being really all-round men who participated in these specialties largely for the experience.

One week before the start of competition, all members of the International Gymnastic Federation, officials, and one leading gymnast from each country gathered at a meeting for a demonstration of the compulsory team exercises on each apparatus. Any differences in the interpretation of the exercises were taken up at this time and settled to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Italy, Finland, Hungary, and the United States entered full teams of experienced gymnasts, and the team and individual competition found these countries outstanding. Japan and Mexico, newcomers in this sport in the Olympic Games, made astonishingly fine showings considering their lack of experience, and will no doubt rate much higher in the final standings at future Games.

Italy, with Romeo Neri, who proved himself without question the outstanding gymnast, and a splendid group of other performers, was the leading country in both individual and team competition. The United States showed the steady improvement that has resulted from years of Olympic participation, by capturing second place in the team championship and performing well in all the apparatus work. Pelle of Hungary and Savolainen of Finland were outstanding in the competitions and only overshadowed by the fine performance of the Italian champion.

One of the most unusual events of the Games was the demonstration of Gymnastics held in the Stadium on the evening of August 10. A large number of spectators watched the work of the men and women athletes demonstrating varieties of gymnastic activity. Local groups composed of Czecho-Slav and Jugo-Slav Sokols, members of the Turnverein Germania, and Mexican and Japanese gymnasts, all took the field in turn and fascinated the audience by the perfection of their performances. The Sokols went through typical exercises to music, the Turnverein staged individual and group exercises, the Mexicans allegorical exercises and dances, with their performers beautifully costumed as Montezuma's warriors, and the Japanese gave demonstrations of their native athletic activities including fencing with bamboo sticks and jiu-jitsu wrestling. Approximately one thousand athletes participated in this demonstration.

All competitions were held in Olympic Stadium.

Individual Events

Maximum Number of Entrants 3 per Nation for Each Event (Without Substitutes)

Team Events

One Team of 5 from Each Country, who participate in all events.

In the final calculation of points, the scores of the 4 best competitors are considered. The score of the gymnast receiving the fewest points does not figure in the team competition, but his score counts in the Individual All-round classification.

The gymnastic team contests comprise a single competition at the different apparatuses, one voluntary exercise and one compulsory exercise, and on the long horse, two voluntary exercises and two compulsory exercises, which are scored as follows:

- (a) By Teams.
- (b) Individual All-round classification through the scores made at each apparatus and at the long horse.
- (c) Individual classification for the preliminary free-handed exercise.

Entrants and Participants

Out of 51 original entries, representing 7 countries, 46 contestants competed in the Gymnastic events.

BOXING

THE Xth Olympiad Boxing competitions drew a total of almost one hundred entrants, from eighteen different countries. An idea of the wide diversity of talent in this sport can be gathered from the fact that twelve different nations were represented among the winners of first, second, and third prizes in the eight weight categories.

All the Boxing competitions were held in the Olympic Auditorium. A large number of spectators attended regularly and greeted the contestants enthusiastically. There were no disputes of consequence over decisions and the spirit of good sportsmanship prevailed. This was true despite the narrow margin of superiority in the majority of the contests.

In Boxing, as in several other sports on the programme, the spectators found some difficulty in adjusting their viewpoint to the special code of rules used in the Olympic Games. This was particularly true in respect to the Olympic rule which does not permit of a draw decision, and naturally, in many cases, the judges appeared to be splitting hairs in order to name a winner. The Olympic innovation of having the referee in the ring was very satisfactory and helpful to the audiences.

In victories, South Africa, Argentine, and the United States each won two championships, and Canada and Hungary each took one title. Although Germany won no championships, three Germans reached the Finals, and Italy likewise had two finalists while Argentine, Sweden, and Mexico each had one.

The United States took three third places, South Africa, Sweden, Philippines, Finland, and Denmark each capturing one.

The excitement on the night of the Finals was intense, as Germany and Argentine each had three representatives in the final bouts, and the United States, Italy, and South Africa each had two. While the throng which packed the Auditorium was delighted by the two American victories, the performance of the athletes of the other countries was greeted with equal enthusiasm.

SOME OF THE ROWING CONTESTANTS AND OFFICIALS PHOTOGRAPHED DURING THE TRAINING PERIOD

ROWING

THE Rowing events of the Games of the Xth Olympiad were staged on the specially constructed Olympic course at the Marine Stadium in Long Beach. Here a two thousand metre stretch of quiet sea water was lined with sloping sandy shores, on which thousands of spectators could sit and enjoy the competition as the oarsmen swept by, only a few yards distant.

The Rowing contests attracted sufficient entries in each event to provide the finest kind of competition. The width of the course, permitting four crews to race abreast, eliminated unnecessary heats, with the result that the oarsmen entered the Finals at the peak of their form.

With victories in the Double Sculls, the Two Oar with Coxswain, and the Eights, the United States won a major portion of the victories, while Great Britain, with victories in the Two Oar without Coxswain and the Four without Coxswain, took home two championships. The other countries winning were Australia in the Single Sculls and Germany in the Four with Coxswain.

In the Single Sculls event Robert Pearce of Australia, winner of the Olympic title in 1928, defended his championship and won again without apparent difficulty. Powerful in physique and a master of rowing form, Pearce dominated the event and was never headed. The greatest disappointment of the Rowing competition was the illness of Herbert Buhtz, the young German sculler, which prevented him from participating in his favorite event, the Single Sculls.

Although all the competition was spirited, the Eight Oar championship, the climax of the regatta, unquestionably was the high light in popular interest, bringing together as it did the great crews representing Italy, Canada, Great Britain, and the United States. Italy and the United States won their heats by narrow margins in splendid time and were generally considered the favorites to win, although the British and Canadian crews had shown remarkable form.

AUSTRALIAN AND URUGUAYAN OARSMEN TALK IT OVER

The prospect of a Titanic contest between these four fine crews attracted an immense throng on the final day and the race in every way came up to expectations. The Italian crew, rowing a very high stroke, took the lead at the start, with the other crews following closely, but as the race progressed the American crew gradually made up distance lost at the start and won by the margin of a few feet.

The finish was so close that only those exactly on the line knew which crew was victorious, and the Canadian and British Eights were so close that no open water at any time showed between the four shells, the total difference between the four crews being less than a length. It furnished a magnificent climax to a great regatta.

A fine feature of the Rowing competition was the manner in which all contests were held exactly on schedule time.

THE WINNERS CELEBRATE BY GIVING THEIR COXSWAIN A DUCKING

EQUESTRIAN SPORTS

PARTICIPATION in the Equestrian competition in the Games of the Xth Olympiad presented difficulties to the majority of the Olympic nations by reason of the great distances to Los Angeles. In addition to the expense involved, there was presented the hazard of travel by sea or land — in some cases both — to the valuable mounts. As it turned out, however, the horses all stood the trip exceedingly well and their participation was not noticeably affected by their long journeys.

Six nations in all were represented in the Equestrian competition, the United States and Sweden each entering full teams of three in each of the three events. Mexico also participated in three events but not with a full team. Japan entered in two events and France and Holland each in one. There were not less than four countries or ten horses entered in any of the competitions in this sport.

The Riviera Country Club was the equestrian center during the Games. All foreign horses were comfortably stabled there in fireproof concrete stalls. A conveniently located railroad siding permitted the horses to be unloaded within a half-mile of their stables, and thus transshipment by truck was avoided. The Organizing Committee furnished transportation for baggage from the detraining point to the stables, and from the latter back to the entraining point, located at the same siding.

In the grounds of the Riviera Country Club were provided Dressage arenas and a practice jumping field fitted with obstacles.

The Dressage Competition was staged on a polo field of the Club, under model conditions and before a very large number of appreciative and considerate spectators. Taine, ridden by Commandant Lesage of France, won the individual competition with a brilliant performance, while the other French entries demonstrated their fitness to be his teammates by capturing the team title.

The Three Day event started with the Training Test, held in the Dressage arena at the Club. The performances were generally excellent.

The Endurance Test, on the second day, took the competitors over a 22½-mile course, including fifty obstacles.

The fact that there was no steeplechase course in Los Angeles or its vicinity necessitated the construction of such a course for the Endurance Test. All Equestrian Federations were duly notified that a steeplechase course would have to be built conforming to the specifications of the National Hunt and Steeplechase Association. The Riviera grounds, though limited in area, offered the only available place in the entire Los Angeles district where a steeplechase course could be built and tied in with the preceding and succeeding phases of the Endurance Test. The limited area necessitated shorter turns than those ordinarily found on a race course, and some portions of the track were dirt. The unsodded portions were very carefully prepared, however, and the footing was satisfactory.

The undesirable features of the course were largely offset by its location, which permitted the start of the Endurance Test to be within three hundred yards of the stables, thus eliminating the hazardous and inconvenient trucking of horses to the start. The entire course was most carefully flagged and policed; no contestant lost his way or was interfered with in the slightest on his approach to the obstacles.

The cross-country course was located near Inglewood, over ideal terrain and thirty-four typically American fences.

The Jumping Test, on the third day, was held in Olympic Stadium. There were obstacles of height and of width, with short turns, necessitating a good swinging gallop throughout in order to finish without a time penalty. Marcroix, ridden by Lieutenant Pahud de Mortanges of Holland, was returned the winner, with a total penalty score over the three days of 186 points. This same horse and rider won the Three Day Event in the 1928 Olympiad, a feat worthy of note, as no Olympic equine champion has ever before repeated. The team title went to the United States, with Holland in second place.

The Prix des Nations took place in Olympic Stadium in the presence of 100,000 people, certainly the largest, as well as the most sympathetic, attendance ever gathered at such an event in America. The course included eighteen obstacles, requiring twenty jumps, varying in height from 4 feet, 3 inches, to 5 feet, 3 inches, and in spread up to 16 feet, 5 inches. Uranus, ridden by Lieutenant Baron Nishi of Japan, won, with a total penalty score of 8 points. No team title was awarded because no complete team of three horses completed the course.

SHOOTING

THERE had been no Shooting events at the Games of the IXth Olympiad, except in the Modern Pentathlon competition. Shooting was restored to the Olympic programme on condition that all countries abide by the Olympic principles of amateurism in this sport as in all others.

The Shooting competitions at Los Angeles were confined to Automatic Pistol or Revolver shooting at twenty-five metres and Miniature 22-calibre Rifle shooting at fifty metres.

As no regularly appointed officials of the International Federation governing Shooting could be present, it was necessary to have the contests conducted under the supervision of affiliated groups in the United States to whom the necessary authority was delegated by the International Federation.

The Pistol and Revolver event required each contestant to fire three series of six shots at six silhouettes which appeared for a total of eight seconds, one shot to be fired at each of the silhouettes in turn. Twelve of the eighteen contestants in this event made perfect scores of eighteen hits.

On the next round of six shots at the silhouettes, with the time limit reduced to six seconds, one man was eliminated. On the third round the time was reduced to four seconds, or half the original time limit, and six of the remaining eleven contestants still had perfect scores. This number was cut in half when the time limit was reduced to three seconds. In the final shoot-off for first, second, and third places, when only two seconds were allowed, Renzo Morigi of Italy had a perfect score of six hits, winning first place, while Heinrich Hax of Germany, with four hits, took second honors, and Domenico Matteucci of Italy scored three hits for third.

The Rifle event consisted of a total of thirty shots, in six series of five shots each, at a target twenty centimetres in diameter with a bullseye only two centimetres in diameter. Telescopic sights on the rifles were not permitted. A total of twenty-six contestants from nine countries participated in the Rifle contests.

The accuracy of the shooting was outstanding. At the end of the competition, two contestants had each scored 294 out of a possible 300 points, two more had scored 293 each, and four more had scored 292 each. In the final shoot-off, first place went to Rönmark of Sweden, second to Huet of Mexico, and third to Soos-Ruska of Hungary.

DEMONSTRATION OF AMERICAN FOOTBALL—EASTERN TEAM

WESTERN TEAM

DEMONSTRATIONS—AMERICAN FOOTBALL AND LACROSSE

THE Protocol provides that the Olympic Organizing Committee may arrange demonstrations in two Sports not included in the programme of competitions:

- (1) A National Sport of the country in which the Games are held;
- (2) A Sport foreign to the organizing country.

THE FOOTBALL DEMONSTRATION

American Football was decided on as the National Sport to be demonstrated at the Xth Olympiad. It was chosen because it is a game played almost exclusively in the United States, and because it is primarily an amateur sport enjoying its greatest development and interest in the schools and colleges of this country.

The Universities of Yale, Harvard, and Princeton, in the East, and the Universities of California, Stanford, and Southern California, in the West, officially approved the plan of the Committee to organize two Football teams, one representing the Eastern institutions, and the other the Western, to meet at a demonstration game of Football on the evening of August 8.

In order not to interfere in any way with the athletic programme of the institutions involved, only graduating seniors at each university who had completed their football competition were selected for the teams.

The officials for the American Football Demonstration were :

The members of both teams were assembled in the Olympic Village several weeks before the opening of the Games and lived there under the same conditions as all other athletes.

The game was played as nearly as possible under the same conditions as the regulation game of American Intercollegiate Football. The massed Olympic bands and the Olympic Chorus formed a large white block in the seats at one side of the Stadium similar to the "rooting" section which has become a tradition of American Football, and the songs of the institutions represented were played and sung. Between halves the Olympic Band staged a musical marching spectacle on the field, coupled with massed singing by the Chorus.

The game itself was a remarkably fine exhibition of American Football. Individual players were in splendid condition and teamwork was of a calibre hardly to be expected in midsummer from players chosen from different colleges.

Marked offensive superiority was shown by the Western team in the first half, and only the stalwart defensive play of the Easterners, who staved off threatened scores three times, kept the teams on an even basis at half time. The half ended in spectacular fashion when the Eastern team, which had been on the defensive the entire first two periods, suddenly rallied and a long pass from Taylor to Crickard was completed just as the gun sounded, only a spectacular tackle by Rintala of the Western team preventing a touchdown for the East.

The second half of the game progressed without serious threat by either team until, early in the fourth quarter, the Eastern team secured the ball in Western territory and Mays attempted a goal from the field. The kick was short and bounced around on the Western 10-yard line where two of the defensive players touched it momentarily, making it a free ball. Burton Strange, of the Eastern team, swooped down on the ball, caught it on the bounce, and carried it across the goal line for the first touchdown of the contest. Goal was missed, leaving the score, East 6, West 0.

With only a few minutes left to play, the Western team pulled itself together, and headed by Gaius Shaver, one of the country's greatest football players, commenced a terrific attack on the Eastern line. Taking the ball on their own 35-yard line, with Shaver carrying the ball on practically every play, the Westerners plunged straight down the field, climaxing their drive with a dashing run by Shaver which carried the ball from the East's 23-yard line to the 4-yard mark, where he was forced out of bounds.

Here the East staged another spectacular stand, their fourth of the game inside the 5-yard line. Shaver made two yards on the first play and approached within a foot of the goal line on the second. Shaver's third plunge made a bare six inches and the great crowd had vision of another successful stand by the East, but on the fourth play Shaver dived head first across the line for a touchdown and Kirwan kicked the goal that won the game by the score of West 7, East 6.

It was a spectacular contest with fine individual and team play, a wide variety of running plays, and a reasonably successful forward passing attack. It could hardly have been a better demonstration of the American game.

The foreign athletes and press representatives were interested in the game but bewildered by its complexity. The consensus of foreign opinion was that American Football is a hard, bruising physical combat with a little too much emphasis on complicated technique. Most of the visitors commented chiefly on the great amount of time out and the numerous substitutions.

The lineups for the American Football Demonstration were:

	West (7)	East (6)
Right End	Arbelbide	Barres
Right Tackle	Ehrhorn	Hall
Right Guard	Hulen	Rotan
Center	Williamson	Betner
Quarterback	Watkins	White
Right Half	Clark	Taylor
Fullback	Shaver	Schereschewsky

The substitutions for the West were: Hand for Heiser, Neil for Stone, Rintala for Watkins, Dawson for Hulen, Hammack for Clark, Kirwan for Watkins, DiResta for Arbelbide, Hand for Hall, and Medanich for Williamson.

The substitutions for the East were: Gahagan for Bouscaren, Todd for Taylor, Crickard for Mays, Strange for Myerson, Yeckley for Hall, Wister for Barres, Zundel for Betner, Flygare for Wister, Madden for Schereschewsky, Mays for Crickard, Sandburg for White.

	Score by Quarters
East	0	0	0	6	6

Touchdowns scored: Strange (East), Shaver (West). Goal after touchdown: Kirwan (West).

Field officials for the Football Demonstration were:

Ed Cochran, Umpire	Bruce Kirkpatrick, Head Linesman

THE LACROSSE DEMONSTRATION

Lacrosse was chosen as the demonstration of a sport foreign to the organizing country. Although Lacrosse is played in the Eastern United States, it is little known to the western section in which the Games were held. The Committee wished to take advantage of the opportunity to demonstrate this interesting game to the people of the community as well as to the many foreign visitors unfamiliar with it. Mr. Charles L. Ornstein and Mr. Lewis Jay Korn, representing the American Lacrosse Associations, undertook the task of organizing the demonstration. The Lacrosse Team of Johns Hopkins University was chosen to represent the United States and an all-star team was chosen to represent Canada.

The officials for the Lacrosse Demonstration were:

The teams were assembled in the Olympic Village and lived there under the same conditions as all other athletes.

Three games of Lacrosse were played, on the afternoons of August 7, 9, and 12, respectively. The games were all well contested, any individual superiority possessed by the Canadians being offset by the cohesion of the American squad, who had played together as a team throughout the season. The Americans captured the opening contest, which was played before approximately 75,000 spectators on Sunday, the day of the historic Marathon. The score of the first game was 5 to 3.

Canada's aggressive players reversed the decision in the second game, which was the most fiercely contested of the series. The score was tied at 4 all just a moment before the end of the contest, when, with a supreme effort, Canada shot the deciding goal.

The deciding game of the series was played before a large audience. The second half had to be shortened to fifteen minutes in order to permit the Canadian team to catch their home steamer, which was held more than an hour after sailing time, for their accommodation. The Americans showed notable skill and teamwork and were victorious 7 to 4, thus winning the series two games to one, with a total score of 16 goals to 12.

All participants in the Football and Lacrosse Demonstrations were awarded diplomas and commemorative medals.

WHERE OLYMPIC ART COMPETITIONS AND EXHIBITION WERE HELD

ART COMPETITIONS AND EXHIBITION

DURING the era of the modern Olympiads it has been natural for the Sports phases of the Games to become emphasized in the public mind. However, in the revival of the modern Games the founders of the new movement instituted competitions in the Arts alongside of the Sports, just as they were associated in the ancient Grecian festivals. It has been more difficult to forward the Art competitions, but the Olympic organizations have not failed to recognize their responsibility and to give full weight to the value of preserving and encouraging the cultural side of the Games.

With this responsibility in mind, the Organizing Committee gave early attention to the organization of the Art Competitions, this item being the first definitely provided for in the budget, almost three years before the celebration of the Games. The next step was the appointment of General Charles H. Sherrill, member of the International Olympic Committee for the United States and a recognized leader in the advancement of the Olympic Arts, as chairman of the special committee to undertake the organization of this important activity of the Games of the Xth Olympiad. In formulating plans, it was decided to follow the example of previous Olympiads and include an Exhibition of Art in connection with the prescribed Art Competitions.

The American Federation of Arts in Washington was consulted by General Sherrill, and Mr. Homer Saint-Gaudens, Director of the Art Department of the Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh, was requested to make an estimate of the probable cost of the Art Competitions and Exhibition. Mr. Saint-Gaudens had for a number of years assembled international exhibitions of paintings at the Carnegie Institute, and was therefore especially competent to make such an estimate. The amount he named was approved by the Organizing Committee and was placed in the hands of the American Federation of Arts, this national organization having consented to assume the responsibility.

GENERAL CHARLES H. SHERRILL
CHAIRMAN OF FINE ARTS COMMITTEE

The work of assembling the American exhibits was assigned to Miss Leila Mechlin, Secretary of the American Federation of Arts, and the organizing of the European exhibits was entrusted to Mr. Guillaume Lerolle, the foreign representative of the Carnegie Institute. The Olympic Committees of the various European nations in every instance assumed the responsibility of assembling their own exhibits, but a certain allowance was made to each for the cost of transportation, insurance, and other expenses, and arrangements for forwarding and returning the exhibits were made by or through Mr. Lerolle.

According to the original agreement, the American Federation of Arts was to be responsible solely for the American Section and for the general supervision of the Exhibit, but owing to the appointment of General Sherrill as Ambassador to Turkey early in 1932, and his immediate departure for his post, the entire management of the Competitions and Exhibition was delegated to Miss Mechlin, representing the American Federation of Arts.

The American Section was assembled chiefly through invitation, although all artists were invited to submit works to juries which met in New York and Los Angeles respectively. The American Fine Arts Committee appointed by General Sherrill, which served as a consulting body, consisted of the following:

- WILLIAM ALANSON BRYAN, Director, Los Angeles Museum
- A. CONGER GOODYEAR, Chairman, Committee of the Museum of Modern Art, New York City
- ROBERT B. HARSHE, Director, The Art Institute of Chicago
- FREDERICK P. KEPPEL, President, Carnegie Corporation of New York City
- LEILA MECHLIN, Secretary, American Federation of Arts, Washington, D. C.
- EVERETT V. MEEKS, Dean, Yale University School of Fine Arts, New Haven, Connecticut
- C. POWELL MINNIGERODE, Director, Corcoran Gallery of Art, Washington, D. C.

HOMER SAINT-GAUDENS, Director, Department of Fine Arts, Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

MYRON C. TAYLOR, Trustee, Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York City

FREDERIC ALLEN WHITING, President, American Federation of Arts, Washington, D. C.

For the most part the foreign countries forwarded their exhibits by steamship via the Panama Canal direct to Los Angeles. Through special arrangement with the United States Customs Bureau, all exhibits were entered either free of duty or in bond, and unpacked and repacked under customs supervision in the Los Angeles Museum, where the exhibits were shown.

In accordance with a general ruling covering transportation, all exhibits shown in an International Exhibition are sent by prepaid freight and returned by the carriers freight free. The foreign committees insured their respective exhibits in transit, but all exhibits were insured by the American Federation of Arts for the Organizing Committee from the time of arrival in Los Angeles until re-delivery, in the case of foreign exhibits, to the shippers for return, and in the case of the American exhibits, to the artists, owners, or lenders. The total amount of insurance placed was approximately $400,000.00.

The first European exhibits arrived in Los Angeles on May 15, 1932, and the last to be received arrived shortly after July 1. The exhibition opened simultaneously with the Games, on July 30, but continued until the end of August. The last exhibits were returned from Los Angeles October 1.

The Exhibition was held in the Los Angeles Museum of History, Science and Art, which stands in Exposition Park (Olympic Park), opposite and at no great distance from Olympic Stadium. It occupied the foyer of the Museum, the main rotunda and adjacent halls, the small rotunda, and fifteen galleries.

There were in all over 1100 exhibits, by artists of 31 nations. The countries represented were:

Argentina, Austria, Belgium, Bulgaria, Canada, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, France, Germany, Great Britain, Guatemala, Holland, Hungary, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Latvia, Luxembourg, Mexico, Norway, Peru, Poland, Roumania, Salvador,

THERE WERE OVER ELEVEN HUNDRED EXHIBITS

GROUP OF MEMBERS OF ART COMPETITIONS JURY

Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, Uruguay, Venezuela, and the United States.

The exhibits, consisting of paintings in oil and in water color, drawings, prints, architectural designs, models, sculpture in the round and in relief, medals, and a few examples of the decorative arts, glass, silver, and textiles, were so far as possible installed according to the nations from which they came. Special galleries were assigned to France, Great Britain, Sweden, Germany, Holland and the United States. Japan and South and Central American countries shared a gallery. Works by representatives of Latvia, Canada, Roumania, Italy, Luxembourg, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Poland, Mexico, Belgium, Austria, Hungary and Switzerland, were grouped in one large well-lighted gallery.

The larger pieces of sculpture were placed in the main rotunda regardless of the nationality of the artists. In the foyer was set forth a comprehensive and retrospective collection of works by Dr. R. Tait McKenzie. The prints, which were segregated, occupied two galleries, the water colors and drawings two galleries, the architectural works one very large gallery one hundred and fifty feet long with double screens running through the center, and the decorative textiles occupied one gallery.

To be entered for honors in the competitions, works were required to be (a) by living artists, (b) produced during the IXth Olympiad, that is, since January 1, 1928, (c) related to Sport, and (d) approved by the National Olympic Committee of the nation under which the artist claimed citizenship. Works not conforming to these conditions were entered hors concours as amplifying exhibits, and were invited by the Chairman of the Fine Arts Committee, General Sherrill, or, under his authorization, by Miss Mechlin, for the American Section, and by Mr. Lerolle for European countries not otherwise represented. A total of 540 contestants represented 24 countries in the competitions.

The International Juries of Award met at the Museum the week before the official opening and their decisions were announced immediately thereafter. These Juries were constituted as follows:

The medals of award were distributed while the Exhibition was in progress, through the General Director of Art and the heads of the Olympic Committees. The Diplomas were issued later and were sent directly to the Olympic Committee of each country for distribution. Only those receiving first, second, and third awards received medals and diplomas, diplomas only being issued to those receiving honorable mention.

In addition to the competitions in Painting, Sculpture, Architecture and the Graphic Arts, there were competitions in Literature and Music. Judges for these competitions were appointed by General Sherrill, but the direction of the competitions was left in the hands of the General Director of Art. The decisions were rendered and the awards announced during the period of the Games.

The Juries for the Literature and Music competitions were as follows:

"RODEO"

All the awards in the Art Competitions were ceremoniously announced in Olympic Stadium in precisely the same manner as were the winners in the Sports Competitions, and an announcement of the Exhibition was printed on all programmes for the Games.

Two hundred posters, using as an illustration Hunt Diederich's "Polo Player," were issued by the Art Committee and placed in libraries, branch libraries, universities, schools, hotels and other places where people congregated, throughout the city of Los Angeles.

The attendance at the Exhibition was by actual count over 384,000. This attendance would have been greatly augmented had it been possible to keep the Museum open in the afternoons after the conclusion of the Games, and on Sunday mornings.

On the Thursday preceding the official opening of the Games and of the Exhibition, a private view was held for the heads of the National and International Olympic Committees, the Organizing Committee, and the Consuls of the various nations represented.

It should be noted that the Los Angeles Museum of History, Science and Art not only hospitably gave space to the Exhibition but placed members of its staff at the disposal of the General Director, all of whom rendered cheerful and valuable co-operation.

An illustrated catalogue of approximately a hundred pages was printed, in an edition of six thousand, and complimentary copies sent to each exhibitor, to the head of every Olympic Committee, National and International, and to those making loans and to museums, etc. This catalogue was also sold at the Exhibition.

The following was the distribution of awards by Nations in the Art Competitions and Exhibition :

VICTORY CEREMONIES

AT PREVIOUS celebrations of the Games it had been customary to hold the flag-raising ceremony in the main stadium at the conclusion of each Final event, regardless of where the event might have been contested and without the winning athletes necessarily being present at the ceremony. All prize awards had been postponed until the Closing Ceremony, when they were given to the victors.

This plan had two serious objections. The absence of the winning athlete at the flag ceremony deprived it of color and personality, and by the time of the Closing Ceremony many of the competitors had departed and their medals had to be entrusted to officials of their country for delivery.

It seemed quite clear that it would be advantageous to combine the two ceremonies into one. A plan was therefore worked out, with the approval of the International Olympic Committee, by which the presentation of the medals to the victorious athletes and the flag-raising ceremony were merged in one formal event.

After each event held in Olympic Stadium, the winners of the first three places were brought to a pedestal facing the Official Tribune, the victor in the center on a platform raised slightly higher than the second and third place winners, who occupied positions at his side corresponding exactly to the flag locations above the scoreboard.

All present were requested to rise and face the Victory flags, and as soon as all was quiet the announcement, "Cérémonie Olympique Protocolaire—Olympic Victory Ceremony," was made, and the official results of the event given.

After the announcement the band played the national anthem of the country of the winner, the flags of the countries winning first, second and third places were raised simultaneously, and the results were displayed on the face of the scoreboard. At the close of the national anthem, the President of the International Olympic Committee, accompanied by two others of his own choosing, made the actual presentation of the medals to the victors.

In the case of events held outside Olympic Stadium, the Victory award ceremonies were held in the main Stadium on the day following the completion of the event, the awards taking place just previous to the starting of the afternoon programme. In certain cases, such as Swimming, Rowing, Shooting, and Equestrian Sports, which came late in the second week of the Games, the awards in all events were made during the Closing Ceremony.

This procedure necessitated a rather complicated system of checking results and medals in order that no mistakes should be made. A special form was developed which was printed in triplicate, and when the Medal Department was officially notified of the results of an event, the names of the winners of the first three places were immediately filled in. One copy was attached to a gold, silver, or bronze medal, depending upon the place won, and one copy was retained by the Medal Department for its records. The third copy of the form was used in the case of winners of events outside the Olympic Stadium and was turned over to the manager of the team whose athlete was victorious, through the Sports Technical Department at the Olympic Village. This form notified the athlete to appear at Olympic Stadium the following day at a specified hour, to participate in the Victory Ceremony and receive his medal. In any case where the victorious athlete was not present at the Stadium for the Victory Ceremony, his medal was given to the manager of his team, and a notation was entered on the form retained by the Sports Technical Department telling of the disposition made of the medal.

The plan followed was immensely popular with athletes, officials, and public, and proved to be one of the most interesting features of each day's programme. By means of this system of awards, more than ninety per cent of the winners were actually present to receive their awards in Olympic Stadium and the Ceremony impressed itself on both athletes and audience.

THE LAST MARCH OF THE FLAGS

THE CLOSING CEREMONY

AN UNPRECEDENTED audience numbering nearly a hundred thousand persons swarmed into Olympic Stadium on the afternoon of Sunday, August 14, drawn by the irresistible attraction of the equestrian "Prix des Nations" Jumping event, the completion of awards of Victory medals, and, last but not least, the Closing Ceremony of the Games.

Spellbound, they witnessed the superb, rhythmic grace of horse and rider in the exhibition of Dressage; breathlessly, they leaned forward in their seats as the world's finest military horsemen guided their spirited mounts over the sportiest course of jumps Olympic horses had ever faced. The tension over, the multitude voiced approval as bespangled horsemen, tanned sailors, stalwart oarsmen, Herculean boxers, graceful fencers, muscular swimmers and divers — the last of the Olympic champions of 1932 — received their medals in the colorful Victory Ceremonies.

It was a long, eventful afternoon. The sun, whose benign smile had not

The last competition was over . . . the last record broken . . . the last triumphant victor rewarded . . . the last Nation honored by the raising of its flag to the Victory mast and by the respectful homage of the vast audience as its anthem filled the air. All good things must end and the Games of the Xth Olympiad were swiftly drawing to a close.

No one rose to go. The audience silently awaited the ceremony which would bring to an end this glorious experience.

Music broke the silence. The Olympic Band was playing. It was a stirring march reminiscent of the Parade of Nations on the Opening Day. Automatically all eyes turned again to the huge tunnel from which, two short weeks previously, had emerged the flower of the youth of forty nations come to celebrate the Games of the Xth Olympiad on the shores of the Pacific.

And, as the first martial notes sounded on the late afternoon air, there marched from the tunnel the same white-clad figure that had appeared on the Opening Day, proudly bearing the banner of Greece, Mother of the Olympic Games. Then, in order, came the flags and banners of the participating nations exactly as on the Opening Day.

But no. There is a difference. The Stadium, the music, the flags, the banners, all were there — the Nations on parade — but the pulsating life-blood of the Games, the athletes, was gone.

AFTER FLYING OVER THE FIELD OF GLORIOUS COMPETITIONS FOR SIXTEEN DAYS, THE OFFICIAL FLAG OF THE GAMES OF THE XTH OLYMPIAD IS LOWERED

AS THE OLYMPIC CHORUS SINGS "ALOHA—FAREWELL TO THEE," THE FLAGS OF THE NATIONS DISAPPEAR INTO THE DEEPENING SHADOWS OF THE STADIUM

FOLLOWED BY THE BANNERS, AND FINALLY BY THE OLYMPIC FLAG

THE FLAME OF THE TORCH DISAPPEARS AND THE GAMES OF THE XTH OLYMPIAD PASS INTO HISTORY

THE MARCH-OUT OF THE FLAGS

Gone were the ruddy cheeked, long-striding, colorfully garbed youths who had marched so hopefully down the sun-swept straightaway two weeks before. And gone the roaring cheers that greeted them.

Who knows what ghostly figures of past Olympic greatness may have swung unseen in shadowy files behind the lonely flag of Greece? Corœbus, the first Olympic victor, Alcibiades, the patriot, Diagoras and his three sons, all victors in the Games, Cimon the unbeaten charioteer with his great team which was buried with him, Milo of Croton, greatest of wrestlers, Pheidippides, who gasped the story of Grecian triumph on the Plains of Marathon with his dying breath, or Spiridion Loues, victor of the first Marathon of modern times. Who knows?

The ghostly procession swung silently, relentlessly, around the vast oval, treading the very footprints of the Opening Day . . . a pageant of purposeful Olympic participation. Athletes may come and athletes may go — but the Games go on forever.

A thousand memories flash by as the lonely flag bearers swing into position facing the Tribune of Honor. The long shadow that covers the field is climbing slowly up the face of the Peristyle. Down in the shadow the President of the International Olympic Committee, Count de Baillet-Latour, is calling upon the Youth of every country to assemble in four years at Berlin, there to celebrate the Games of the XIth Olympiad.

As his words, in sonorous French, are carried to the silent assemblage, the great five-ringed Olympic flag flutters slowly down the pole to be tenderly taken in hand by white-clad guards. High up on the scoreboard, the dying rays of the sun glistening in the brazen throats of their trumpets, a group of musicians sound a fanfare. A distant cannon roars a farewell salute.

Down on the field, shadowy figures in the dusk, two others have joined the President of the International Olympic Committee on the rostrum. The Secretary of the Dutch Olympic Committee, Major G. van Rossem, is presenting the Olympic flag that was entrusted to the City of Amsterdam at the Games of the IXth Olympiad in 1928.

Count de Baillet-Latour thanks him on behalf of the Committee and in turn places it in the care of the Honorable John C. Porter, Mayor of the city of Los Angeles, to be kept until the Games of Berlin, four years hence.

The trumpets high up on the Peristyle are sounding again. The plaintive strains of "Aloha," the sad farewell of the western seas, are tugging at the heart-strings of the assemblage. The flag-bearers on the field move slowly toward the tunnel. The banners, once proudly erect, droop dejectedly.

The great Chorus has taken up the plaintive melody of the Islands —
 “Aloha — Farewell to thee,” —

The audience, deeply touched, seeks emotional relief by joining in — “Farewell to thee.”

Standards and standard bearers, flags and flag bearers, are wending their mournful way from the fast-gathering dusk into the darkness of the tunnel, the great five-ringed Olympic flag bringing up the rear of the procession.

“One fond embrace before we now do part — until we meet again” — the song dies away with a quavering note.

High up on the Peristyle the trumpets are sobbing the poignant melody of “Taps.” Damp eyes swing to the East. On the scoreboard, —

 XI Olympiad, Berlin, 1936*” — with the flags of Greece, the United States, and Germany on the Victory poles, Olympic History and Olympic Prophecy!

As the last plaintive notes of “Taps” fade away in a long-drawn-out sigh, the flame of the Torch dies slowly away into the great bronze bowl.

“May the Olympic Torch Pursue Its Way Through the Ages” — an unseen hand is slowly writing on the scoreboard. The Ghost Parade is gone. The music has ceased. The Olympic Torch is out. Darkness settles over the great structure. Zeus in his Golden chariot, the sun, has disappeared beyond the hills — returned to Mount Olympus. The multitude of saddened spectators sit in silence, gazing with misty eyes at the great bronze bowl whose flame is now a memory.

They tip-toe to the tunnels.

The Games of the Xth Olympiad have passed into history.

FINANCE

THE sources of income for financing the Games of the Xth Olympiad were the State Olympiad Bond issue receipts, income from the sale of tickets of admission, receipts from limited concession privileges, Olympic Village income, bank interest, and the receipts from salvage and sales of equipment following the Games.

Two days after the close of the Games, the Organizing Committee was happy to be able to announce publicly that the funds of the Committee would permit of the retirement of the Olympiad Bonds. This announcement was given wide publicity, and as a consequence the erroneous thought developed in some quarters that there had been a financial profit from the Games.

It must be remembered that the total income from the Games does not have charged against it the cost of any stadium or other facilities used in the Games which existed prior to the organization of the Games and for the cost of which the Games did not have to pay. In the organic provisions for the Olympic Games, it is not possible that they shall ever be a business proposition where the word profit could properly be applied.

If the Games were awarded to a city possessing no facilities whatsoever, and which, consequently, was compelled to provide all of these facilities initially for the Games, it would be impossible, as a practical proposition, to receive an income sufficient to offset the cost even if all of the events of the Games were patronized to the capacity of the facilities. It has always been recognized, therefore, that a city does not accept the award of the Games as a business proposition.

It is recognized, of course, that successful Games bring many benefits to a community, but only of the same general nature and in the same proportion as the world is benefited by a movement such as modern Olympism.

In a practical sense the Olympic city, while there may be a difference between cost and income, finds this difference reconciled in the form of stadiums and other facilities that will continue to serve the community after the Games are over.

Taking full account of the above, it can properly be said that the Games of the Xth Olympiad were a success from a financial standpoint, as well as in all other respects.

From the very beginning all books and records of accounts, receipts, and disbursements, were kept and audited by Price, Waterhouse & Co.

Monthly reports of receipts, and of each and every disbursement, were rendered in detail to the Organizing Committee and to the California Olympiad Commission up to the time of the Games. A complete financial report, embodying copies of the monthly reports, has been filed annually with the Controller of the State of California and made of public record.

Following the Games, the final and all-inclusive audit report was started, and at the time of the preparation of this chronicle the report is complete except for a few accounts still open. When the accounts are finally closed this audit report will be filed with the Organizing Committee and with the California Olympiad Commission, and will be made of public record in the office of the Controller of the State of California.

SALVAGE

In some instances the arrangement for the use of facilities provided for leaving all or part of the installations in place after the Games. In other cases, the privilege of removal of installations was reserved for the Management of the Games.

Immediately following the Games, the Engineering and Construction departments systematically salvaged to the highest bidders such materials as were removable under the arrangements that had been made.

In the case of the Olympic Village, obviously the biggest part of the salvaging task, greater time was consumed in order to effect a methodical and constructive disposition of all equipment and materials.

Because of the careful, precise, and economical formulas established in the design, construction, and equipment of the Village, the record of salvage recovery surpassed reasonable expectations. All salvaging operations and sales of equipment were completed prior to January 1, 1933.

CONCLUSION OF BUSINESS

In the post-Games period, conjointly with salvaging, final audit reports, and the consummation as quickly as possible of all phases of the business operations of the Committee, careful effort was made to preserve suitable exhibits for the Museum of the International Olympic Committee at Lausanne and the Museum in Los Angeles.

Provisions have been made for the preservation of the complete office records of the Organizing Committee for a fixed period of years.

When the work was first started some years ago it became the policy of all Departments to standardize operations wherever possible and to keep a record of same available in the furtherance of the Olympic movement.

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and heart rate reserve (HRR) of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were randomly divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The exercise group performed a 10-week training program consisting of three sessions per week. The control group did not exercise. The HR and HRR were measured at rest and during a maximal exercise test at the beginning and at the end of the 10-week period. The results showed that the exercise group had a significant decrease in HR and HRR at rest and during the maximal exercise test compared to the control group. The control group had no significant change in HR and HRR. The results suggest that a 10-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness of sedentary middle-aged men.

Note—IN THE preparation of this book it has been the intent to tell the story of the Games of the Xth Olympiad in pictures as well as in type. The photographic story of the Games is as complete as it has been possible to make it.

At page 778 is a series of four reproductions of tablets in bronze.

LISTS of personnel of Olympic Committees and other official groups, and of individuals, appearing in this book, are prepared as of the period of the Games of the Xth Olympiad and purposely do not include subsequent changes. All names and information pertaining to these are presented in conformity with material furnished the Organizing Committee.
